PREFACE

Volume 44 contains letters, telegrams, notes and other documents written or dictated in the period from October 1917 to November 1920; it supplements the works by Lenin included in volumes 26-31 of this edition.

The documents relating to this period demonstrate Lenin's many-sided activity in building up the new, Soviet machinery of state and ensuring its smooth running, guiding economic and cultural development, and organising the defence of the country.

In these documents Lenin gives directives for defeating counter-revolutionary revolts, ensuring revolutionary order, and defending the world's first proletarian dictatorship. They show Lenin as the organiser and inspirer of the victories over the interventionists and whiteguards. Lenin's instruction to the Red Guard Staff, his letters to the Petrograd Committee of the R.S.D.L.P.(B.), to the Supreme Military Council, to the People's Commissariat for Naval Affairs, to G. V. Chicherin and M. M. Litvinov, to E. M. Sklyansky, the telegrams to the Revolutionary Military Councils of the Eastern and Southern fronts, to the army commanders, to S. I. Gusev, I. T. Smilga, M. M. Lashevich and G. Y. Sokolnikov, and many other documents, are examples of Lenin's activity in leading the struggle against foreign and domestic counter-revolution and guiding the military activities on the fronts of the Civil War.

Volume 44 publishes a letter of Lenin's to the Central Committee of the R.C.P.(B.) dated June 17, 1919, which, like a number of other documents, shows that he regarded the Central Committee of the Party as the body for collective leadership of the country's defence. Lenin set aside Trotsky's objections to the Central Committee's decision to strengthen the General Headquarters, and wrote that this decision contained "what Trotsky overlooked, namely, that the majority of the C.C. is convinced that ... all is not well at Headquarters, and in seeking a serious improvement, in seeking ways for a radical change it has taken a definite step" (p. 255 of this volume).

In response to Lenin's call, many of the country's industrial cities sent their best Communists and non-Party workers to the decisive fronts of the Civil War. Lenin constantly followed the progress of mobilisation and the training of reserves for the Red Army. In a letter to the Revolutionary Military Council of the Southern Front recommending a group of Ivanovo-Voznesensk Communists Lenin requested that they should be allocated correctly and carefully. "I particularly ask to be informed of the receipt of this letter," he wrote, "and of where and how the comrades are assigned" (p. 302).

Situated as it was in a hostile capitalist encirclement, the Soviet Republic experienced extreme difficulties. The documents in this volume contain much material on Lenin's leadership of the foreign policy of the Soviet state and show his exceptional perspicacity and profound understanding of the alignment of forces in the international arena. It was only thanks to the tremendous efforts of Lenin, in a stubborn struggle of the Party against Trotsky and the oppositional group of "Left Communists" that the peace treaty with Germany was signed at Brest-Litovsk on March 3, 1918. Its conclusion was a striking example of the wisdom and flexibility of Lenin's tactics, and his ability to frame the solely correct policy in an extremely complicated situation. The signing of the Brest peace and the struggle against the "Left Communists" are dealt with in the letter to Major-General S. I. Odintsov on November 15 (28), 1917, the note to Karl Radek on January 14 (27), 1918, the radio-telegram to the peace delegation on February 25, 1918, the telegram to Irkutsk on February 27, 1918, and other documents.

The Soviet Government headed by Lenin consistently pursued a policy of peace advocated peaceful coexistence of states with different social systems. When the imperialists of the Entente began their anti-Soviet armed intervention, the Soviet state repeatedly addressed proposals for peace to the governments of the United States, Great Britain and France. In the letter to G. V. Chicherin and L. M. Karakhan on October 10, 1918, Lenin wrote: "Regarding the Note to Wilson, I think it should be sent. Write it in detail, politely, but caustically, saying: in any case we consider it our duty to propose peace—even to governments of capitalists and multimillionaires—in order to try to stop the bloodshed and to open the eyes of the peoples" (p. 152). The Soviet Government's readiness to enter into peace negotiations with the leaders of the Entente Powers is also stressed in Lenin's letter of May 6, 1919, to Chicherin and Litvinov. Letters to Krasin, Litvinov, Chicherin, and others are devoted to the establishment of trade and economic relations with the capitalist countries. Among them are letters on the negotiations with W. B. Vanderlip, a representative of American business circles (see pp. 423, 442). In one of the letters, Lenin wrote: "trade agreements with the Soviet Republics are more advantageous to the British bourgeoisie than unprofitable and even ruinous attempts to crush them" (pp. 404-05).

Published in this volume is a considerable number of documents showing Lenin's activity in the most diverse fields of the socialist economy: putting the work of nationalised enterprises on a proper footing, organising financial affairs, the utilisation of the co-operative movement for supplying the population, the development of agriculture, the organisation of communes and artels.

The volume contains Lenin's letters elaborating and clarifying the basic principles of the single economic plan endorsed by the Ninth Congress of the R.C.P.(B.). A number of letters are devoted to propaganda for the electrification of the country. Lenin was interested in the coal deposits of Bryansk District, the oil of Ukhta, Berchogur and Cheleken, the exploitation of shales, the use of peat as a basis for electrification. He attached very great significance to the development of engineering, to the speediest introduction of up-to-date achievements in the national economy, to making wide use of scientists and experts. There are documents showing Lenin's interest in the Nizhni-Novgorod Radio Laboratory, which was in fact one of the first scientific research institutes. In the note to N. P.

Gorbunov on October 21, 1918, Lenin wrote: "I earnestly request you to speed up as much as possible the Science and Technology Department's findings in regard to the Radio Laboratory. It is extremely urgent. Drop me a line when its findings are ready" (p. 156). The telegram to the Porokhovo District Soviet on July 2, 1919, the letters to N. A. Semashko on May 3, 1920, and to A. I. Rykov and I. I. Radchenko on October 28, 1920, and other letters, are indicative of Lenin's attitude to inventions and inventors.

Lenin pointed out that scientists must play a leading part in applying scientific knowledge to the national economy and making use of scientific achievements. The present volume publishes Lenin's letter to Gorky of September 15, 1919, in which he said that the Soviet government highly valued scientists who had resolved to devote their knowledge and labour to the people. He wrote: "To the 'intellectual forces' who want to bring science to the people (and not to act as servants of capital), we pay a salary above the average. That is a fact. We take care of them. That is a fact" (p. 285). At the same time he explained to Gorky that the Soviet Government was compelled to take severe measures against those who were involved in counter-revolutionary conspiracies and revolts, which threatened the lives of tens of thousands of workers and peasants.

Lenin repeatedly pointed to the need to put science and ideology at the service of the new socialist order. He sharply criticised the views of the ideologists of Proletcult who oppugned the leading role of the Soviet state and the Party in cultural matters. Everything connected with raising the cultural level of the working people claimed Lenin's attention: the abolition of illiteracy, questions concerning literature, the quality of mass publications, the development of libraries, radio broadcasting, the cinema, etc. One of the main tasks of education during the first years of Soviet rule was the liquidation of illiteracy. "... The struggle against illiteracy is a task more important than any other," he wrote in August 1920 (p. 413).

Lenin attached great importance to propaganda and agitation. On receiving a letter from a "group of students interested in communism", he wished them "most speedy success in your study of communism, mastery of it, and commencement of practical work in the ranks of the Russian Communist Party” (pp. 147-48). Lenin devoted much attention to the realisation of his plan for “monumental propaganda”, for decorating the streets of Moscow and Petrograd with revolutionary inscriptions on buildings and with monuments to outstanding leaders of the revolutionary movement and culture.

The Party and government exerted tremendous efforts to rescue the country from the grip of economic chaos and famine. In the letter to A. G. Shlyapnikov on May 28, 1918, Lenin wrote: “The Central Committee has passed a decision to direct the maximum number of Party workers to the food front. For obviously we shall perish and ruin the whole revolution if we do not conquer famine in the next few months” (p. 95). The letter to the Commissariat for Food and to the Food Department of the Supreme Economic Council, the note to the secretary, the telegram to Kharkov and Moscow, the letter to V. A. Antonov-Ovseyenko and G. K. Orjonikidze, the telegram to S. V. Malyshev, the telegram to the Revolutionary Military Councils of the 10th and 4th armies, the letter to the Agricultural Section of the Food Department of the Moscow Soviet, and the telegram to the Podolsk Uyezd Food Committee reflect Lenin’s activities in the business of supplying food for the Red Army and the population of the industrial centres.

“Petrograd and Moscow are without grain. Heroic measures needed. Wire exact reply immediately,” wrote Lenin to V. A. Radus-Zenkovich; Chairman of the Saratov Gubernia Executive Committee, on July 11, 1919 (p. 263). “At all costs provide all workers of the Urals, particularly the Ekaterinburg district, Kizel and other coal-mining districts, with full supplies of essential foodstuffs,” was Lenin’s instruction to the civil and military authorities of Perm and Ekaterinburg in November 1919 (p. 311). He gave special attention to supplies for children. Supporting the proposals for ensuring food for children, Lenin wrote to Tsyurupa “Perhaps something more could be done for the children? It should be” (p. 188).

The letters show how Lenin’s principles of Party and state leadership were worked out, and characterise his style of work.

Lenin attached immense importance to collective leadership. As the documents in this volume show, on all important matters he consulted his colleagues and other leading workers and submitted these questions to the Central Committee or the Council of People's Commissars for consideration and decision. "I cannot go against the will and decision of my Council colleagues," he emphasised in a letter to Maria Andreyeva (p. 69). At the same time Lenin considered it essential that collective leadership should be duly combined with the personal responsibility of each worker for the task entrusted to him. On August 26, 1918, he wrote to A. P. Smirnov: "I very much fear that you in Saratov are playing at collegiate methods at a time when the work demands energy and prompt action by responsible executives..." (p. 142). Lenin severely criticised all manifestations of localism, anarchy, indiscipline, or the refusal of one or another staff member to submit to instructions from higher organisations. He taught the executives of administrative and Party bodies to be business-like, quicker on the move in taking decisions, to be able to concentrate attention on the most important task and see each job through to the end.

A number of documents show Lenin's efforts to strengthen revolutionary, socialist legality. In the note to the Commissariat for Justice on April 15, 1918, he stressed the need for codification, for publishing a Collection of Laws and Decrees of the Soviet Government, for expanding propaganda on matters of law among the population, and for drawing the mass of working people into the work of the People's Courts. He pointed to the need for a determined struggle against embezzlement of state property, profiteering and hooliganism; he proposed severe measures of punishment for bribe-takers. Lenin demanded that all Soviet bodies and all the personnel of the state apparatus should strictly observe the laws in force in the Republic. He wrote that the mere suggestion to evade a decree should entail prosecution by the courts. Lenin was quick to react to any information signalling a violation of socialist legality, he issued directives for a deeper study of individual cases, and took vigorous steps to stop responsible workers abusing their official position.

The Communist Party of Soviet Russia acted as a great patriotic and international force. Lenin closely followed the events in Hungary and endeavoured to hearten the Hungarian Communists, who were encountering great difficulties. In a letter to Bela Kun, he wrote: "We are aware of Hungary's grave and dangerous situation and are doing all we can.... Hold on with all your might, victory will be ours" (p. 271). "The communist movement in all countries is growing remarkably. The Soviet system has everywhere become a practical slogan for the working masses. This is a step forward of tremendous world-historic significance." These were the words with which Lenin greeted the Dutch Communists in October 1919 (p. 291). He wrote to Raymond Robins on April 30, 1918: "I am sure the new democracy, that is, the proletarian democracy, is coming in all countries and will crush all obstacles and the imperialist-capitalist system..." (p. 82).

All the documents given in Volume 44 are published in accordance with the Fifth (Russian) Edition of Lenin's Collected Works (volumes 50 and 51).

TO MAJOR-GENERAL S. I. ODINTSOV

You have proposed to me the organisation of a group of staff officers and generals who have a higher military education and who wish to work out the military and technical problems of an armistice that would permit Russia, without violation of her interests, to secure the suspension of hostilities.

In view of the extreme urgency of this matter, I would earnestly request you to get your group together at once, tomorrow morning, and to send me tomorrow evening at least a brief outline of the main problems, points and provisions of an armistice agreement (demarcation of the front line, stipulation that no troops be moved to other fronts, control measures, etc., etc.), and also to indicate the person or persons who would be fully competent to take part directly in the negotiations.

Please send me a reply by messenger.

TO THE C.C. OF THE R.S.D.L.P.(B.)The Hanecki affair*

On the question of Hanecki, the narrow C.C. has passed a decision not to appoint him as representative in Stockholm.

That is to say, it rescinded the previous decision of the C.C.

I propose that this decision be countermanded on the following grounds.

What are the arguments against Hanecki?

He is known since 1903; a member of the Polish C.C. who worked for many years as a C.C. member; we saw his work in Cracow, his trips to Russia, etc., we saw him at all congresses, etc., etc.

The arguments are merely a campaign of bourgeois slanders, Zaslavsky's outcries.

It would be quite unworthy of a workers' party to show such credulity to intellectualist scandal. Let someone prove anything bad about Hanecki first, before we remove him.

"But Hanecki traded with Parvus," they "all" say.

Hanecki earned his living as an employee in a commercial firm of which Parvus was a shareholder. That is what Hanecki told me. It has not been refuted.

Is it forbidden to work in capitalist commercial undertakings? Where? By what decision of the Party?

Are there no people among us who work in commercial firms of Russian, British and other capitalists?

Or is it permissible to be a technician, a manager or an employee of Russian capitalists, but not of German, even when living in a neutral country?? And is that to be the decision of an "internationalist" party??

Let it decide frankly, let it pass a general resolution, let it give grounds for the step taken against Hanecki.

When Bukharin wanted to go and work in Parvus's business as a writer, we dissuaded him, for after all it is not a commercial firm. But while we dissuaded him, we did not denounce the Mensheviks<sup>6</sup> in Parvus's employ. We did not denounce Zurabov and a host of others, we did not accuse them.

Who accused them, and where?

Why is it that up to now we have not questioned the Mensheviks and others who lived in Copenhagen and knew of Hanecki's commercial occupation and who did not condemn him? We could and should have done that.

Not a single fact against Hanecki has been established, no ban has been passed on being employed in capitalist commercial firms of all countries, no check has been made on the rumours and slanders of notorious slanderers like Zaslavsky—yet the man is to be "removed"?? There is nothing here but "fear" of the slanders of irresponsible slanderers.

It is unworthy of a working-class party to be so credulous of scandal. If the comrades who succumb to scandal are "perturbed", "worried", why shouldn't they exert themselves a little? Isn't it better to take some pains to find the truth than to repeat scandal? In Petrograd itself it is possible (if a perturbed comrade wants to go to same trouble and not decide things offhand) to find witnesses from Copenhagen, and in Moscow too. Why don't the anonymous accusers of Hanecki in the ranks of our Party do that??

Such treatment of an absent comrade, who has worked for more than ten years, is the height of injustice.

TO CHARLES DUMAS<sup>12</sup>

21/XII—1917

Dear Citizen Charles Dumas,

My wife and I recall with great pleasure the time we met you in Paris, rue Bonier. We are very grateful to you for the exchange of ideas and for the very accurate information on the socialist movement in France.

I very much regret that personal relations between us became impossible after such profound political differences divided us. Throughout the war I fought against the "national defence" trend, I always stood for a split, being convinced that that tendency was ruining socialism completely.

It goes without saying that I am writing this letter not as a member of the government but as a private individual.

Please accept our greetings, dear citizen, and best wishes from my wife and myself.

NOTE TO V. N. PODBELSKY IN MOSCOW
BY DIRECT LINE, FEBRUARY 22, 1918<sup>31</sup>

I have no new verified information apart from the report that the Germans, generally speaking, are steadily advancing because they do not encounter resistance. I consider the situation extremely grave and the slightest delay on our part is impermissible. As regards the report about Austria-Hungary not taking part in the war, I personally, unlike Trotsky, do not consider it verified; they say the radio has been intercepted and there were telegrams about this from Stockholm, but I have not seen such documents.

TELEGRAM TO IRKUTSK

Peace has not yet been signed, but a delegation has gone to Brest-Litovsk to sign the peace terms accepted by the C.E.C. and the C.P.C. Your resolution received. The German whiteguards and composite units of their regular army have joined with our whiteguards and are advancing on Petrograd with brazen audacity. A movement of large German forces in the wake of the advance detachments has been reported. Most of our troops are in flight.* The socialist fatherland is in danger. Dvinsk, Reval, Venden, Volmar, Minsk, Pskov have been taken. Our morale is good. Masses of workers have sprung to the defence of the Soviet Republic. The C.C. of the Bolsheviks is in favour of signing peace. The C.C. of the Left Socialist-Revolutionaries<sup>34</sup> is in favour of a holy war.

As for gold, we recommend that the workers at the mines be paid at cost prices. There has been no special decree by the C.P.C. on gold.

TO F. E. DZERZHINSKY

4/III (19/II). 1918

Comrade Dzerzhinsky,

The bearer, Sidorenko, was my personal secretary for some days. I was quite satisfied with him. He was dismissed on account of an incident when, being drunk, he shouted, as I have been informed, that he was "Lenin's secretary".

Sidorenko tells me that he deeply regrets it. And personally I am inclined to believe him; the lad is young and, in my opinion, very good. One must be lenient to youth.

On the basis of all these facts, judge for yourself, and see what place you can find for him.

Unfortunately, my colleagues (in the Council) consider it impossible for me to permit a meeting (bypassing the investigating commission), all the more so since medical aid (in case of illness) is available.

Just now it is absolutely impossible for me to have a talk with you, as I cannot tear myself away. I will write you about the case of the "provocateur and black-

TO G. K. ORJONIKIDZE

Comrade Sergo,

I beg you to pay serious attention to the Crimea and the Donets Basin with a view to creating a united fighting front against invasion from the West. Impress upon the Crimean comrades that the course of events makes defence imperative for them and that they must defend themselves irrespective of ratification of the peace treaty. Make them realise that the position of the north is substantially different from that of the south, and in view of the war, the actual war of the Germans against the Ukraine, help on the part of the Crimea, which (the Crimea) the Germans can gobble up in passing, is not only an act of neighbourly duty, but a requirement for self-defence and self-preservation. It is possible that Slutsky, failing to grasp the complexity of the present situation, has taken some other, simplified line of his own—in which case he must be put in his place in my name. Immediate evacuation of grain and metals to the east, organisation of demolition groups, the creation of a united front of defence from the Crimea to Great Russia, drawing in the peasants, a decisive and unqualified transformation Ukrainian-wise of our units in the Ukraine—these are the present tasks. Antonov should be forbidden to call himself Antonov-Ovseyenko—he must call himself simply Ovseyenko. The same applies to Muravyov (if he remains in his post) and others.

As regards the Donets Republic, tell Comrades Vasilchenko, Zhakov and others that however much they may contrive to keep their region apart from the Ukraine, it—judging from the geography of Vinnichenko—will all the same be included in the Ukraine and the Germans will proceed to conquer it. In view of this, it is quite absurd for the Donets Republic to refuse a united defence front with the rest of the Ukraine. Mezhlauk was in Petrograd and he agreed to recognise the Donets Basin as an autonomous part of the Ukraine; Artyom has also agreed to this; therefore the obstinacy of some comrades from the Donets Basin takes on the appearance of an entirely inexplicable and harmful whim which is absolutely impermissible in our Party midst.

Bring this home to the comrades of the Crimea and Donbas, Comrade Sergo, and get a united defence front set up.

Lenin

I have received Gorbunov's memorandum. I strongly protest against the delay in the evacuation of industry.<sup>36</sup> Larin and Milyutin have no right to alter the decision. If anyone is dissatisfied with my order, let him complain to the C.P.C. or C.E.C., but until my order is cancelled its fulfilment is obligatory. I am particularly indignant at the millions' worth of stores on Gutuyev Island being left untouched. That is disgraceful. The evacuation of these stores must be begun at all costs and carried out in the speediest manner.<sup>37</sup> The Sovnarkom to send in twice weekly precise reports on what has actually been done for the evacuation and how many truck-loads have been evacuated.

CONVERSATION WITH V. V. KUIBYSHEV BY DIRECT LINE

Kuibyshev, Chairman of the Soviet of Deputies, on the line in Samara

Comrade Lenin, Dutov's forces have again become active in Orenburg; a report has been received that Cossack detachments are advancing within twenty versts of Orenburg. Iletsk is encircled by Cossacks. The Cossacks are mobilising all the villages; they are committing terrible atrocities, three members of the Executive Committee, and Zakharov, Chairman of the Cossack Section of the Soviet, have been killed. The bourgeoisie of Orenburg is actively participating. Orenburg requests the Council of People's Commissars to help uproot this Dutov adventure, otherwise there will again be a blockage, which will cause the death through famine of 12,000,000 inhabitants of Turkestan. One detachment sent from Orenburg to Iletsk was surrounded and wiped out to a man; government commissar Tsvilling is believed to have been killed. Samara will strain all efforts to help Orenburg, but the local forces are insufficient to liquidate Dutov's bands completely; help from the centre is essential. I have finished and await a reply.

I shall take all steps immediately to notify the military authorities and give you assistance.

Dear Mr. Robins,

I hope this preliminary can be useful for you in your conversation with the American Foreign Office and American Export Specialists.

TO THE SUPREME MILITARY COUNCIL

Chairman of the Supreme Military Council

The Supreme Military Council is directed to send envoys—through the appropriate military authorities at the front —for the purpose of signing a truce and establishing a demarcation line on the South-Eastern (Don) Front. In order that appropriate instructions may be given to the military authorities, we inform you that our envoys are in Kharkov at the present moment, headed by Sytin, military commander of the Bryansk General Staff units, who has been given instructions to secure a general truce on the Voronezh and South-Eastern fronts. A truce, especially on the South-Eastern (Don) Front, must be secured as quickly as possible, in the last resort agreeing even to accepting as a basis the present disposition of military forces.

Sytin has been instructed to try to secure through the medium of the German Command direct contact with our Command on the South-Eastern Front for co-ordinated action.

With the same aim in view, the Supreme Military Council, by all the means available to it, should maintain constant contact both with Sytin and with our Command on the South-Eastern Front.

EXCHANGE OF NOTES WITH A. D. TSYURUPA

TO A. D. TSYURUPA

1) Has your draft (on the organisation of supply commissariats) been communicated to all departments?

2) Take the floor today on a point of order about submitting it for discussion tomorrow.

3) Is there not too much bureaucratic formality in your draft? Should not a point be inserted in the decree providing for the participation of 20-50 workers (with very strict recommendations) in each of the supply commissariats in the grain-producing gubernias?<sup>59</sup>

A. D. TSYURUPA'S REPLY

1) The draft has been discussed with regional officials, and approved by Rykov and the Supreme Economic Council in the section concerning the establishment of a Commissariat for Supply (central).

2) I will rise to a point of order.

3) The draft provides for the setting up of supply commissariats under the Soviets, the supply commissariats must not be unwieldy. A point about the participation of 20-50 workers in each commissariat of the grain-producing gubernias may be inserted, but it should be for their participation in the technical apparatus as cadres to be sent out to the volosts.

The introduction of such a number of workers in the composition of the commissariats will evoke protests in the local areas.

TO A. D. TSYURUPA

TO A. D. TSYURUPA

A Food Commissariat circular—or better still, perhaps a decree of the C.P.C.—should be drawn up, making it amply clear:

- that the delegatkoms* should be allowed to work jointly with the gubernia food committees and under their control;
- that the separate existence and separate operation of the delegatkoms is impermissible;
- that such a thing invariably leads to the infiltration of profiteers;
- that especially desirable is the assistance of the delegatkoms and their participation in agitation against the kulaks and profiteers under the guidance of agitators' detachments of the gubernia food committees, etc.

All this should be set out and published in greatest detail and in an extremely popular manner.

TO A. A. JOFFE AND V. R. MENZHINSKY

Comrades Joffe and Menzhinsky

Dear Comrades,

I have received your pessimistic and angry letters (that of 20. V, I received today, 24. V). Some of your accusations levelled against Chicherin fall on me. For example, I insisted that the theses on concessions should be sent through the Germans, in order to show them how seriously we desire business-like economic relations. (The theses were drawn up by common consent with the participation of Radek and other "Left stupid".) The terms of our concessions are such that nothing but benefit for us will result if the Germans accept these terms.

I fully approve your policy, set out in especial detail in Comrade Joffe's letters,

Your dissatisfaction with Chicherin is, in my opinion, exaggerated. But in any case I agree to help you and I ask you to direct your efforts to practical ways of improving matters. For this, I would suggest that you precisely formulate concrete proposals (send me copies of telegrams and letters, parts that are strictly practical and brief, for I simply have no time to read everything). In that case I promise to try to secure their fulfilment and to check whether they have been fulfilled.

You must think over how to shift the centre of things to Berlin to a greater extent (I agree to help in this), and propose for this purpose very tactful (N.B.) and concretely practical measures. I shall accept all feasible measures and endeavour to have them carried out.

If anything can be done to secure peace with Finland, the Ukraine and Turkey (this is the crux of the matter), we must always work for this (of course, it cannot be secured without certain further annexations and tribute payments). I would give much to hasten such a peace.

You, too, should keep your nerve. Putting diplomacy to rights (and creating a new diplomacy) is no easy task. Festina lente.

With best greetings,
Yours,
Lenin

P.S.

28/V. I missed the messenger.

Chicherin has given me the text of a Note which Joffe sent to the German Government on his own account, agreeing to surrender the ships of the Black Sea Fleet (i.e., to their removal from Novorossiisk to Sevastopol)<sup>60</sup> on condition merely of peace with the Ukraine. However, our government in a clearly worded Note (communicated by radio to Joffe as well) considered it possible to agree to the removal of the ships to Sevastopol on different conditions, viz.: 1) peace on all three fronts, i.e., with the Ukraine and Finland and Turkey; 2) no annexation of Sevastopol.

How could Joffe make such a mistake? How could he make such a "bad bargain"? How in general he could send a Note on such an important question on his own account, I fail to understand....

N.B. Send us Arbeiterpolitik, the Stuttgart Sozialdemokrat<sup>61</sup> and similar publications, all, complete, 5-10 copies of each.

Have you begun some legal publication in German? What precisely? What is the plan of publication and when will it appear?

Greetings,
Lenin

TELEGRAM TO THE KINESHMA SOVIET<sup>63</sup>

Kineshma

To all workers of the Kineshma district. Comrade workers, the rich in the villages of the producing gubernias are hoarding huge stocks of grain and not giving them up for the starving workers. The rich prefer to sell grain at exorbitant speculative prices, which only the city bourgeoisie can pay, but not the poor, starving population. While speculating in grain, the rich seek to speculate also in the goods they receive in exchange for grain. The city bourgeoisie is agitating for the abolition of the grain monopoly and fixed prices, and for freedom to trade in grain. The bourgeoisie is passing from agitation to provocation; it is skilfully and surreptitiously inciting the starving workers to demonstrations, disturbances and disorders, while endeavouring to seize power in its own hands. The Council of People's Commissars is exerting every effort in the struggle to uphold the grain monopoly, in the absence of which only the bourgeoisie will prosper while the poor will be left without any grain at all. Comrade workers, do not give way to the provocation of the dark forces, do not play into the hands of the bourgeoisie and the counter-revolutionaries who want to make cat's-paws of you and destroy all the gains of the revolution. Do not disorganise the hard work of obtaining grain for you by thoughtless actions on your part and independent exchange of goods. The Council of People's Commissars is now exchanging goods for grain on a vast scale; it has begun requisitioning grain stocks from the village bourgeoisie by means of armed detachments. If you want to help, to co-operate with your workers' and peasants' government, act in an organised way: select from among you those who are most familiar with the food business for work in the Soviet food supply bodies, recruit fighting detachments of honest, incorruptible, steadfast revolutionaries, true champions of the interests of the workers and peasants. Immediately detain provocators and agents of the counter-revolution and deliver them to Moscow. Bear firmly in mind: either we extricate ourselves from all our unprecedented difficulties in an organised way, and with honour, or everything is inevitably doomed to complete ruin. There is no other alternative. In the expectation of speedy results from these measures, the Council of People's Commissars asks you, comrade workers, to display revolutionary self-discipline and political alertness in order to save the gains of the revolution and ensure the triumph of the proletarian dictatorship.

Shlyapnikov

The Central Committee has passed a decision to direct the maximum number of Party workers to the food front.

For obviously we shall perish and ruin the whole revolution if we do not conquer famine in the next few months.

It is essential that you be temporarily employed on food supply (while retaining the rank of People's Commissar for Labour). I am confident that you will carry out the directive of the C.C.

I think that you ought to go to the Kuban to help pump grain out from there.

EXCHANGE OF NOTES WITH A. D. TSYURUPA

V. I.,

How has the question about using the army in the struggle for requisitioning grain been decided? If it has been decided affirmatively, how will the thing be arranged officially—×by way of an agreement with the Commissariat for Military Affairs or by the issue of a decree?*

It is very important to know this, for today Kudinsky has been arrested (apparently by Comrade Dzerzhinsky's Commission), our work threatens to come to a complete stop.

A. Tsyurupa

* Underlined by Lenin.—Ed.

I have just written to Shlyapnikov about his going to the Kuban. He should make arrangements with you today. I advise you right now, today, to appoint him from the C.P.C.

Stalin has agreed to go to the Northern Caucasus. Send him. He knows the local conditions. Shlyapnikov will find it better with him too.

TO A. A. JOFFE

Comrade Joffe,

Sokolnikov and Bukharin are to make a trip to you, and Larin, too, I believe.<sup>67</sup> I take this opportunity to give you a little warning. I am sitting at a meeting with the "travellers" (without Larin). I hear talk about "Joffe transferring the Commissariat for Foreign Affairs to Berlin".

The friction between you and Chicherin is sometimes used—unconsciously rather than consciously—as a means towards intensifying this friction.

I am confident that you will be on your guard and will not allow this friction to grow. I have read attentively your letters and I am absolutely convinced that this friction is unimportant (there is chaos everywhere, carelessness everywhere—in all commissariats—and this evil is slow to cure). Given patience and persistence the friction will be smoothed over. Chicherin is a splendid worker. Your line is quite faithful to the Brest treaty, you are al-ready successful, I think—and hence it follows that we shall easily smooth away the friction.

If the German traders will accept economic advantages, realising that nothing is to be got from us by war, for we shall burn everything—then your policy will continue to be successful. We can give the Germans raw materials. In important cases, send me copies of your exact demands. Arrange for a direct line as quickly as possible.

Bukharin acts in good faith, but he is up to the neck in "Left stupidity". Sokolnikov has gone astray again.

Larin is a floundering intellectual, a first-class bungler. Therefore be extremely on your guard with all these most charming, most admirable delegates. Sokolnikov is a very valuable worker, but sometimes (as just now) something “comes over him” and he “breaks china” because of paradoxes. If you do not take precautions, he will break china there with you. And Bukharin—triplly so. Prenez garde!

I hope that Krasin and Hanecki, being business-like people, will help you and the whole matter will be smoothed out.

Thank you for the “supplement” to your letter. I await some more.

Best regards,
Yours,
Lenin

N.B.: Among the Russian Bolsheviks taken prisoner by Germany (Zivilgefangene) was Popov of Brussels, taken in Belgium. Could you find him and take him into our service?

In view of the furious agitation of enemies and “waverers” and its influence on the workers in Petrograd, Moscow, etc.,

I think you ought to publish (and distribute as a leaflet at the factories) something in the nature of a letter to the workers, saying:

they are trying to scare you—the waverers are sowing panic—they are talking of “independent procurements”— they criticise the “centre”, throwing the blame on others—and so forth.

But you, workers, should not believe the whiners, sowers of panic and fault-finders, but set to work: let every factory send to our aid trustworthy people with a guarantee, with a surety, we shall show them where the obstacle lies, what the difficulty is, and they will help us.

Would you be able to place such people?

A. D. TSYURUPA'S REPLY

Yes, we can arrange it. Your proposal will be implemented. A small group of workers has already had a number of reports on the food question read to them (something like lectures) and this group will shortly be going to the area of Tambov and Voronezh gubernias with our representative. We have asked all Soviets,* Bolshevik committees and trade unions to give us reliable people.

Please receive them and put them to work immediately by distributing them among the places of grain procurement and, if necessary, among the places along the routes for dispatching and forwarding grain. TO A. A. JOFFE

Comrade Joffe,

I am extremely astonished and angry at the absence of news from Switzerland. I am told that couriers travel there weekly. Yet not a word!

What are Berzin and Shklovsky doing?

Please forward this letter to them and take measures to receive a reply.

It is urgently necessary to have sent here from Switzerland

Junius's pamphlet,

Karl Liebknecht's pamphlet, a set of cuttings from Berner Tagwacht and other publications (all documents on the movement of the Lefts in Germany and Austria).<sup>73</sup>

This must be republished immediately in book form (separate issues) in Switzerland.

Commission someone in Germany (in Berlin) to do the same job, using the materials of the Partei-Archiv or of any library having complete sets of newspapers for the war years (Rühle's article on the split in Vorwärts, 12. I. 1915 or 1916,<sup>74</sup> etc.).

Referenten-Material from Niederbarnim (quoted in Legien's pamphlet: Warum müssen die Gewerkschaftsführer, u.s.w.)<sup>75</sup> and everything of this kind to be collected immediately.

It's really scandalous that nothing is being done in this field.

For this work two Germans (Borchardt would be suitable) and two Swiss can (and should) be hired, and it should be published immediately in German, French and English.

EXCHANGE OF NOTES WITH A. D. TSYURUPA

Tsyurupa

1) Who and when are you sending to the local areas (Schlichter, Bryukhanov, who else? and where to)?

2) We've had a talk with Pravdin (he arrived today from Tula, Yelets, Orel).

There is grain.

exemplary order,

power in the hands of the poor peasants.

3) Who are you sending to Tambov and with what detachments? Should not Bryukhanov be sent there? The most energetic person is needed there.

(Today I had a talk with people from Tambov; the harvest is unprecedented; there is also old grain; the kulaks can be brought to heel, but there is a lack of organisers and detachments.)

4) Are we going to put up with the absence of a (food) dictatorship in Moscow? It's a scandal! A disgrace!

Schlichter is going to Yefremov Uyezd, Tula Gubernia. I sent a comrade to Zinoviev in Petrograd for workers for his detachment. Urgent loading of goods is in progress at present. In about 5 days' time he will set out.*

Tsyurupa

Five days for an exchange of telegrams with Zinoviev (who long ago was asking where to send detachments) and for loading the goods (1 day??).

He asks for a loan of 1½ million. From his account it is evident that affairs in the uyezd are exemplary. A most instructive example of a model uyezd where the kulaks have in actual fact been ousted from all the Soviets. In my opinion, such an uyezd should be given priority assistance.

Today, June 30, information was received from Joffe in Berlin that Kühlmann had a preliminary conversation with Joffe. From this conversation it is evident that the Germans agree to compel the Turks to cease hostilities beyond the Brest frontier, having established a precise demarcation line for us. They promise not to allow the Turks into Baku, but they want to receive oil. Joffe has replied that we shall adhere strictly to Brest, but quite agree with the principle of give and take. Pay the greatest attention to this information and try to pass it on as soon as possible to Shahumyan, for now there are very serious chances of holding on to Baku. Some oil, of course, we shall give.

TO A. A. JOFFE

Dear Comrade Joffe,

I am, to tell the truth, extremely angry with you. We are short-handed, everyone is devilishly overworked, yet you go and do a thing like this: you write a lot on business matters in a personal letter to me (the last one, in pencil) and insert a number of personal thrusts, attacks, pinpricks and so on against Chicherin ("not a real" m-r* and so on). To Chicherin, on the other hand, you write: "prospects in the letter to Lenin".

Damn it, it's the frozen limit!

Chicherin, naturally, asks me for the letter, and I can't show it, because I don't want to be an instrument of squabble. The result is that the work suffers and relations suffer.

Chicherin is a splendid worker, most conscientious, shrewd, knowledgeable. Such people should be highly appreciated. That his failing is lack of "commandership" does not matter. There are plenty of people in this world who have the opposite failing!

Chicherin is a man you can work with, he is easy to work with, but the work can be spoiled even with him.

You find fault with him, but the Commissariat for Foreign Affairs has a right to complain of you, too, because you do not reckon with him, and without the knowledge and permission of the People's Commissar for Foreign Affairs, ambassadors are not, of course, entitled to take decisive steps.

I hope you will take all measures to eliminate these Mißstände.**

That you have got Krasin "on the move" is very good. Keep on at Shklovsky with all your might; he is a lazy-bones; demand reports and more reports, use threats.

All the best,

Lenin replies:

Kolegayev told me personally as well as Zinoviev and many others, that he, Kolegayev, is opposed to the present policy of the Left Socialist-Revolutionary Party. I do not doubt that the crazily hysterical and provocative adventure culminating in the murder of Mirbach and revolt of the Central Committee of the Left Socialist-Revolutionaries against the Soviet power will lose them not only the majority of their workers and peasants, but also many intellectuals. The revolt was suppressed completely in a single day. Hundreds of people have been arrested.

Put on record Muravyov's declaration of his withdrawal from the Left Socialist-Revolutionary Party, and continue to keep him under vigilant control. I am confident that if these conditions are observed we shall fully succeed in utilising his excellent fighting qualities. The struggle against the Czechoslovaks and Cossacks must be waged with treble energy.

Comrades,

I take this opportunity to send you a few words by messenger.

Are the army commanders and Vatsetis working vigorously enough? Is the commissars' control over them good enough?

What are the opinions about Blokhin? Is it true that he is splendid? If so, is he being given enough scope?

Of course, I am judging from a distance and can easily be mistaken. But I am afraid lest the "staffs" should smother the live work below, the work of the masses? Is there sufficient contact in the military field with the masses of poor peasants?

Is everything being done to rouse them and draw them into the work?

Now the entire fate of the revolution rests on one card: swift victory over the Czechoslovaks on the Kazan-Urals-Samara front.

Everything depends on this.

Is the command sufficiently energetic? Is the offensive sufficiently vigorous?

Please reply, if only in a few words, both by telegraph and by messenger.

TO A. A. JOFFE

3. VIII. 1918

Comrade Joffe

Everything you write in your recent letters is the height of absurdity.

To pursue the "former" policy of not breaking with the Entente after the Omega events is ludicrous.<sup>85</sup> You can't restore chastity to a dame with a baby.

It is also absurd to apply the term intervention or aid to the fact that we are continuing to manoeuvre, allowing the Germans to take what the Entente has already taken, thereby making more difficult and delaying the Anglo-American-Japanese throttling of Russia.

Without knowing the facts and without reflecting on them, you have fallen into error with the memorandum and the rest. If you wish to insist on it, hand in your resignation to the C.C. Until you do so, until the C.C. has accepted your resignation, until a substitute has been sent to you, and until his arrival, you, of course, as a Party member (as you yourself write) will do your duty.

What is being done in this direction?

1) Instruction: in the collective trains a certain proportion in each (1 in 5, for example) should be from the trade unions,

2) §7 of the decree on collective trains should be developed and strengthened,

3) their correlation (in effect=help) with the requisitioning detachments....

4) Assign them all to a maximum of 2 uyezds (from among the best) and sweep these clean.

TO N. P. BRYUKHANOV AND OTHER MEMBERS OF THE BOARD OF THE FOOD COMMISSARIAT*Bryukhanov and other members of the Board of the Food Commissariat*

I gather from your note that the Food Commissariat understands and applies the decrees incorrectly.

“No special desire is noticeable among the workers ...” (to join harvesting detachments).

Where are the proofs? Where is the appeal of the Food Commissariat? What is the date of it?

In which factories was it distributed? When and in how many copies?

I am afraid the Food Commissariat did none of these things (judging by Comrade Bryukhanov’s silence), but occupied itself with the devil knows what bureaucratic red tape. For without the help of the workers the Food Commissariat is nil.

Nothing bad is to be seen from the quotation (from Nevsky's telegram of 8. VIII), for it does not touch on the question of % of trade union members, or of the leading organisation, or of participation and harvesting (§ 7 of the decree on collective trains), i.e., the business questions are not dealt with.

What's bad about Nevsky's telegram besides the good? Nevsky calls on the workers: go out and help (he says nothing about conditions, but we indicated these conditions and indicated good ones). But the Food Commissariat cavils at a word (when there's nothing to cavil at) ... and itself does nothing!

Either we rouse the mass of the workers to join in a serious movement for grain (and for crushing the kulaks)—this the Food Commissariat does not do —or else, no Food Commissariat at all is needed.

Tsyurupa:

(1) It is a great scandal, an outrageous scandal, that there is grain in Saratov and we cannot get it away!! What about having one or two food officials sent to each railway junction? What more can be done?

(2) Draft of a decree—25-30 hostages from among the rich in each grain-producing volost, answering with their lives for the collection and delivery of all surpluses.

(3) Instruct Popov urgently to make up delivery orders by volosts. That is, how much surplus grain there should be in each volost. How much should each give?

Tsyurupa

1) You have not replied about “hostages”.

2) When will Popov finish his work? (He must be given a short time limit.)

I propose that “hostages” should not be taken but designated by name for each volost.

The purpose of designating them: it is the rich peasants who, in the same way as they answer for contribution, will answer with their lives for the prompt collection and delivery of grain surpluses.

An instruction to this effect (to designate “hostages”) to be given

M. D. Bonch-Bruyevich, personal

I consider it essential to reinforce the Eastern Front to the utmost. I direct the Supreme Military Council to draw up a plan for the withdrawal of the greatest possible number of units from the Western Front. This plan should be carried out in the shortest possible time. All battle-worthy units should go. The railways will receive orders to let through without delay all units already going to the front, and will make every preparation for handling new ones.

I direct the Supreme Military Council to supervise the accuracy and speed with which the railways fulfil the orders. The Chairman of the Supreme Military Council to report to me about delays.

I place responsibility for the speediest fulfilment of the plan on the Supreme Military Council.

In case of need you will be given permission to use the direct line. My advice is: gradually take steps towards disarming and expelling demoralised units and hooligan elements. ### TO A. D. TSYURUPA

Can it be arranged for detachments to go out for grain (to procure and transport by express goods train) according to alternative instructions, namely:

either for one time (to one volost, etc., for threshing in a uyezd, etc.)—then the bonus will be less, or undertaking to work for a lengthy period (not one time, but for 3 or 4 months, etc., or once more when called upon by the Commissariat for Food, etc.)—and then the bonus will be higher.

(In both cases make it a condition that they are obliged not only to procure but also to thresh, and to carry the grain into barns, and to erect barns or half-sheds, etc.)

Comrade Sklyansky

I am enclosing herewith Comrade Vorovsky's letter, with documents attached to it (registered in the Managing Department of the C.P.C. 16. VIII. 1918 as No. 2509), and I ask you to pay the most serious attention to the abuse and crime revealed here.<sup>90</sup>

It is necessary to appoint a very limited number of the most reliable and experienced comrades (if possible, not more than two or three), including one from the Extraordinary Commission, to carry out through such a secret commission of inquiry the strictest investigation, at first in absolute secrecy, in order (1) to discover the usual manner in which business is conducted in the institution concerned, (2) to trace the connections of the counter-revolutionary criminals and (3) to arrest all of them, allowing none to escape.

We know little about the Caucasus and Baku. Information is unverified. Soviet power exists in the Northern Caucasus. Its troops are cut off from Tsaritsyn, which is besieged from the south by the Cossacks. The British have landed in Baku and the situation there is unstable. The Germans have agreed to guarantee there will be no offensive against Baku if we drive out the British from there. How matters will turn out there is not known. As regards the military aid, we do not know where it is. We think it is held up near Tsaritsyn.*

As regards ambassadors and consuls, we advise a waiting attitude, keeping them under threefold surveillance and arresting suspicious individuals who are in contact with them.

We are considering and preparing some assistance for you, but cannot promise anything for certain, for everything depends on whether we shall be successful in driving the British out of Baku or whether they succeed in capturing a part of the Caspian coast.

TO V. D. BONCH-BRUYEVICH<sup>103</sup>

Dear Vladimir Dmitrievich,

Only this morning I heard the awful news. I cannot travel to Moscow, but I should like, if only in a letter, to grip your hand hard, very hard, to express my love and the love of all of us for Vera Mikhailovna, and to give you at least a little support, insofar as anyone can do so, in your terrible grief. Take good care of your daughter's health. Once more, a strong, firm handshake.

Yours,

TELEGRAM TO A. A. JOFFE

Comrade Joffe

We do not agree to sign the Turkish protocol until the hand-over of Baku to our authorities is accepted, for with-

TO LYDIA FOTIEVA AND L. B. KRASIN

Lyd. Al. (and Krasin)

I am signing the telegram about oil, ships, etc., with pleasure.

But I don't agree to sign that about Mukhin.<sup>105</sup>

(1) Krasin writes that Mukhin concealed money from Stalin. This he had no right to do, even if "on the instructions of his (!!??) chiefs", for Stalin too is a chief, and a higher one, too, though not "his".

(2) It is wrong formally and impermissible generally to decide this without asking Stalin (and Stalin is in Moscow!!).

NOTE TO G. V. CHICHERIN OR L. M. KARAKHAN AND A LETTER TO A. A. JOFFE, J. A. BERZIN AND V. V. VOROVSKY

Comrades Chicherin or Karakhan

Will you please send to Berlin tomorrow, Friday, 12 copies of my article against Kautsky from Pravda<sup>106</sup> for

Joffe, Berzin and Vorovsky, and the following brief letter from me to them:

Dear Comrades,

I am very well aware of the shortcomings of my too brief article against Kautsky. Nevertheless, it is necessary for us, as quickly as possible, to take a stand, to express our opinion. Will you please have it translated and published as a leaflet.

TO G. V. CHICHERIN AND L. M. KARAKHAN

Comrades Chicherin and Karakhan

Regarding the Note to Wilson, I think it should be sent. Write it in detail, politely, but caustically, saying: in any case we consider it our duty to propose peace—even to governments of capitalists and multimillionaires—in order to try to stop the bloodshed and to open the eyes of the peoples.

The fall of Kazan, Simbirsk, Syzran and Samara has obviously exploded such-and-such rumours....

Do the capitalists want some of the forests in the north, part of Siberia, interest on 17 thousand millions?<sup>107</sup> If so, then surely they won't make a secret of it. We propose to you: state outright, how much*? Regarding the Brest peace—Germany will agree to withdraw her troops. What's the matter then? Do you want to replace the German troops with your own troops?

And so on.

I suggest that you immediately draft such a Note, and we shall discuss it together.<sup>108</sup>

* The words "how much" are in English in the original.—Ed.

Pravda wanted to publish my article against Kautsky Friday morning. Did you receive from Sverdlov my note asking for 12 copies to be sent to Joffe for Berzin and Vorovsky, for them to publish as a leaflet? and to have these dispatched Friday evening? } N.B.

What news is there from Litvinov?<sup>109</sup>

What has been done about publishing Japanese leaflets?

Greetings,
Yours,

TO J. A. BERZIN

Comrade Berzin

Dear Comrade,

I have received from you odd copies, as always, of foreign newspapers (can't you have someone make cuttings of (a) everything about Russia; (b) everything about the socialist parties of all countries).

I see from them, incidentally, that Graber and Grimm have stupidly and basely attacked Guilbeaux. How could you see something had in his taking the money? I don't understand.

You can't censure a valuable comrade without formally going into the matter!? Who of the Party members (appointed by you) went into it? No one! Yet from Guilbeaux's information and from the decision of the Geneva Commission it is as clear as clear can be that the case is in favour of Guilbeaux.

N.B. Send me: Longuet, La politique internationale du marxisme. Karl Mart et la France. Vandervelde, *L'Etat et le socialisme** and all similar pamphlets in French, German, English and Italian, all, all, all! Also: La Russie socialiste (socialistes-révolutionnaires de gauche), see La Feuille (Genève),<sup>110</sup> 3. X. 1918.** Pierre Loti, Quelques aspects du vertige mondial, Paris (Flammarion). Leon-Frappe, Les contes de la guerre (ibid.).

I have just received from Sverdlov a set of your publications (it would do no harm if you sent this set to me as well).

Too little! Too little!! Too little!!!

Engage a group of translators and publish 10 times as much. Peluso can (and should) write three small pamphlets a week (on all subjects, compilations from our newspapers—you provide the themes and a list of the articles suitable for compilation). His article in *Droit du Peuple**** (“Counter-Revolutionaries”) is good. Pay him well and publish 10 times as much. (Translators must be engaged, in order to publish in 4 languages: French, German, English and Italian. You have nothing in the last two. Scandalous! Scandalous!!)

You have plenty of money. (Send without fail an account of the sums you have spent.) We shall give more and still more, in plenty. Write how much.

A 100 times more must be published, in 4 languages, pamphlets of 4-8-16-32 pages. Engage people for this.

N.B. Collect a set of Spartakusbund (I have seen No. 11, IX. 1918)<sup>112</sup> and republish the entire set in 4 languages. Also Junius and Liebknecht. Commission a history of the struggle against social-chauvinism in Britain, France, Germany, * Apparently this refers to E. Vandervelde's pamphlet Le Socialisme contre l'Etat, Paris, 1918.—Ed.

** I think the Left S.R.s have here lied terribly. It is necessary at once to commission someone (Leiteisen even) to make a compilation from Pravda and Izvestia against the lies of the Left S.R.s (and also from Znamya Trudovoi Kommuny and from Volya Truda<sup>111</sup>).

*** Droit du Peuple—a weekly, organ of the Social-Democratic Party of Switzerland, and of the party branches in the canton of Vaud and the city of Lausanne.—Ed.

Italy. Form groups for this purpose (Gorter, Balabanova+? +??. etc.).

Yours,

P.S. What is your optimism about revolutions in the countries de l'Entente based on? Facts? Considerations? If necessary, send in code, but write more precisely.

If you are ill, undergo treatment seriously and do not N.B. leave the sanatorium. Keep in touch by telephone, and send your deputy for visits.

We ought to act as a bureau for ideological work of an international character, but we are doing nothing!!

A hundred times more must be published. We have the money. Engage translators. But we are doing nothing! It is scandalous....

Dear Comrade Joffe,

I received your letter of 13. X after sending off a letter to you.

I am not against continuing the "diplomatising". But its importance has diminished. The whole point is whether the Entente manages to land in force in the Black Sea. I have long been talking to everyone everywhere about this danger, and have said it clearly in the letter to the Central Executive Committee.<sup>115</sup> The radical difference from II. 1918 is that at that time we had a chance to win time by giving away territory. Now there is no such chance.

When will the French edition of The State and Revolution appear?<sup>117</sup> Have I time to write a preface against Vandervelde?

Send me: Vandervelde, Le Socialisme contre l'Etat; La Belgique envahie et le Socialisme international; Trois aspects de la révolution russe. All three are published by Berger-Levrault, Paris, 5-7, rue des Beaux-Arts.

TO J. A. BERZIN

1/XI.

Dear Berzin,

I have received a lot of books from you. Many thanks.

I hear that all are at loggerheads over there. We shall take Shklovsky and Zalkind.

In case of anything, write; I shall sign your orders (to your subordinates), so that they will not dare quarrel and will strictly carry out your orders.

Stay in bed and follow the treatment strictly; you ought to be living not in Berne, but in the mountains in the sunshine, in some place where there is a telephone and a railway, and you should send a secretary to Berne and people should travel to you.

In the German translation of The State and Revolution an unfortunate error has crept in: the postscript is not dated. Yet the whole point is to show that the postscript was written after the October Revolution. Namely: 30. XI. 1917. Could not a correction slip be pasted in?

Some capable comrades are on their way to you. Do not grudge money, particularly through them, for propaganda in France.

All the very best,

Yours,

Lenin

N.B. Prepare everything for the eventuality that the Entente will force Switzerland to deport you. Bereit sein!<sup>120</sup>

P.S. If the French translation of The State and Revolution is ready, put it out at once, but in the publisher's preface criticise both Kautsky and Vandervelde (Le Socialisme contre l'Etat), because Vandervelde slurred over, concealed, distorted everything of importance about the state.

I am sending about half a pamphlet against Kautsky. Will you please have it translated as quickly as possible and let me know by telegram: Antikautsky is being translated into German, French or Italian. Otherwise I'll have it done here.

I hope you sent Staat und Revolution to Berlin? The more the better!

CONVERSATION BY DIRECT LINE WITH B. M. VOLIN NOVEMBER 29, 1918

Comrade Volin, Chairman of the Orel Gubernia Executive Committee and Gubernia Party Committee, on the line:

I have just received a telegram from Surazh as follows: "On November 29, a congress of German Councils in the Ukraine is taking place at Gomel. It is essential to send representatives. We have sent the head of the Information Department, and others. We are conducting talks with a big German Council in the Ukraine and are enlisting in the Red Army volunteers from the German army. Send directives for talks to our representatives in the Ukraine. Our representatives have been guaranteed safety, they are under German protection. The temper of the German army is thoroughly Bolshevik." I decided today to send to Gomel a Communist, Chairman of the Soviet, and a German, the Communist Meyer, from the International Detachment. Should the Chairman of the Orel Soviet only make a speech of greetings or can he take upon himself a political mission? I am asking you for a directive. If you know of this congress and have sent your representatives, then perhaps our delegation is not necessary.

Lenin: I know nothing about this congress. I advise you to get in touch immediately with the Ukrainian Communists and with their Central Committee via Kursk. The reports about the majority of the German Councils being on the side of the Bolsheviks must be carefully verified. If this is not the case, then it is necessary at the congress to deliver a detailed, well-substantiated, principled speech about Bolshevism and its tasks. If, however, the German soldiers are already Bolsheviks or Spartacists, then we must propose to them an immediate alliance with us for the speediest restoration of Soviet power in the Ukraine and for the arrest not only of whiteguards, but also of the supporters of the Rada. In any case people must be sent to the congress who are capable of accurately reporting back all the discussions and resolutions.

If it is already too late to send new representatives to the congress, then try to wire my note through to the people you have already sent. I await a reply.

Volin: Vladimir Ilyich, I informed you that I decided to send the Chairman of the Soviet to Gomel. He is leaving tonight. That was why I asked for your directive. Simultaneously with this I shall try to get in touch with Kursk.

Lenin: I am very glad that you are sending the chairman to the congress. I hope you are satisfied with my suggestions. Arrange for me to get information about each day of the congress.<sup>128</sup>

I am taking this opportunity to send you greetings and materials for the investigation.<sup>134</sup> Think it over thoroughly in advance and discuss it with 2 or 3 of the most reliable members of the Cheka, and catch the scoundrels named here without fail. The materials, I have been told, come from an honest tradesman who has remained here.

Regarding your requests and commissions, I have phoned, asked and repeated them.* I hope that part—and the most substantial part—will be met. The whole, of course, is beyond our resources.

Telegraph what items among those outstanding are most urgently required.

News from around Perm is extremely alarming. Danger threatens it. I am afraid we forgot about the Urals. Bulatov, Chairman of the Gubernia Executive Committee
Tver

I authorise you to investigate the enclosed complaint and report the result to me as soon as possible.

Report essentials by telegraph ("re the case of the school-teacher Ivanova").

Particularly important: check the statement that in the Poor Peasants' Committee there are former and present elements of the Black Hundreds: Teterin, Skvortsov, Kozlov, Baskakov.

Start the check discreetly to prevent premature publicity and be able to catch them red-handed and expose them completely.

Should the accusation prove to be true, these Black Hundreders must be kicked out publicly and a leaflet about the affair promulgated throughout the volost and uyezd, for the population must be taught that well-founded complaints are of great significance and lead to important results.

Telegraph me: "Letter received, directive will be carried out", and then about the progress of the investigation.

Send the results by letter, the exact findings of the investigation and the measures taken.

I think that as Chairman of the Gubernia Executive Committee you need no special mandate from me for such a simple case. If need be, I will send it.

Am very uneasy about whether you are not giving too much attention to the Ukraine to the detriment of the general strategic task, on which Vatsetis insists and which consists in a speedy, determined and general offensive against Krasnov. I am very much afraid that we are being late with this and that the recent successes of the Krasnovites near Tsaritsyn will again lead to the postponement of our offensive and to our missing the right moment. The initiative for serious operations is escaping from us, both at Astrakhan and on the Caspian Sea, as well as at Tsaritsyn and in the east. Vatsetis is for a speedy general offensive against Krasnov, but Vatsetis, apparently, is not able to cope with red tape and the separatism of the Ukrainians and other regionalists. Should you not concentrate wholly on hastening and carrying through a general offensive against Krasnov?

Inform the Revolutionary Committee in Ufa for their guidance that negotiations must be begun immediately with the Socialist-Revolutionaries who are proposing negotiations, after taking all precautions against attempts at provocations and for safeguarding the front, while at the same time guaranteeing absolute personal immunity to the envoys from the Socialist-Revolutionaries. At the talks it is to be stated clearly straight away that there can be no question of any change in the Soviet Constitution, because Soviet power, being the power of the exploited classes for suppressing the exploiters, has definitely proved its necessity for securing victory over the bourgeoisie, and the Soviet movement is now spreading to all countries of the world.

TELEGRAMS TO M. K. VLADIMIROV

Vladimirov

The Council of Defence has decided that if the Revolutionary Military Council of the Republic fails, within two days, to present a reasoned decision in favour of the Povorino-Tsaritsyn line, we shall give priority to the Liski-Likhaya line. The Commissariat for Railways plainly states that there cannot be enough materials for restoring the bridges of both lines. I fully agree with this decision of the Council of Defence, but if you can perform a miracle by contriving to repair the Povorino-Tsaritsyn line in addition to the Liski-Likhaya line, you will indeed be a miracle worker.

2

I personally agree to leave you if you undertake to restore both lines, as you write. I shall try today to get in touch with Tsyurupa and Sverdlov, and if we arrive at a different decision I shall telegraph you immediately. RADIO-TELEGRAM TO BELA KUN

Bela Kun
Budapest

I am sending you a copy of our radio-telegram of today to Pichon on the question of the exchange with France.<sup>191</sup>

Our Red Cross Commission headed by Manuilsky left for France to organise repatriation of our men, but has been held up. We promised to repatriate the French servicemen still with us if repatriation of our men from France is organised and proceeds at full speed. The French Government prevented Manuilsky's Commission from organising this work. Of the 35,000 Russian soldiers in France, Africa and Salonica, France wants to repatriate 900 men now and makes empty promises of repatriating our soldiers later on as opportunity offers, but in exchange for this, France demands that we should immediately let all the Frenchmen go home.

France wants to send Manuilsky's mission back together with the 900 Russian soldiers, although nothing has been done to organise further repatriation. France wants to get everything and give almost nothing and get rid of Manuilsky.

Yet we are aware that our soldiers who remain in France and refuse to join the army are subjected to the most monstrous persecution and that Manuilsky has been forbidden to establish any sort of contact with them.

We refuse, on such conditions, to let the Frenchmen go home. This is the substance of my radio-telegram, a copy of which is being sent to you. The French will shout blue murder, and tell the Americans every sort of disgusting lie. Please hand a copy of our Note to the American representative for his government.

We have missed the winter period, he says, but after the sowing (which ends at about St. Nicholas's Day*) there will be about a month's free time (before dung carting, about a week before St. Peter's Day**). This, he says, should be utilised.

TO THE TAMBOV GUBERNIA EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

20. IV. 1919

Gubernia Executive Committee
Tambov

I enclose a telegram from Tambov.<sup>207</sup> Please arrange another general meeting of these 252 (it is not clear whether they are all the members of the co-operative or only some of them, and if so, out of what total number) and explain the following to them:

“The Council of People’s Commissars has passed a decree for the organisation of consumers’ communes in the interests of correct distribution of products. It is unjust that the distribution of products essential for the whole population should be handled only by part of the population, as was the case under capitalism. In all countries the co-operatives under capitalism embrace mainly the upper sections of workers and peasants. It is essential that now not only the upper sections, but all working people, every one of them, should take part in the distribution of products.

“There is hardly a single one of the great founders of the world co-operative movement who has not pointed to the conversion of this movement into socialism. Now indeed this time has come, and all the best elements in the co-operatives are in sympathy with the development of the co-operative movement as envisaged in the decree on the conversion of the co-operatives into consumers’ communes embracing all the working people without exception.

“The members of the consumers’ communes retain the right of fully independent control, as also the right to conduct affairs independently. This is why I am asking the meeting to revise its decision, to recognise the binding nature of the decree of the Council of People’s Commissars and not to make the workers’ and peasants’ government have recourse to undesirable measures of compulsion.

“V. Ulyanov (Lenin)
“Chairman, C.P.C.”

Read out at the meeting the part in quotation marks, and publish it in the local newspaper. Amplify (tactfully, without using hard words) what I have said. Wire fulfilment.

The advance into part of Galicia and Bukovina is essential for contact with Soviet Hungary. This task must be achieved more quickly and surely, but beyond this task no occupation of Galicia and Bukovina is needed, for the Ukrainian army must on no account be distracted from its two main objectives: the first, the most important and most urgent, is to help the Donets Basin. This assistance must be given quickly and on a large scale. The second objective is to establish a secure link by rail with Soviet Hungary. Inform us of your directives to Antonov and measures for checking their fulfilment.

TO E. M. SKLYANSKY<sup>209</sup>

Comrade Sklyansky,

This, by the way, is pertinent to what was decided yesterday.

It is necessary urgently, at once:

1) to draw up the text of a directive from the C.C. to all "nationals" on army unity (integration)*;

2) to give it also to the press for a series of articles;

3) re universal military training (100% to be taken and not 75%<sup>210</sup>), prepare immediately, today, a draft decree;

4) calculate: 24,000 command personnel. At the ratio of 1 to 10 that means an army of 240,000.

Verify and take as the norm at once for the Central Board of Supply of both Russia and the Ukraine.

Sokolnikov

It is necessary at all costs to put down the revolt quickly, once and for all. Beloborodov has been sent from the Central Committee. I fear you are making a mistake in not applying severe measures, but if you are absolutely convinced that there are not enough forces for dealing with it summarily, then wire immediately and in detail. What about promising an amnesty and at that price completely disarming them? Reply at once. We are sending trainees of two more commanders' courses.

TO THE PETROGRAD ORGANISATIONS

I have had a detailed report from Vatsetis and the Chief of Staff. The conclusion is a sad one. Strenuous efforts are needed. The present enthusiasm must not be allowed to subside, but must be sustained for at least 2 months and still further intensified. Otherwise we shall not finish the war, and finished it must be at all costs, as signs of weariness among the masses (100,000 deserters) are becoming more frequent.

I have discussed the following measures with Trotsky:

1) Some 3,000 Petrograd workers, unfit for war and unarmed, to be sent to the Don. Purpose—to set things going, to weaken the Cossacks, demoralise them from within, settle among them, set up groups in the villages, etc.

2) All means and resources to be used more and more to get ready a flotilla for the Volga. Especially repairs.

3) Ditto as regards artillery (without taking away from the Karelian line). It is necessary again and again to check with the army men whether it is possible to help the east with artillery.

4) Rifles to be collected, especially broken ones (in Tula 800 a day can be repaired; work is lacking).

5) Mobilisation of Petrograd workers to be continued both for the Ukraine and for the Don.

I received a telegram today from Zinoviev on the stoppage of several works, big ones, in Petrograd, owing to oil shortage. I could not get Krasin on the phone. When I do I shall tell him. But I don't think any oil is or will be available. I advise moving every one of these workers to the Ukraine, to the Don, to the east, for 3 months. It is stupid to starve, to perish in Petrograd, when it is possible to win grain and coal.

6) Mobilisation of Party functionaries to be continued, too, especially for places close to the front line.

It is necessary again and again "to rob Petrograd", that is, to take people from it, otherwise neither Petrograd nor Russia can be saved.

Various branches of administration and of cultural and educational work in Petrograd can and should be weakened tenfold for 3 months.

We shall then save both Russia and Petrograd.

We have no other workers to equal the Petrograders.

Greetings,

TO G. V. CHICHERIN AND M. M. LITVINOV<sup>219</sup>

Dear Comrades,

I am sending you my comments. In the absence of essential differences of opinion, decide for yourselves. My advice is: use it for propaganda, for clearly it can serve no other useful purpose. Be extremely polite to Nansen, extremely insolent to Wilson, Lloyd George and Clemenceau. This is very useful, the only way to speak to them, the right tone.

6/V.

I think both replies are quite correct, in proposing a meeting and thanking Nansen. But it seems to me that the propaganda side should be more fully developed, taking advantage of the fact that the Entente, while easily concealing from everyone all other documents of ours,* will be unable, by way of exception, to conceal precisely this reply.

I would therefore advise using for propaganda and elaborating in greater detail the separation of ( $\alpha$ ) the humanitarian and ( $\beta$ ) the political aspect.

( $\alpha$ ) You mention the humanitarian (it seems, only the humanitarian?) nature of the proposal? For this all thanks and compliments to Nansen personally. If it's humanitarian aims, then do not bring politics into it, dear sir, but just start shipping (stress this). Just start shipping! We are even ready to pay through the nose for it and willingly admit you for control and give you every guarantee. Dilate on this, rub it in, make it clear. Appoint a place and time for the talks!

But if a truce, then this is politics! You are an educated man, Mr. Nansen, you know perfectly well that every war and every truce is politics. This means you have linked the "humanitarian" with the "political". You have lumped them together! Explain to him, as you would to a 16-year-old lass, why a truce is politics.

* The reference is to the numerous official peace proposals addressed to the Entente powers (see present edition, Vol. 30, pp. 191-92).—Ed.

(β) Is it a good thing—to mix the “humanitarian” with “politics”? No, it is a bad thing, because it is hypocrisy, for which you are not to blame, and it is not you we are blaming. For one must talk frankly about politics without taking cover behind “humanitarianism”.

And once you have started talking politics, then, by your leave, we are obliged to answer you to the point.

(β<sup>1</sup>) If the truce is for peace, then you are perfectly aware that we are for it. We agreed (even!) to the Princes Islands.

[We confirmed this to Bullitt who, unfortunately, proved, like the whole of American policy, to be a captive of Clemenceau and Lloyd George, for what Bullitt promised us, assuring us that America would make Clemenceau and Lloyd George come to heel, remained unfulfilled (it would be useful to “taunt” Wilson about it!).<sup>220</sup>*

It was not we who torpedoed the Princes Islands, but the monarchists and anti-Jew pogromists, the restorers of the landowners’ estates. Explain, develop, prove these three points, that Denikin and Kolchak 1) are monarchists; 2) pogromist thugs; 3) are restoring the estates of the landowners and introducing redemption payments for the peasants.

We agreed to a truce for negotiations about peace, of course, with those who are really to blame for the war, i.e., with Great Britain, France, America, and not with pawns. Explain in detail that it is they who are waging war, with their ships, their guns, their cartridges, their officers. Reveal in detail the outrageously false “renunciation of intervention” in the face of their support (and egging on) of the Estonians, Finns, Poles.

(β<sup>2</sup>) Further, if the truce is not for peace, but for a political game—we don’t want it. Peace is not a joking matter. No one will succeed in fooling us. Develop this point, too.

Wind up with a résumé: if it is politics, then we proposed a truce for peace, we agreed, we did not torpedo the Princes Islands, we are always ready for talks with those who are really to blame for the war.

* If all are against, throw it out (probably this refers to the text which Lenin put in square brackets.—Ed.). But in my opinion, it is extremely useful in practice to set Wilson at variance with them by declaring that Wilson is a pawn in the hands of Clemenceau and Lloyd George, in submitting to these two, to this “majority”!!

If it is not politics, but humanitarianism, we say thank-you, we accept, we invite you to come, to control, and will go anywhere you like (time, place) and will pay even three times the price in timber, ore, ships.

Indeed, we must not miss the opportunity of replying to Nansen in a way that would make good propaganda.<sup>221</sup>

I take this opportunity to discuss the revolt at greater length. Your telegram of the 17th (No. 189) distresses me very much: You speak only of "demoralisation" of "expeditionary troops" and not a word about the division (the 34th, I believe), which was landed to suppress the revolt! Not a word!

After the offensive against Petrograd, suppression of the revolt, the most ruthless and immediate suppression coûte que coûte, is an absolute necessity. Please do not be diverted from this and send information in code twice weekly—I shall insist on the dispatch to you of what is required, just as I insisted today on an additional telegram about (what has already been ordered three times) the dispatch to you of Communists from Voronezh and Tambov gubernias.

I have just learned of the break-through of our front at Riga. Riga is evidently lost.<sup>228</sup> Most likely treachery of the Lettish bourgeois officers. Possibly also preparations for a general, determined offensive along the whole Western Front. All this obliges us to increase tenfold the attack on the Donets Basin and at all costs to put down the revolt on the Don immediately. Allowing foreigners to leave on their own is criminal. To let Russians out under the guise of foreigners is a counter-revolutionary act, tantamount to treason. Foreigners in general should not be allowed out without compensation which can only be ordered by the central government. Citizens of the Entente countries should not be allowed to go, other than by way of exchange carried out by the central government. Not a single Frenchman should be allowed to go out until the return of the soldiers from France, among whom there are many Ukrainians. Those guilty of violating this should be held strictly responsible. Bear in mind that the Finnish Government, obviously at the instigation of the Entente, is hindering the release to Russia of Russian soldiers; therefore do not allow a single bourgeois, a single person, to leave Odessa and the Ukraine. Exceptions—Chinese workers, Persians, by orders from the centre.<sup>230</sup>

Rakovsky for Joffe
Council of People's Commissars of the Ukraine
Kiev

Read this telegram to Rakovsky, Mezhlauk, Voroshilov, Pyatakov, Bubnov, Kviring and other prominent functionaries.

I consider it criminal on your part to have persuaded Trotsky to leave Podvoisky.

Not a single promise is being fulfilled: the Donets Basin has no reinforcements; the mobilisation of workers is proceeding at a disgracefully sluggish pace. You are personally responsible for the inevitable catastrophe. All prominent functionaries must be taken off their jobs and installed in Kharkov and Ekaterinoslav for the total mobilisation of workers; further, one prominent functionary to be sent to each army unit for its advance to the Donets Basin; and everything set in motion for clearing out uniforms from the stores. The ruin of the entire revolution is absolutely inevitable unless there is a swift victory in the Donets Basin, for which it is essential to abandon routine in the Ukraine, to work in a revolutionary spirit, to rally all and sundry, to keep an eye personally on each army unit, each step in the work, to set aside everything except the Donets Basin, to have three soldiers to one rifle. From you not one factual report.

It is necessary at all costs to put a stop immediately to the habit of holding meetings, to put all work of whatever kind on a war footing, and appoint particular individuals responsible for the performance of precisely defined jobs. There must be military discipline everywhere. The Commander and Revolutionary Military Council of the 2nd Army should make enquiries about everything of their immediate chief, that is to say, Gittis, and put a stop to all fanciful schemes for forming special groups and similar attempts covertly to restore the Ukrainian Front. There are sufficient uniforms and arms both in the Ukraine and at the disposal of Gittis. If the chaos, the meetings and the disputes about priority are eliminated, then everything can be obtained. Report exactly the facts of the fulfilment of specific orders, that is, about the arrival of army units at their destination, the collection of arms, and so on.

TELEGRAM TO J. V. STALIN<sup>237</sup>

Zinoviev for Stalin
Smolny
Petrograd

Okulov points to the isolation of the 7th Army from the Revolutionary Military Council of the Western Front, which causes confusion, relieves front workers of responsibility, and deprives them of energy in their work. Petrograd Military District, subordinated to the Western Front, is giving all its reserves to the 7th Army, not giving them to the front for the remaining armies. Pozern stays in Petrograd all the time, has poor connections with the Council of the front, and sets up parallel supply bodies instead of utilising the front-line bodies already existing. Okulov proposes either the complete subordination of the 7th Army to the command of the front, or giving it a special status of direct subordination to the General Headquarters.

Knowing Petrograd's constant tendency towards independent activity, I think you should help the Revolutionary Military Council of the front to unite all the armies. The other Western armies besides the 7th should be taken care of, too. Report what you have done.

The conflict with Okulov must not be allowed to grow. Think it over well, for it is impossible simply to recall him.

Today I learned of the desertion to the enemy of yet another Petrograd regiment and of the refusal of two regiments to attack. Supervision should be strengthened and more workers added.

Regarding foreigners, I advise not to hurry with deportation. Would not a concentration camp be better, so that they can afterwards be exchanged?*

Sklyansky has positively promised to give ten thousand rifles in the first half of June. Pay the most serious attention to the Orenburg Cossacks and the Bashkirs, for during the previous offensive we behaved stupidly, missed an opportunity, and did not make use of these forces. Mobilise them urgently, send an intelligent, cool, knowledgeable, experienced man there, pay the greatest attention to this and to unflagging, total mobilisation of the entire front-line area and the collection of rifles from the population.

Southern Front

The Revolutionary Committee of Kotelnikovo District, Don Region, by Order No. 27, abolishes the term "stanitsa" and establishes that of "volost", and accordingly divides Kotelnikovo District into volosts.

In various districts of the region the local authorities forbid the wearing of trouser stripes and abolish the word "Cossack".

In the 9th Army Comrade Rogachov is indiscriminately requisitioning horse harness and carts from the working Cossacks.

In many parts of the region local fairs for selling peasant wares are prohibited. Austrian prisoners of war are being appointed commissars in the stanitsas.

We call attention to the need to be particularly careful in breaking up such trivial features of everyday life, which are of no significance whatsoever in the general policy, so as not to irritate the population. Pursue a firm course on basic questions and be tolerant of the archaic survivals to which the population is accustomed.

I have received your letter and enclosures. Kamenev says—and declares that several most prominent Cheka men confirm it—that the Chekas in the Ukraine have brought a host of evils, having been set up too early and having allowed a mass of hangers-on to get in.

When there is an opportunity to send a letter by hand, inform me in greater detail about the screening of the Cheka personnel in the Ukraine, and the results of the work.

Representatives of the Bashkirs have visited me; they ask for their troops to be sent to the east and not to the south. In the east, in their home territory, they say, they can help capture Chelyabinsk quickly, as the Kirghizes, too, will go with them; but in the south they are powerless and fear they will achieve nothing. I very much ask you to weigh these arguments, which in my opinion are serious.

Make Sokolnikov hurry with suppression of the revolt. We are giving Natsarenus to the south. Podbelsky is working well in Tambov Gubernia, where he has roused the Army Procurements Department and is procuring 20,000 pairs of top-boots.

I consider the greatest danger is a possible movement by Kolchak against Vyatka for a break-through to Petrograd. Council of People's Commissars
Kiev

On June 3, I sent the following telegram to Schlichter: "Earnestly request you not to hold up consignments for the Byelorussian-Lithuanian army and generally for the Food Commissariat, Minsk, and to dispatch them to destination in Minsk. Accelerate this in every way. Further, it is necessary to increase relief for Petrograd. Please wire me fulfilment of both assignments twice weekly. Lenin, Chairman, C.P.C."

Please 1) investigate the reasons for non-receipt of this telegram and prosecute the guilty parties; 2) discuss most urgently emergency measures to aid Petrograd with food and to collect what was promised; appoint a comrade in each volost responsible for fulfilment of this. I await a reply.

Code message received. Both your requests have been fulfilled. Two armoured trains and 500 Communists are leaving today. Trotsky is here. Telegraph, first, whether you have received this reply; second, how you appraise the situation, whether you have recovered what was lost, and what measures have been taken; third, whether you consider possible your arrival tomorrow or the day after or quite impossible; fourth, your opinion about the publication of the document you sent, not in full but parts of it. I urge publication. We ourselves will select what can be published. I await a reply.<sup>244</sup>

TO THE ORGANISING BUREAU OF THE C.C.,

MILITARY COUNCIL OF THE REPUBLIC

Comrade Gusev
Orgbureau of the C.C.
Comrade Sklyansky

Will you please examine as quickly as possible the proposals of Comrade I. I. Ulyanov so that the question can be settled without delay.

Ivan Ivanovich Ulyanov, former Chairman of the Urals Revolutionary Committee, a member of the All-Russia Central Executive Committee (since X. 1917), urges the necessity of raising a division from among the Cossack proletarian masses in the area of Saratov and Pokrovsk for operation behind the enemy lines, in the steppes beyond the Urals.

Ulyanov himself, Khaustov (Chairman of the Bureau of the Yaitsk Revolutionary Committee, in Pokrovsk), two brothers of I. I. Ulyanov and a few others, whom he undertakes to select, would like to take up the formation of a special detachment.

Required for this are: 1) special powers;
2) arms and supplies;
3) money.

Comrade Trotsky is mistaken: here there are neither whims, nor mischief, nor caprice, nor confusion, nor desperation, nor any “element” of these pleasant qualities (which Trotsky castigates with such terrible irony).<sup>246</sup> What there is, is what Trotsky overlooked, namely, that the majority of the C.C. is convinced that General Headquarters is a “den”, that all is not well at Headquarters, and in seeking a serious improvement, in seeking ways for a radical change it has taken a definite step. I have just learned from railwaymen that there has been no railway connection with Tsaritsyn since the 18th. The last station, they say, is Log. Is this true? If it is, why did you conceal it and not report? What measures have been taken to restore the situation? Have you given the 10th Army sufficient reinforcements, cartridges and shells? If insufficient, are you now giving these and by what route? The 10th Army complains of a shortage. I draw your attention again and again to the extremely great importance of Tsaritsyn. Has a directive been given not to surrender Tsaritsyn? Are you keeping to it decidedly, or is there a different opinion? Reply precisely and urgently.

Comrade Chicherin,

I have received your note and the radio message. I don't think it is worth while taking this seriously and hastening to reply. Let us rather wait and have the laugh on them. Today we shall give it to the press as a joke, with a directive to the editors to ridicule it thoroughly (hinting: are they not going by the news from Budapest?) and call the Mensheviks and Socialist-Revolutionaries all the names they deserve. We shall talk it over again when I arrive.

Yours,

To the Orgbureau of the C.C.

I have just again received from a reliable source information that board members are starving (for example, Markov in the Commissariat for Railways, and others). I insist most emphatically that the Central Committee

1) direct the Central Executive Committee to issue to all Commissariat board members (and those of similar status) a grant of 5,000 rubles each;

2) put all of them permanently on specialist's maximum pay.

It's too bad, really, to have both them and their families starving!!

Markov told me today that 7 troop-trains of the 21st Division will now arrive daily, that the whole of it will have come in about 4 days' time (news about it was delayed by the storm which disrupted the telegraph for two days), and then one week more will be required for each division. He is doing everything to speed up things.

Ought we not use the whole 21st, or part of it (the larger), to utterly annihilate all "Lashevich's godsons"? Think this over properly. The capture of "Sokolnikov's godson" and complete destruction of "Lashevich's godsons" are of great, immense importance.

... The Revolutionary Military Council failed to pay due attention to the reconnaissance report, and the Southern Front Commander declared it to be a trifle, saying that even if the Cossacks did break through, they would be caught in a trap.

...As a result of all this, about 290 trucks of Clothing and Equipment Depot property were left behind in Kozlov and plundered by the Cossacks and population.

In view of this I consider it necessary to insist on a thoroughly detailed investigation of the process of evacuation of the institutions of the Southern Front Headquarters, and particularly the Clothing and Equipment Depot, to be carried out by a commission consisting of representatives of the Revolutionary Tribunal of the Republic, the Council of Defence, and the People's Commissariat for State Control.

TO MAXIM GORKY

15/IX.

Dear Alexei Maximych,

I received Tonkov, and even before that and before receiving your letter we had decided in the Central Committee to appoint Kamenev and Bukharin to check on the arrests of bourgeois intellectuals of the near-Cadet type and to release whoever possible.<sup>279</sup> For it is clear to us that there have been mistakes here, too.

It is also clear that in general the measure of arrest applied to Cadet (and near-Cadet) people has been necessary and correct.

Reading your frank opinion on this matter, I recall a remark of yours, which sank into my mind during our talks (in London, on Capri, and afterwards):

“We artists are irresponsible people.”

Exactly! You utter incredibly angry words about what? About a few dozen (or perhaps even a few hundred) Cadet and near-Cadet gentry spending a few days in jail in order to prevent plots like that of the surrender of Krasnaya Gorka, plots which threaten the lives of tens of thousands of workers and peasants.

A calamity, indeed! What injustice! A few days, or even weeks, in jail for intellectuals in order to prevent the massacre of tens of thousands of workers and peasants!

“Artists are irresponsible people.”

It is wrong to confuse the “intellectual forces” of the people with the “forces” of bourgeois intellectuals. As a sample of the latter I take Korolenko: I recently read the pamphlet War, the Fatherland and Mankind, which he wrote in August 1917. Mind you, Korolenko is the best of the “near-Cadets”, almost a Menshevik. But what a disgusting, base, vile defence of imperialist war, concealed behind honeyed phrases! A wretched philistine in thrall to bourgeois prejudices! For such gentlemen 10,000,000 killed in an imperialist war is a deed worthy of support (by deeds, accompanied by honeyed phrases “against” war), but the death of hundreds of thousands in a just civil war against the landowners and capitalists evokes ahs and ohs, sighs, and hysterics.

No. There is no harm in such “talents” being made to spend some weeks or so in prison, if this has to be done to prevent plots (like Krasnaya Gorka) and the death of tens of thousands. But we exposed these plots of the Cadets and “near-Cadets”. And we know that the near-Cadet professors quite often help the plotters. That’s a fact.

The intellectual forces of the workers and peasants are growing and gaining strength in the struggle to overthrow the bourgeoisie and its henchmen, the intellectual lackeys of capital, who imagine they are the brains of the nation. Actually, they are not the brains, but sh—.

To the "intellectual forces" who want to bring science to the people (and not to act as servants of capital), we pay a salary above the average. That is a fact. We take care of them. That is a fact. Tens of thousands of officers are serving in our Red Army and are winning victory, despite the hundreds of traitors. That is a fact.

As for your moods, I can "understand" them all right (since you raise the question whether I shall be able to understand you). Often, both on Capri and afterwards, I told you: You allow yourself to be surrounded by the worst elements of the bourgeois intelligentsia and succumb to their whining. You hear and listen to the howl of hundreds of intellectuals over the "terrible" arrest for a few weeks, but the voice of the masses, the millions, the workers and peasants, whom Denikin, Kolchak, Lianozov, Rodzyanko, the Krasnaya Gorka (and other Cadet) plotters are threatening—this voice you do not hear and do not listen to. I quite understand, I quite fully understand, that in this way one can write oneself not only into saying that "the Reds are just as much enemies of the people as the Whites" (the fighters for the overthrow of the capitalists and landowners are just as much enemies of the people as the landowners and capitalists), but also into a belief in the merciful god or our Father the Tsar. I fully understand.

No really, you will go under unless you tear yourself out of this environment of bourgeois intellectuals! With all my heart I wish that you do this quickly.

Best regards,

Yours,

Lenin

× For you are not writing anything! And for an artist to waste himself on the whining of rotting intellectuals and not to write—is this not ruin, is it not shameful?

The Politbureau of the C.C. considers it absolutely inadmissible that Selivachov is still without special supervision despite the C.C. decision. We insist on communication being established, if only by aeroplane, and on Serebryakov being sent to him immediately to act as commissar to Selivachov.<sup>280</sup> The behaviour of divisional commanders in the area of the second break-through is extremely suspicious. Take heroic precautionary measures.

The Politbureau directs Comrade Stalin to talk with the Commander-in-Chief and reprove him for the inadequacy of his measures to establish communication with Selivachov and prevent suspicious negligence, if not treachery, in the area of the second break-through;

—further, to reprove the Commander-in-Chief for the extreme passivity of Olderogge and point to the necessity of taking measures either by replacing him by a more energetic commander (discuss the question of Frunze), or by sending highly reliable and energetic commissars, or by both.

Comrade Sklyansky,

The question of reinforcing the division taken from the Eastern Front must be urgently worked up.

Cannot we add to it 20-30% of new recruits? Mobilised workers? Perhaps 5% of Communists, 15% of workers, 10% of peasants? Then it would be augmented by 30%. Perhaps this is technically admissible (without weakening the whole division as regards toughness)?

This must be urgently considered and decided.

Further, the dispatch of rilles to the Eastern Front must now be stepped up.

Should not the Eastern Front be given the following assignment: to consider and carry out a regrouping of the troops so as to reinforce all the divisions by 15-30 per cent and thereby bring the whole army up to its previous strength?

REMARKS ON A LETTER FROM G. V. CHICHERIN

Dear Vladimir Ilyich,

Not knowing whether, among the mass of radio messages, you have read about Kautsky's book, I am sending you this excerpt separately. It seems to me, from what I am able to read of our literature, that we have not thrown sufficient light on the role of state capitalism under proletarian political power, a role which has escaped Kautsky. What we have is not yet communism, but state capitalism, with inequality of remuneration including piecework payment, with forms of compulsion, sometimes reproducing the old regime, with centralised management even of production and a restricted factory self-administration. We have a Red Army of state capitalism with an apparatus of very strong compulsion, and not an army of communism....

This is not a sign of capitalism.

This is due to the forms of struggle of the enemy and the level of culture and not due to of capitalism.

Unfortunately, there is almost no real centralisation.

This is altogether wrong. ???

#I don't think so. We have the struggle of the first stage of the transition to communism with peasant and capitalist attempts to defend (or to revive) commodity production.

Syromolotov and Milyutin

The Central Committee has instructed a commission consisting of Lenin, Trotsky, Krestinsky, and Kamenev

“to prepare a report on the search for all kinds of property suitable for military purposes and military supplies, and providing for severe measures of punishment for concealment”.

This commission decided to set up a subcommission of the above-named comrades (from the Supreme Economic Council—Syromolotov or Milyutin, or someone from its Transport and Materials Department, etc., by agreement between us and the Presidium of the Supreme Economic Council) and instruct it to draft a decree by Saturday (to be submitted to the Council of Defence).<sup>284</sup>

TO L. D. TROTSKY

Comrade Trotsky,

Last night in the Council of Defence we adopted a decision of the Council and sent it to you in code (it would be better for you to use your own code, as Karakhan's, used by Zinoviev, causes a delay of several hours).

As you see, your plan has been adopted.

But the withdrawal of the Petrograd workers to the south, of course, is not rejected (it is said that you expanded on this to Krasin and Rykov); to talk about this prematurely would mean diverting attention from the struggle to the last.<sup>286</sup>

The attempt to envelop and cut off Petrograd, of course, will call for corresponding changes, which you will carry out on the spot.

Instruct some reliable person in each department of the Gubernia Executive Committee to collect Soviet papers and documents in preparation for evacuation.

I enclose the appeal which the Defence Council instructed me to draw up.*

* This refers to the appeal: "To the Workers and Red Army Men of Petrograd" (see present edition, Vol. 30, pp. 68-69).—Ed.

I was in a hurry and it is none too good.

INSTRUCTION ON I. N. SMIRNOV'S TELEGRAM<sup>287</sup>

1) Give 30,000 uniforms.

2) The entire 5th Army to be taken to the south at once, and not after the Ishim (for the river Tobol is much larger and broader than the river Ishim, and the length of the front when transferred to the river Ishim is insignificantly shortened).

3) Turn the offensive in the direction of the Ishim into a demonstration and withdraw (having prepared for this in the shortest space of time) to the river Tobol.

Instruct the Commander-in-Chief to discuss my proposals 1-3.

I think that agreement with Estonia against Yudenich is impossible, for she is powerless to do anything even if she wanted to. Moreover, Yudenich's base is probably not in Estonia, but outside it, on the sea coast covered by the British fleet. We have sent you many troops, everything depends on the speed of the offensive against Yudenich and on encircling him. Strain all efforts to hasten matters. The huge revolt in Denikin's rear in the Caucasus<sup>289</sup> and our successes in Siberia raise hopes of complete victory, if we immensely hasten the liquidation of Yudenich.

TO L. D. TROTSKY

18/X. 1919

Comrade Trotsky,

I was somewhat taken aback by Zinoviev's demand yesterday for more regiments. Is it true about the Estonians?

Nevertheless, I passed it on to Sklyansky, and an order has been given to have them sent from Tula (again from Tula!).

It is not safe, however, to take any more from the reserves of the Southern Front. Would it not be better to search elsewhere?

It is devilishly important for us to finish with Yudenich (precisely to finish—to deal a final blow). If the offensive has begun, is it not possible to mobilise another 20,000 Petrograd workers and exert really mass pressure on Yudenich?

If there are 5-10 thousand good attacking troops (and you do have them), then surely a city like Petrograd can give about 30 thousand to follow up, as an aid to them. Rykov says that a great deal of property has been "found" in Petrograd; there is bread, and meat is on the way.

It is necessary to finish with Yudenich soon; then we shall turn everything against Denikin.

In my opinion it is dangerous to take units from the

* The text from the words "so that" to the end is in Sklyansky's handwriting.—Ed.

Southern Front now: they have started an offensive there, and it must be extended.

Greetings,
Lenin

P.S. I have just learned from Sklyansky that 2 regiments intended for Petrograd have reached Kotlas. We shall expedite their movement.*

TO L. D. TROTSKY

Comrade Trotsky,

In my opinion, Chicherin is right.<sup>292</sup> Has it been verified that the Estonians are fighting? Is there not deception here? Or is it not only White Estonians (officers) who have joined Yudenich, people who constitute a minority, and an insignificant one, among the Estonians?

We must think it over ten times, measure the cloth ten times, for there is a mass of information pointing to a desire for peace on the part of the Estonian peasantry.

The reports must be divided into 2 parts:

(a) a part which can only be described (plan, conditions, specific features, etc.);

(b) a part which can and should be expressed in figures.
Both to be published.

In the second part, essentials to be selected (for summaries and comparisons).

(Cf. an example of vagueness—the Chief Shale Committee, report on October 1, 1919.) It is being printed. Where. How often.

(The secret part should be printed in % %; for example: October 1, 1919—100, number of workers; November 1, 1919—120, etc.)

FROM A. K. PAIKES AND A NOTE TO THE ORGANISING BUREAU OF THE C.C., R.C.P.(B.)

The rapid advance of the army demands the immediate organisation of Soviet institutions locally. The local comrades are unfamiliar with the development and policy of Soviet power and are not capable now of organising them. Contact with the centre being impossible, the absence of suitable leaders in the regions threatens a repetition of stages already passed and an irrational use of Siberia's natural wealth. It is essential to send responsible people immediately to the Siberian Revolutionary Committee for political leadership in the fields of Soviet construction and economy.

Top priority

Telegram to be handed to the duty commissar for immediate delivery. Delivery to be confirmed to Kremlin, Moscow

3 addresses:

Gubernia Party Committee, Gubernia Executive Committee,
Gubernia Food Committee
Ryazan

Dear Comrades,

At your conference on December 19 you decided to dispatch 800 truck-loads of potatoes within ten days for Moscow workers and outlined a number of measures for carrying this out. A splendid idea, but the crux of the matter is how successfully and how quickly you will cope with the task you have set yourselves. The working class of Moscow is in the throes of starvation. Saving it means saving the revolution. The working class of Moscow has been bearing the brunt of the struggle against counter-revolution. The Red Army has defeated Kolchak and Yudenich, it is now Denikin's turn. To enable the Red Army, with the least expenditure of time and strength, to cope with this task, which will ensure the possibility of ending the war and beginning peaceful socialist construction, the Moscow worker has had to make yet another sacrifice. He has had to provide for operational needs the transport facilities which were intended for the carriage of food to Moscow. In these conditions, it is natural that localities surrounding the centre of world revolution should come to his aid. All Party and Soviet personnel should be imbued with the idea that the provisioning of Moscow, the salvation of its working class, is their sacred revolutionary duty. On your energy and determination depend the gains of the revolution. All for food procurement, all for work to load and dispatch the trucks. The dispatch and delivery of food trains to Moscow is the care of the People's Commissariat for Railways. Insistently demand fulfilment of this obligation from the local bodies of the Commissariat for Railways. To work, comrades! For speedy, drastic, revolutionary aid to the Moscow workers!

With communist greetings,

TO G. Y. ZINOVIEV

23/XII.

Comrade Zinoviev,

Your letter of 20/XII received.

About Petrograd, arrange everything with Trotsky. It is evidently necessary to preserve and restore all defence installations (I hear they are already stealing barbed wire, etc.), and to devise a system of weekly mobilisations (either "alerts" or musters), in order to keep Petrograd in a state of preparedness. This must be carefully thought out.

Food supply is at a complete standstill because of transport. Repairs to locomotives and trucks!!

About shale, it is splendid that you have already started. But I was surprised at your writing about the transport of shale. Shale does not stand transport (unless it is for gas: shale is said to yield more gas than coal does), and electricity should be laid on locally and a distillation plant set up on the spot to obtain oil from shale. That is what I have been told here. And I thought that Petrograd with all its resources could cope both with the task of electrification and of distillation.

Greetings,
Lenin

N.B. Cannot blockhouses be erected for the defence of Petrograd? I am sending you and Trotsky a report on this subject.

TO G. V. CHICHERIN

4/I. 1920

Comrade Chicherin,

Please forward to Litvinov (and if possible, transmit in abridged form by telegraph in code):

I have received from him a small batch of pamphlets and newspapers and am extremely disappointed. The selection has been utterly casual and careless. Obviously, no one has shown the slightest care in such an important matter as supplying Russia with Western socialist literature.

There are no pamphlets and books by the socialist leaders (although their titles and the names of the authors can be found in the Austrian, German, French, Italian and English newspapers).

The newspapers have been so poorly selected that  $\frac{1}{10}$  of them is rubbish, while, for example, out of a heap of issues of Freiheit,<sup>321</sup> the really important issues (even the most important, perhaps the only important ones) have been left out, namely, the reports of the Leipzig Congress<sup>322</sup> and the text of the resolutions.

Absolute carelessness, negligence or lack of understanding and unwillingness to understand what is needed.

We must have them (Litvinov and all members of the R.C.P. abroad and all "bureaux" and agencies) see to it that people conversant with the literature are engaged in each country (to begin with, Denmark, Holland, etc., will suffice), their duty being to collect 4-5 copies of every socialist and anarchist and communist pamphlet and book, every resolution, all reports and minutes of congresses, etc., etc., in all languages. All to be delivered to Copenhagen, Stockholm, Vienna, etc. (to Berlin as well). Messengers are available—infrequently, but they are available. The literature must be collected in good time by employed persons (Russians are slovenly and will never do this meticulously).

It is stupid to grudge money for this.

Ask Litvinov to tell this to

UNDERLININGS AND AN INSTRUCTION ON S. I. SYRTSOV'S TELEGRAM

Lenin, Chairman of the Council of People's Commissars

The position in the Don as regards food organisation is impossible. The Don food agencies have been set up on paper, but the appointed food officials are working in the Tambov and Saratov gubernias, and not where they should be. The district food agencies, set up in amateur fashion and not connected with the Don Executive Committee, are receiving no directives and instructions, and for that reason are not capable of working, and cannot counteract the army food agents who frequently commit outrageous excesses.

Copies to Eltsin, Ufa

and to Artyom Sergeyevev, Bashkir Revolutionary Committee, Bashkir Regional Committee, Sterlitamak

In stating in the telegram that "The All-Russia Central Executive Committee considers it improbable and quite out of the question that Artyom, Samoilov and Preobrazhensky could carry on agitation against the Bashkir Republic", the All-Russia C.E.C. thereby again confirmed the necessity of their most loyal observance of the Bashkir Constitution.

The telegram of the Central Committee sent later to Comrade Artyom had the same aim. Under these circumstances I am quite sure that Artyom, Preobrazhensky and Samoilo will give no real cause for complications. The members of the Bashkir Revolutionary Committee should act in the same way. Only from your telegram did I learn that Comrades Shamigulov, Izmailov and others were deported from Bashkiria by the Bashkir Revolutionary Committee; the Central Committee thought they were travelling to Moscow on their own initiative to make a report, considered it unnecessary for the five comrades to waste time on the journey and sent them back to Sterlitamak.

Your attempt to deport old Party comrades from Bashkiria, the absurd reference to their Bukharinist orientation, the persistent, though incorrect, application of the epithet "Ukrainians" to Preobrazhensky, Artyom and Samoilo—give me grounds for doubting your objectivity in this matter. Therefore I order you immediately to fulfil the telegram from the All-Russia C.E.C. of 20.I, which is still unfulfilled as regards cancellation of the conspiracy report.

TO V. D. BONCH-BRUYEVICH*

Comrade V. D. Bonch-Bruyevich,

The State Publishers may be offended that I did not and Krzhizhanovsky's pamphlet through them?<sup>339</sup> Perhaps I broke the rules? I was in a great hurry.

If it is inconvenient for you to settle the matter otherwise, would you send this note of mine to Comrade Vorovsky (I ask him to have a paper issued by the State Publishers ordering the speediest, by Sunday 1.II, publication of Krzhizhanovsky's pamphlet at the 17th Print-shop, formerly Kushnerev's, and I apologise for having sent the pamphlet direct to the press because I was in a great hurry).

Perhaps this has already been done? If not, it must be done. Give me your reply.

Yours,

Personally I fear that you are indulging in project-mongering, and that Bumazhny's and Maximov's opposition is a play at departmental game.  Supreme Economic Council

I draw special attention to the very sensible article
 "Lose No Time" by Y. Preobrazhensky in Pravda of 11.II.

It is essential to adopt his proposal<sup>343</sup> and immediately

1) draft a decree

a) on the obligatory organisation of urban farming (in all towns);

b) on measures of stimulation and development;

c) assignments (as detailed as possible) to be given in this field for the year 1920, etc.;

2) step up purchases of seed in Denmark and abroad in general;

3) step up agitation and workers' control over the measures in §1.

Please send me a brief summary of what is already being done (if possible one that would be suitable also for the press—we shall publish it in Ekonomicheskaya Zhizn, if it is not possible to do so in Pravda or Izvestia).

In this connection, it is necessary to begin an intensified and more systematic struggle against suburban bag-trading by drawing urban workers into the business of keeping an account (detailed) of crops, stocks, surpluses, collection of food products in suburban districts, and helping their procurement by the Food Commissariat agencies. I request the Food Commissariat to let me know what measures are being taken.

I fully support your reply to Smirnov. We must vehemently denounce the opponents of a buffer state<sup>345</sup> (it seems that Frumkin is such an opponent), threaten to bring them before a Party court, and demand that everyone in Siberia carry out the slogan: "not a step farther east, all-out efforts to hasten the movement of troops and locomotives to the west, to Russia". We would be idiots to allow ourselves to be drawn into a stupid movement into the heart of Siberia, permitting Denikin meanwhile to revive and the Poles to strike. It would be a crime.

If grain and timber procurement has risen, special efforts must be devoted to barges and preparations for floating, especially barges for oil, then to building houses for the Chelyabinsk and other coal workers. Cannot the Siberian prisoners of war and officers be moved to the Urals and set to work on coal and timber?

To expedite replies from the centre, obtain direct lines through the military department.

Krestinsky has replied to you. I repeat in brief. The Ishim remains in Tyumen Gubernia. You can keep Brunovsky. About meat, an order to organise salting centres has been given.

Regarding regional centres, it is necessary to tread warily and think it over carefully, so as to avoid regionalism.

If troop formation in Siberia has been overdone you should check yourself what real measures are being taken to combat this, summoning to the direct line anyone you require.

Your plans are based on deep water shipment, but Babkin proposes that the oil be transported by way of Belinskaya Bank, in shallow water off shore, so that the enemy fleet can neither capture nor sink it. With a draught of from 4 to 5 quarters he names as suitable the steamships Jambai, Ukno, Ratmir, Lev, Neva, Lyubimy, Kirghiz, Alexander, and the barges Pluto, Apollo, Medusa, Rusalka, Valeria, Stephania and others. The seizure of 15 million poods of petrol in Grozny<sup>374</sup> compels us to adopt a number of urgent and important measures, such as:

* Underlined by Lenin.—Ed.

1. Especially strict safeguarding of petrol.
Military measures. Special responsibility of army men.
2. Calculation: how much we need (maximum).
The remainder—abroad for locomotives.
3. Collection of lorries (from everywhere, particularly from the army) and their repair for transporting grain to the railway stations.
4. Mobilisation of lorries and drivers for this purpose.
5. Transport of petrol to central depots.

Perhaps you will call a conference (of people from the Commissariat for Food and the military department) on this question and submit a proposal from the conference to the Council of Defence?

Please do this urgently.

UNDERLININGS AND AN INSTRUCTION ON A. V. LUNACHARSKY'S LETTER

Comrade V. I. Lenin, Chairman of the Council of People's Commissars

You forwarded me a telegram from Kazan complaining about the lack of currency notes. I have received similar telegrams from Vyatka and Vologda gubernias. In all these places, because of the lack of money, teachers have not received salaries for three months.

Thus, it turns out that in the absolutely starving gubernias teachers go hungry for lack of foodstuffs, while in the producing gubernias such as those of Kazan, Vologda and Vyatka, in which teachers in fact could feed themselves, they are starving through lack of money.

I earnestly request you, Vladimir Ilyich, to issue some sort of directive or to put this before the Council of People's Commissars, so that currency notes issued for the needs of the gubernias will be divided proportionately, i.e.: where there is a 10-20% shortage, this shortage should be spread among all the departments. Otherwise.

what happens in practice is that absolutely all, except those engaged in education, receive their salaries....

To the Narrow Council: please put this through. Even more: it is necessary to give preference to teachers.

Chairman, Gubernia Executive Committee
Nizhni

According to information received, by a decision of the Nizhni-Novgorod Gubernia Executive Committee there was no loading of grain freights on Sunday, May 30. Bearing in mind that supplies for the Western Front, Petrograd and Moscow are almost exclusively water-borne, a stoppage in loading, even if only for one day, is impermissible and criminal. Take measures to prevent any repetition of such facts in future, and urgently report execution to me.

To be handed only personally to Stalin for personal decoding

The situation on the Western Front has turned out to be worse than Tukhachevsky and the Commander-in-Chief thought, hence the divisions you asked for must be sent there, but no more can be taken from the Caucasian Front, because there are insurrections there and the position is extremely alarming. Trotsky is arranging to send you reinforcements from the Crimean divisions, which may enable you to take two or three of them for the Kiev direction. Try to bring up the units and at all costs follow up the offensive with greater vigour. You, of course, will remember that, by a decision of the Politbureau, the offensive against the Crimea has been halted pending a further decision of the Politbureau.<sup>390</sup>

(Enclose the Siberian telegram on the census and Popov's comment.)

I suggest collecting the votes of the Politbureau members today, by telephone, for a decision such as the following: the census in Siberia to be definitely carried out simultaneously with Russia; moreover, in place of the dubious local people suspected of supporting the Kolchak regime, workers to be called in from the famine-stricken gubernias of Russia.

If they do not agree, the Politbureau is to be called tomorrow, 5.VI, in the morning. Less than 1,000 workers are needed. They can easily be transported and will be of great use.

It is therefore my absolute duty to request insistently that you hasten the experiment and carry it out today without fail, if there is the slightest possibility (all the manual work, such as regulating the engine, you should assign to others, not occupying yourself with trifles).

Will you please answer me at once by the messenger, as fully and exactly as possible. I would not be hurrying you if an immediate political-strategic decision of great importance were not called for.

Answer in detail

- (1) Can you speed things up to the maximum extent?
- (2) When will you carry out the first experiment and when (approximately) will you complete it?

Dear Comrades,

I enclose herewith the decision of the Council of Labour and Defence of 11.VI,<sup>399</sup> and again specially ask you to give this question the most serious attention.

The Moscow population can and should be mobilised to a man to haul out of the forests by hand a sufficient quantity of firewood (say, one cubic metre per adult man in 3 months—the experts can figure it out more exactly; I mention a figure as an example) to stations on the railways and narrow-gauge lines.

Unless heroic measures are taken, I shall personally get a decision put through the Council of Defence and the C.C. not only for the arrest of all the persons responsible but for their execution. Inactivity and negligence cannot be tolerated.

cipal points of agreement: the Corporation, on orders from the agent, undertakes in exchange for raw materials to supply from abroad miscellaneous commodities, materials, machinery, instruments, medicaments, etc., excepting munitions; perfumery and luxury goods, with delivery at one of the Black Sea ports, as indicated by the agent. Second, for the supply of goods the agent pays the Corporation in raw materials...

... Besides the sums indicated in point 2, the agent pays the Corporation in raw materials also a commission amounting to ten per cent of the value of the goods supplied. Fourth, the too much! raw materials: tobacco, wool, oilcakes, etc., delivered by the agent in exchange for the goods supplied are valued at the prices ruling on the world market at the time of delivery....

TO A. N. MEREZHIN<sup>403</sup>

Comrade Merezhin

I think an additional point should be formulated (on the basis of the information of Rafes and others) roughly as follows:

The experience of proletarian dictatorship in the Ukraine, especially in those parts of it where there is a mixed population, and also in Byelorussia (and +? +? Hungary?), has shown that national strife not only in the form of pogroms, of which not even the most democratic bourgeois republic is free, but also in the form of petty but all-pervading squabbling is practically disappearing. The reasons for this: 1) the interest, attention, and all the intellectual powers of the workers and working peasants are wholly engrossed in the great struggle with the bourgeoisie, a struggle that unites the working people of all nations; 2) the dictatorship of the proletariat suppresses the "freedom" of action of the bourgeoisie, petty bourgeoisie and bourgeois intelligentsia, which freedom signifies the use of their forces, influence and knowledge by the bourgeoisie to inflame the class struggle.

Cannot 2 or more concrete facts be added?

TO G. Y. ZINOVIEV

Comrade Zinoviev, Chairman of the Petrograd Executive Committee

The famous physiologist, Pavlov, asks to be allowed to go abroad in view of his straitened circumstances. To have Pavlov leave the country is hardly advisable, since he has previously made statements to the effect that, being a truthful man, he could not, in the event of the subject being brought up in conversations, avoid expressing himself against Soviet power and communism in Russia.

On the other hand, this scientist is such a great cultural asset that his forcible detention in Russia in conditions of material insecurity is unthinkable.

In view of this it would be desirable, by way of exception, to allow him a special ration and in general to ensure more or less comfortable circumstances for him exclusively.

I have heard that in the Petrograd rest homes life is very well ordered for those living there. Something of the kind could be done for Professor Pavlov at his apartment

INSTRUCTION ON I. N. SMIRNOV'S LETTER

Vladimir Ilyich,

I am sending you absolutely accurate information verified on the spot by our people, about goods intended for shipment abroad lying at the wharves. All the goods are packed and in two weeks' time will go to the mouth of the river Ob.

We have done our part. I fear that the cost of these goods will be 2-3 times in excess of what we shall be getting from Sweden.

Put pressure on the Commissariat for Foreign Trade to make use of this surplus of goods.

To be handed to the duty commissar

Zinoviev
Petrograd

Comrade Zinoviev,

I am sending the theses* tomorrow, Monday. Arrange for them to be received without any delay. Kobetsky and Vorovsky must be commissioned to prepare a business-like criticism of the Norwegian Party and the Swedish Left Party in time for the Congress.<sup>414</sup> It is necessary to have accurate and complete material. With regard to translations at the Congress itself, the matter must be organised in advance: all delegates should be seated according to languages, so that there can be simultaneous immediate translations for the Germans, French and English. This will save time. Russian is obviously necessary, for it is clear that people will insist on session in theatres.

Comrade Zinoviev,

Comrade Nikolayev,

I have received your letter of 7/VII.

I am very glad you have now started properly.

I advise you (1) to demand more officially and more insistently that all secrets should at once be revealed to you.

(2) Set up the installation, if possible, on special wooden supports, so that it can be removed instantaneously from the truck (perhaps better to use a flat-car instead of a truck) and placed on a lorry, on to the ground, and so on (for the inventor made a successful experiment, so he says, not in a truck).

(3) If you find that "the game is worth the candle", then don't be sparing with money and people for hastening the work.

TO M. M. GRUZENBERG

Comrade Gruzenberg,

Comrade Murphy has told me that the translation of the theses contains solecisms.

You must yourself undertake (or immediately organise a group to help) good editing of the translation of all the theses.

Consult the English comrades about this.

Regarding Wijnkoop: I have sent Radek his statement

(written by Wijnkoop in English). Whether the English is good, I do not know. Take from Radek everything sent by me (if necessary, forward this letter to him), and check, please, if the English is good. (The content of the statement: the Dutch Party is not responsible for "Leftism", the latter is the work of certain Dutchmen.)

(Print only this statement and my statement that I am introducing corrections in the text.<sup>417</sup>)

Regarding the quality of the English translations, you must take good care and set up a group of responsible Englishmen (with their responsibility in written form), otherwise we shall be blamed (and so will you).

Moscow

Copy to Tsyurupa, People's Commissariat for Food

Omsk, July 9. Half of the Altai and Tomsk gubernias are in the grip of a kulak movement which we are suppressing by force of arms. The cause of the insurrection is lack of commodities. From the insurgent kulaks we are confiscating grain, the whole of which has not been threshed. Work hands should be sent out urgently to thresh and load; unless you send workers we shall not be able to take the grain. A minimum of 7,000 is required at once for the Altai alone. If you are late, the opportunity will be lost. Ascertain the possibility and inform us, if you cannot send them, we shall immediately cancel the order for confiscation, because the kulaks will burn grain that is unthreshed and unguarded.

TO THEODORE ROTHSTEIN

15/VII. 1920

Dear Comrade,

Many thanks for the letters, which always contain extremely valuable information. I enclose a letter from my wife and ask you to give my regards to your wife and family, whom I met at your home in London.

About your journey to Russia, I am in two minds. You are so very important for the work in London. Let them deport you: we shall see if they dare to do so. They would have to catch you on something, otherwise there will be a row. I am not against your coming "to take a look" at Russia, but I am afraid that to quit Britain is harmful for the work.

As to the delegation, we shall discuss this in all aspects in a day or so. The same with the reply to Curzon,<sup>424</sup> who, in my opinion, wants to grossly deceive us. He won't succeed.

About sending you literature, I have taken special measures. You should know that a Russian has to be sworn at 20 times and verified 30 times to have the simplest thing done properly. Keep an eye on it and write more often (even sometimes to me)—then I shall push things on so that you get the missing publications more regularly.

I think that your guiding participation (it is possible by the pen and secretly) in the Anglo-Saxon movement is especially valuable. Here it is highly important to straighten out the line. You will receive my pamphlet against the "Leftists"* and resolutions (drafts) for the Second Congress of the Third International, and I should very much like to know your opinion.

All the very best,
Yours,

TELEPHONE MESSAGE TO L. B. KAMENEV

1. The utmost attention must be paid to collecting English writings showing that trade agreements with the Soviet Republics are more advantageous to the British bourgeoisie than unprofitable and even ruinous attempts to crush them. It is necessary to collect such writings for us, and besides this, to discuss with knowledgeable people whether in addition it would not be expedient to employ some kind of literary bureau or agency for the publication of such pamphlets, for giving lectures, and for their distribution, etc. You, of course, know whom one should consult in the first place about this.

2. It is necessary to organise through special people the regular collection, purchase, without stinting money, and dispatch to us in 5 copies, of books, articles, pamphlets, newspaper cuttings, particularly in English, but also in other languages, on questions of modern economics. As an example, Keynes's Economic Consequences of the Peace. This is the sort of publication that should be collected systematically.

3. Do the same, but only through special people, for the collection and dispatch to us in 20 copies of periodical publications of all kinds, and especially pamphlets and minutes of the following four trends: 1—communist, 2—Centrist (for example, the Independent Labour Party in Britain), 3—anarchist or near to it, 4—syndicalist, etc.

4. All this should be properly organised by a legal agreement, through someone who must be a British subject and not a Communist.

5. Please send me personally: 1—good recent reference books and summary statistical publications, geographical, political and economic, particularly in English and French, which are more easily obtainable in London, and 2—two good thermos flasks.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE COUNCIL OF LABOUR AND DEFENCE

The peace proposal by the Poles gives us an opportunity for more systematic use of the troops which it was intended to transfer from the Caucasian Front to the Western Front. I propose, therefore, that the Council of Defence draft a decision as follows:

1. The troops of the Caucasian Front to march through the entire Ukraine, the route being so calculated that each volost (of the approximately 1,900 volosts of the Ukraine) is passed through twice, first by a cavalry unit and then, after an interval, an infantry unit, to fulfil (and then check fulfilment of) the following tasks:

- (a) the collection of food (according to the quotas to be requisitioned);
- (b) the formation locally, i.e., in every village, of a double (compared to the quota) stock of food (collected in barns, in houses of priests, landowners, the rich, etc.), this stock to be guarded by the local peasants on their responsibility.

This double stock is to serve as an exchange fund; from this stock held by the peasants, grain will be taken after the local peasants have been supplied with goods, Russian and foreign, by agreement with the local peasants;

- (c) the compilation (and checking) of a list of “responsible” peasants (5-20%, etc., of the householders of each village, depending on its size, to be selected from the local rich peasants starting from the top, i.e., according to wealth).

The “responsible” peasants are to be personally answerable for the fulfilment of food and other assignments of the authorities.

After the departure of the troops, the special task of the local authorities will be to ensure the proper and safe keeping of this list (for non-fulfilment of this task—death sentence);

- (d) the disarming of the rich peasants.

Complete collection of arms. Responsibility for undiscovered arms rests on the commander of the army unit; for non-declaration of arms it rests on the person with whom they are found (death sentence), and on the whole group of “responsible” peasants (a fine, not in money, but in grain and articles; confiscation of property, arrest; work in the mines);

- (e) assistance in sowing the fields, in repairs to agricultural implements, and other necessary work (guarding stores or checking the guard over them, work on the railways, etc.) (guarding stores of salt, etc.).

2. For the purposes indicated above, a commissar or instructor to be added to each army unit (to its Communist cell) (muster 1,000 people if necessary from the Petrograd, Moscow, Ivanovo-Voznesensk workers) to control fulfilment of the tasks mentioned.

3. In “stubborn” volosts or villages, the army units either to organise a “third visit” (by troops) or to remain longer billeted (up to 2 weeks) for punishment and correction.

4. Part of these decisions to be put through the Defence Council, part through the Council of the Labour Army and the Council of People’s Commissars of the Ukraine.

5. A highly popular leaflet to be published for the peasants to explain matters in general, and the idea of the stocks of food for exchange for foreign goods, in particular.

A commission to be set up at once for publishing such a leaflet, and a series of them, as well as a number of instructions.

For drafting these proposals, a commission to be set up at once consisting of Comrades Bryukhanov and Sklyansky. Comrade Stalin to be asked to be the chairman of the commission.

Is it not possible somehow to make a check through a strict commission? Voznesensky was working effectively.

Is there not some irregularity about his removal? personal? squabbling?

LETTER TO G. V. CHICHERIN AND A TELEGRAM TO L. B. KAMENEV

14. VIII. 1920

Comrade Chicherin,

I hope you will fully inform Kamenev of all the facts showing that France and Daszynski are torpedoing the meeting in Minsk?<sup>433</sup>

This is essential. Very, very much so.

Danishevsky must be told that he should begin with a solemn declaration of

- (a) independence and sovereignty
- (b) a frontier giving more than Curzon's<sup>434</sup>
- (c) no indemnities. Isn't that so?

In reply to Kamenev's request I am sending you for coding:

To Kamenev in code

In my opinion, the whole point is that France and Daszynski are torpedoing the actual meeting in Minsk. They will probably also prevent the armistice. I am hoping that Britain will be unable to fight, and without her everything falls to the ground. There is practically no news from Poland. The little there is confirms our decision at the C.C. plenum, namely, extreme vigilance, and we are bound to win this campaign. That we have roused the workers—this is already no small gain. Lenin.

With communist greetings,
Lenin

P.S. Britain is trying to prove that we are torpedoing the meeting. All the documents must be sent urgently to Kamenev.

TO E. M. SKLYANSKY

The Commander-in-Chief dare not fret. If the military department or the Commander-in-Chief does not reject the idea of capturing Warsaw, we must capture it (what extra measures for this? tell me).

To talk of expediting the armistice when the enemy is attacking, is idiocy.

Once the Poles have gone over to an offensive along the entire line, one should not whimper (like Danishevsky) for that is ridiculous.

A counter-move should be devised: military measures (enveloping, dragging out all negotiations, etc.).

Comrade Trotsky will inform you in detail of the decision of the Politbureau,<sup>435</sup> from which you will learn that we fully share your view. It is essential to strain all efforts so that the Byelorussian workers and peasants, even if in bast shoes and unclothed, but immediately, with revolutionary speed, would give you three and four times as many reinforcements.

Further, agitation from aeroplanes for the Polish workers and peasants, to the effect that their capitalists are preventing peace and are condemning them to needless bloodshed, should be increased tenfold.

It is hardly likely that we shall capture Warsaw soon.* The enemy there has built up strength and is attacking. Do your utmost to bring this home to the British workers; write articles and theses for them yourself, teach Marxism concretely, teach them to make use of the leftward swings of the Hendersons, teach them agitation among the masses—that is your main task. Lloyd George has been duping us with pacifism and has helped Churchill to land assistance for the Poles in Danzig. That is the essence of the matter. Maintain contact with the Rumanian Ambassador.

Comrade Dzerzhinsky,

I enclose a coded message from Comrade Beloborodov.<sup>444</sup>
In my opinion the danger is immense.

I propose:

the adoption of a directive from the Political Bureau asking the Orgbureau, by arrangement with the Commissariat for Military Affairs and the Vecheka, to draw up emergency measures to combat the danger of a revolt and to mobilise sufficient army, Cheka and Party forces.

Please hand all this at once to Comrade Krestinsky (he will be away for only a few hours today) and for your part adopt all measures at once.

If we are faced with a revolt on the Kuban, our whole policy (which was spoken about in the C.C.) will crash. It is necessary, at all costs, to prevent a revolt, and not to grudge people or efforts for this. Should we not send Mantsev there?

But his report about a big defeat of the 13th Army is extremely alarming and extremely important.

... 2) The limit of territorial concessions on our part can be the frontier along the river Shara, the Oginsky Canal, the rivers Yaselda and Styr and further along the state frontier between Russia and Eastern Galicia. Shifting our frontier still more to the east would create extremely difficult strategic conditions for us, depriving us of such important railway junctions as Baranovichi, Luninets, Sarny and Rovno. Moreover, the state of our armies and the strategic position in general do not call for such a big sacrifice....

For us, the crux of the matter is: first, that we have an armistice in a short time; second, and this is the main thing, that we have a real guarantee of real peace within 10 days. Your task is to ensure this and check on the reality of the guarantee of actual fulfilment. If you do ensure this, give the maximum concessions up to the line along the river Shara, the Oginsky Canal, the rivers Yaselda and Styr and further along the state frontier between Russia and Eastern Galicia. If, however, in spite of all our efforts and concessions this can in no way be ensured, then your only task is to expose the delay of the Poles and definitely prove to us the inevitability of a winter campaign.

TO G. V. CHICHERIN<sup>458</sup>

Comrade Chicherin,

It is necessary:

1) To put before the C.C. another draft of a precise decision: the C.C. prohibits acting in such-and-such a way, and demands so-and-so.

2) To lodge a protest against each violation concretely.

3) To put through the C.C. the appointment of a responsible person (not a very "high" one).

Otherwise the result is nothing but grousing.

Publish at once in the press and inform the Congress of the Czechoslovak Social-Democratic Party<sup>459</sup> that Franz Benes's mention of a talk alleged to have taken place with me on the possibility or impossibility of a proletarian dictatorship in Czechoslovakia is a lie from beginning to end and that not only did I never talk with him but I have never even seen him. It goes without saying that my opinion of Bela Kun and of the Hungarian Revolution, as quoted by Benes, is just as foul a lie.

TO THE SIBERIAN REVOLUTIONARY COMMITTEE

Comrade I. N. Smirnov,

I am sending you for consideration the following points.<sup>460</sup>
Drop me a line about them.

Yours,
Lenin

1. Attention to be paid to the rural poor of Siberia, who are to be supplied with food from the local requisition quotas.

2. Tar production to be organised in Siberia, enlisting the local Soviets and the population (local tar production).

3. The peasants obtain a pood of wheat and mill it into the finest flour, getting 18-20 pounds. It would be better to mill into simple flour, the peasants will agree to this.

4. Special attention to be paid to the village blacksmiths' shops for repairs to agricultural machinery. Charcoal to be supplied to them.

Is it true that there have been instances in Siberia of butter being used to grease carts (instead of tar)?

NOTE TO G. M. KRZHIZHANOVSKY AND MARKINGS
ON BULLETIN No. 5 OF THE STATE COMMISSION FOR THE ELECTRIFICATION OF RUSSIA<sup>461</sup>

Comrade G. M. Krzhizhanovskiy

Gleb Maximilianovich,

Please return this to me, after reading pp. 20-21, with a couple of words.

Yours,
Lenin

... Undoubtedly, in the early stages we, as is done nowadays in all Europe and America, have to pay particular attention to the rational utilisation of the already existing electro-technical equipment. At the present time, the accelerated setting in full motion of our main existing power stations, the combined work of a group of stations, and the rational use of the electrical networks, may have an importance which it is difficult to overestimate.

Recently, throughout the provinces, we observe a widespread tendency towards the construction of new small stations, particularly in those cases where it is possible to use some kind of water power. However vital this trend may be, we should not forget that from the point of view of expediency in the matter of electrification only big district power stations are a decisive factor....

N.B.

N.B.

... At present three-quarters of the work is finished, and in the middle of July we shall start on a final summary for presenting a report on the matter to the Council of People's Commissars. Only when this work is completely finished, will I be able to give you a more concrete account of what we mean when we speak of the electrification of agriculture, industry and transport in Russia, having in view a definite sequence of works embracing, approximately, the period of the next ten years.

G. Krzhizhanovsky

This is where the question arises: up to now, in all five numbers of the Bulletin, we have had only long-term "schemes" and "plans", but nothing immediate.

What exactly (precisely) is lacking for "accelerating the setting in motion of the existing power stations"?

This is the crux. Yet there is not a word about this.

What is lacking? Workers? Skilled workers? Machinery? Metal? Fuel? Anything else?

A "plan" to obtain everything that is lacking must be drawn up and published at once.

1/X. 1920

Comrade Trotsky,

I enclose herewith information from Comrade Sklyansky.<sup>465</sup>

It appears that the offensive against the Crimea has been put off until 27/X!!!

Is there a decision of the Revolutionary Military Council of the Republic on this???

The Commander-in-Chief boasted to me that by October 10 (or 8) he would have everything ready for the offensive. Does this mean he lied?

When was it decided to send Budyonny there? Why, even without him forces three times as large were promised.

Finally, if the old plan is to be changed at all, is it not enough to give 1 division?

It turns out that all the calculations of the Commander-in-Chief are not worth a damn and are changed weekly like those of an ignoramus! Extremely dangerous vacillations!

Comrade Bryukhanov,

1) The description relates to the period of the landing. After it was liquidated the feeling and the state of affairs changed completely as, incidentally, Lander told me yesterday.

2) Lander also tells me that precisely now, after the successful suppression of a number of revolts (connected with the landing), grain collection (chiefly in the Kuban area, where there is plenty of grain) has gone forward and will go forward.

3) In Lander's opinion, we can take there more than the estimated requisition quota.

Draw Frumkin's attention to this in a confidential letter (not a telegram) to him. We must make the most of this opportunity, not lose time (it will be worse later), and apply our efforts to the Kuban.

For scorbutics and other patients, I think, we should at once allow purchases to be made on the free market, subject to certain rules (perhaps also a commission and with the co-operation of the state farms).

Regarding the protest of the Petrograd Central Committee, I propose that votes be collected. I vote for:

- 1) mobilising Zinoviev;
- 2) cancelling general mobilisation of men.

In view of the whole situation on the Polish front and in connection with it, particularly following my night conversation with Joffe, who energetically assures us of his own, and our military expert's, conviction that the Poles, in point of fact, will not be able to prevent the armistice (by threatening a break, Joffe compelled the Poles to abandon the demand for a definite amount of gold. Joffe says: the Poles are afraid of a break even more than we are), the Politbureau of the Central Committee instructs the military authorities to incur a certain amount of risk and take some units from the South-Western Front for the speediest and surest liquidation of Wrangel.

The Stavropol peasants (who have brought grain for the children) complain that they are not getting from the co-operatives wheel-grease (the stores have it),

The herrings were allowed to go bad, but they were not given out.

There is terrible discontent. The Gubernia Food Commissar says: nothing will be given until the whole requisition quota is fulfilled.

They insist on the need for goods to be issued immediately.

They say that the quota of 27 million poods is excessive, seed corn is being taken, and there is bound to be under-sowing.

Stavropol Gubernia—average harvest (27).

Kuban—better than Stavropol (37 million poods).

TO THE CONTROL COMMISSION OF THE R.C.P.(B.)

Comrades Dzerzhinsky, Muranov, Preobrazhensky, and others

I earnestly request you to receive personally Comrades Ratnikov, Rybakov, Romanov and Glazunov from the uyezd Party conference (Alexandrov Uyezd, Vladimir Gubernia) about a case of flagrant, exceedingly glaring abuses (Soviet and Party) at the Troitsk Equipment Works, and particularly about the difficulties experienced by Party members in taking the case to the centre and getting it speedily examined if even through Party channels. Apparently—this is my impression—there is something wrong in the Gubernia Party Committee as well. I enclose a copy of the decision of the Orgbureau.

TO A. I. RYKOV AND I. I. RADCHENKO

28. X. 1920

- 1) Comrade Rykov (or, if he has not yet recovered, Comrade Milyutin)
- 2) and Comrade I. I. Radchenko, Chief Peat Committee
- Copies to: 3) R. E. Klasson (to be found through Radchenko)
- 4) Krzhizhanovsky, Chairman of the State Commission for the Electrification of Russia
- 5) Sklyansky (§4) and Trotsky
- 6) Lezhava and Lomonosov
- 7) the Cinema Department
- 8) Sosnovsky
- 9) Shatunovsky (Chief Transport Commission).

On 27. X. 1920, a film before a large Party audience showed the working of a new hydraulic pump (of engineer R. E. Klasson) which mechanises the extraction of peat, as compared with the old method.

In this connection, an exchange of opinions took place between engineer Klasson, Comrades Radchenko and Morozov—representatives of the Chief Peat Committee, Comrade Shatunovsky (from the Chief Transport Commission), and myself.

This exchange of opinions revealed that the heads of the Chief Peat Committee fully agree with the inventor on the great importance of this invention. In all the work for restoring the national economy of the R.S.F.S.R. and for the country's electrification, mechanisation of peat extraction makes it possible to go ahead immeasurably more rapidly and firmly and on a broader front. It is therefore essential immediately to take a number of measures on a national scale to develop this work.

Please discuss this question immediately and give me without delay your comments (corrections, additions, counter-plans, and so on) on the following proposals arising from yesterday's preliminary exchange of opinions.

1. To regard work on applying the hydraulic method of peat extraction as of prime state importance and therefore especially urgent-To pass a decision to this effect through the Council of People's Commissars on Saturday, 30/X.

2. To instruct all chief committees (and other bodies), on whose support the successful work of the Commission (or committee?) for Hydraulic Peat Extraction (under the Chief Peat Committee) mainly depends, to delegate their representatives (preferably Communists or, in any case, people known to be conscientious and particularly energetic) to take a permanent part in this commission. To make them responsible, in particular, for the speediest fulfilment, without any procrastination, of the orders and requests of this commission. To give the Council of People's Commissars the names and addresses of these representatives.

3. The same in regard to some of the most important factories involved. List of these factories to be drawn up.

4. To instruct the Naval Department to have its own representative on the commission, one fully acquainted with the stocks of materials and technical facilities of this department.

5. To issue Red Army rations to the group of people on whose work the rapid and complete success of the matter directly depends, increasing at the same time their remuneration so as to enable them to devote themselves wholly and completely to their work. To instruct the Commission for Hydraulic Peat Extraction to send immediately to the People's Commissariat for Food and the All-Russia Central Council of Trade Unions a list (exact) of these people, indicating standards of remuneration, bonuses, etc.

6. To discuss immediately with the People's Commissariat for Foreign Trade what orders should be placed at once with Swedish and German factories (perhaps engaging there one or several prominent chemists) so that by the summer of 1921 we can receive what is necessary for the speediest and widest application of the hydraulic method. In particular, to make use of Comrade Lomonosov who is due to leave for Sweden and Germany within the next few days.

7. To instruct the Cinema Department (of the People's Commissariat for Education?) to arrange for the film of the hydraulic method to be shown on a wide scale (particularly in Petrograd, Ivanovo-Voznesensk, Moscow and peat-extraction localities) with the simultaneous reading, without fail, of a brief and popular leaflet (ask Comrade Sosnovsky to edit it) explaining the gigantic importance of mechanising peat extraction and of electrification.

8. I fix the first report of the Commission for the Hydraulic Method of Peat Extraction to the Council of People's Commissars for 30. X. 1920.<sup>483</sup>

V. Ulyanov (Lenin)
Chairman, C.P.C.

P.S. Comrade Rykov, should not the question be raised of using more of the materials and technical facilities of the Naval Department for the needs of the production of the means of production? Why should we want new battleships and the like? Aren't they out of place just now? Shatunovskiy (take notice of him, he is a devoted and valuable man; a worker, studied mathematics abroad) says (according to Sosnovsky) that in the Naval Department Trotsky discovered something like a million poods of first-grade steel (for battleships) and took it for the Chief Transport Commission. Check this, think it over, perhaps we shall put it before the Council of Defence or the Council of People's Commissars.

Yours,

In reply to your No. 001/III. I am indignant at your optimistic tone, when you yourself report that there is only one chance in a hundred that the main task, set long ago, will be successful. If things are so outrageously bad, I ask you to discuss measures of the utmost urgency for bringing up heavy artillery, for constructing lines for its transport, for getting sappers, and so on.

INSTRUCTION
ON N. A. SEMASHKO'S TELEPHONE MESSAGE

At its sitting on October 4, the Council of People's Commissars decided to ask the Revolutionary Military Council of the Western Front to vacate the university premises in Smolensk, and direct the Revolutionary Military Council of the Republic to enforce this decision by telegraph. In pursuance of the decision of the Council of People's Commissars, Comrade Sklyansky transmitted this instruction to the Revolutionary Military Council for fulfilment. Nevertheless, up to now the university premises have not been vacated by the Western Front Headquarters. In view of the extreme need of the university (of a special faculty) for premises, I am submitting a complaint to you on account of the non-fulfilment of the decision of the Council of People's Commissars and ask for categorical orders to be issued to the Revolutionary Military Council of the Western Front.

Semashko
People's Commissar for Health

Comrade Sklyansky

Carry out without delay. Report on fulfilment and I will take up the question of non-compliance and punishment in the Narrow Council.

The question is of tremendous importance for our victory in the south, and it is most important that the boots be made quickly. I request you to look into this urgently, and to take steps to ensure that the boots are actually made in the time demanded by the Commander-in-Chief, Comrade Kamenev.

NOTES

<sup>1</sup> Lenin's instruction was written on an order to the Red Guard Staff issued by the Military Revolutionary Committee of the Petrograd Soviet. The order gave instructions for petrol, four artillery batteries, three motorcars, field telephones and cyclists or motorcyclists to be dispatched to the Pulkovo headquarters at positions near Tsarskoye Selo.

The order called for the dispatch of petrol, a motorcar, two artillery batteries, sappers for trench-digging, motorcycle or bicycle messengers and maps of the locality, to the Staff of the Izmailovo Regiment on the main road to Moscow. The Military Revolutionary Committee proposed also that "a joint staff for the operation as a whole" should be set up and food supplies organised for the Red Guard. p. 43

The note was read out at a sitting of the Petrograd Committee of the Party. In a resolution on the current situation, the Petrograd Committee stated that the government in the proletarian republic had to be a government of the Soviets of Workers', Soldiers' and Peasants' Deputies, that the task of Soviet power was to put into effect the revolutionary programme advanced by the Bolsheviks, and that any departure from it was impermissible. This resolution was sent to the Party Central Committee.

On November 3 (16), the Central Committee presented an ultimatum to the opposition minority demanding complete subordination to the decisions of the Central Committee (see present edition, Vol. 26, pp. 280-82). The conciliators, however, refused to submit to Party discipline, and resigned from the Central Committee and the Council of People's Commissars. The Central Committee branded them as saboteurs (see present edition, Vol. 26, pp. 302-03). New people, loyal to the cause of the Party, were brought into the government. p. 43

- <sup>3</sup> The letter to Y. M. Sverdlov apparently concerns F. F. Obratzov, who had been received by Lenin as the representative from the peasants of four volosts of Tver Gubernia.

At the top of the letter, Lenin wrote the words: "First floor, room 39." This was the room in Smolny where Y. M. Sverdlov worked after his election on November 8 (21), 1917, as Chairman of the All-Russia Central Executive Committee. p. 44

- <sup>4</sup> Lenin wrote this letter because the representative of the International Association for Information of the Labour Press of America, France and Great Britain, the Rumanian journalist Nicolae Cocea, at that time in Petrograd, had requested him on behalf of the Association to reply to the following six questions: "1) Will the Government of People's Commissars continue with the same vigour its former home policy and its international efforts on behalf of peace? 2) What great reforms are being planned by the present government for establishing a socialist system in Russia? 3) After the Constituent Assembly is convened will the Government of People's Commissars be responsible to it as in constitutional states, or not? 4) Do you think that the peace Russia proposes will put an end to militarism throughout the world? 5) When and how do you intend to begin demobilising the Russians? 6) Do you think that with the present state of Europe the complete realisation of socialism is possible?"

In a letter in reply to Lenin, Nicolae Cocea assured him that his conditions in regard to the publication of his replies would be fully observed. Lenin wrote on Cocea's letter: "Reply given 10/XI. 1917." Lenin's replies to the questions put to him have not been found.

The document published here was discovered in Rumania. In 1960 the Central Committee of the Rumanian Workers' Party presented it to the Central Committee of the C.P.S.U. p. 44

- <sup>5</sup> On November 22 (December 5), 1917, the Council of People's Commissars adopted a decree on courts of law, which was published the following day in the newspaper Pravda. On November 24 (December 7), in connection with this decree, the question of courts of law was discussed at a meeting of the Petrograd Soviet of Workers' and Soldiers' Deputies. The Soviet passed a resolution approving the decree and indicated practical measures for its implementation. The district Soviets were instructed to immediately begin the election of local judges. p. 45

- <sup>6</sup> Mensheviks—an opportunist trend among Russian Social-Democrats, one of the varieties of international opportunism. It was formed at the Second Congress of the R.S.D.L.P. (in 1903) out of the opponents of the Leninist Iskra. At this Congress the election of the Party's central bodies resulted in Lenin's supporters winning a majority (the Russian word for majority is bolshinstvo) and they were therefore called Bolsheviks, while the opportunists were left in the minority (in Russian menshinstvo) and were given the name Mensheviks.

The Mensheviks came out against the Party's revolutionary programme. They were opposed to the hegemony of the proletariat in the revolution, and the alliance of the working class and the peasantry, and were in favour of an agreement with the liberal bourgeoisie.

After the defeat of the 1905-07 revolution the Mensheviks wanted to liquidate the illegal proletarian revolutionary party. In January 1912, the Sixth All-Russia Party Conference expelled the Menshevik liquidators from the R.S.D.L.P.

In 1917 representatives of the Mensheviks entered the bourgeois Provisional Government, and after the victory of the Great October Socialist Revolution the Mensheviks together with the other counter-revolutionary parties waged a struggle against Soviet power. p. 47

<sup>7</sup> Lenin's name was put on the list of candidates to the Constituent Assembly from the Central Committee of the R.S.D.L.P.(B.) by five electoral areas: Petrograd—the capital, Petrograd Gubernia, Ufa, the Baltic Fleet and the Northern Front. In addition, Lenin was nominated as the candidate to the Constituent Assembly from Moscow. The elections to the Constituent Assembly were held on November 12 (25), 1917. On November 27 (December 10) the All-Russia Committee for Elections to the Constituent Assembly requested members of the Constituent Assembly who had been returned by several areas to present a written statement indicating the area for which they accepted election. Having been elected by several areas, Lenin, too, presented such a statement. (See also Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 50, Document 23.) p. 48

<sup>8</sup> In November and December 1917, counter-revolutionary elements in Petrograd organised the looting of liquor stores and shops. A state of siege was declared in Petrograd. A committee to combat looting was set up under the Petrograd Soviet. G. I. Blagonravov was appointed Military Commissar Extraordinary of Petrograd to combat drunkenness and looting.

On December 5-6 (18-19), a counter-revolutionary organisation led by Constitutional-Democrats and Black-Hundred elements, which aimed at overthrowing Soviet rule and restoring the monarchy, was discovered. It allocated large sums of money for looting and provocations as one of the means of struggle, organised gangs and issued special leaflets. p. 48

<sup>10</sup> In his memorandum addressed to Lenin, A. S. Solovyov drew attention to the Ukhta oilfields and asked that an order be issued to have them inspected and exploited. He enclosed with the memo a detailed description of the qualities of the Ukhta oil based on analyses of it.

Today, the Ukhta district (Komi A.S.S.R.) has a well-developed oil industry, with enterprises for oil extraction and processing. p. 50

<sup>11</sup> P. A. Kozmin was then Deputy Chairman of the Special Defence Council. In his recollections entitled V. I. Lenin i spetsialisty (V. I. Lenin and the Experts), Kozmin quoted Lenin's note and wrote that after the discussion of the question raised in it "the commission of saboteurs was removed". p. 51

<sup>12</sup> On his arrival in Petrograd in December 1917, the French socialist Charles Dumas asked Lenin to receive him, mentioning that they were already acquainted. Lenin and Krupskaya met Charles Dumas in Paris, where they lived from December 1908 to June 10 (23), 1912.

During the First World War (1914-18), Dumas held social-chauvinist views, for which Lenin sharply criticised him in his work The Collapse of the Second International (see present edition, Vol. 21, pp. 209-10). p. 51

<sup>13</sup> On December 12 (25), 1917, the First All-Ukraine Congress of Soviets held in Kharkov proclaimed the Ukraine a Soviet Republic and elected the All-Ukraine Central Executive Committee of Soviets. In a telegram to the Council of People's Commissars on December 13 (26), the Ukrainian Central Executive Committee proclaimed the unity of interests of the peoples of the Ukraine and Soviet Russia. On December 16 (29), the Council of People's Commissars sent a telegram in reply, greeting the formation of "truly popular Soviet rule in the Ukraine" and promising "the now government of the fraternal republic full support in every way in the struggle for peace and also in the transfer of all land, factories and banks to the working people of the Ukraine".

On December 19, 1917 (January 1, 1918), the C.P.C. appointed G. K. Orjonikidze Acting Commissar Extraordinary of the Ukraine for co-ordinating the activities of Soviet organisations functioning in the Ukraine. p. 52

The Ukrainian Central Rada—a counter-revolutionary bourgeois-nationalist organisation. After the victory of the October Revolution it proclaimed itself the supreme organ of the "Ukrainian People's Republic" and began an open struggle against Soviet power.

At the First All-Ukraine Congress of Soviets held in Kharkov in December 1917, the Ukraine was proclaimed a Soviet Republic.

lic. The Congress declared the power of the Central Rada overthrown. The Council of People's Commissars of the R.S.F.S.R. recognised the Ukrainian Soviet Government as the sole legitimate government of the Ukraine. In January 1918, Soviet troops in the Ukraine launched an offensive and on January 26 (February 8) seized Kiev and deposed the bourgeois Rada.

The Central Rada, routed and driven from the territory of the Soviet Ukraine, and having no support among the working masses, allied itself with the German imperialists in order to overthrow Soviet power and restore the bourgeois regime in the Ukraine. During the peace negotiations between the Soviet Republic and Germany, the Rada sent its delegation to Brest-Litovsk and behind the back of the Soviet delegation concluded a separate peace with Germany, by which it undertook to supply Germany with Ukrainian grain, coal and raw materials in return for military assistance in the struggle against Soviet power. In March 1918 the Rada returned to Kiev with the Austrian and German invaders and became their puppet. At the end of April the interventionists dismissed the Rada, realising that it was incapable of suppressing the revolutionary movement in the Ukraine and ensuring delivery of the required food supplies. p. 53

- <sup>15</sup> On January 5 (18), 1918, the Constituent Assembly convened by the Soviet Government opened in the Taurida Palace in Petrograd. After the counter-revolutionary majority of the Constituent Assembly had refused to recognise the Soviet Government and its decrees, and had rejected the Declaration of Rights of the Working and Exploited People proposed by the All-Russia Central Executive Committee, the Bolshevik group led by Lenin walked out. Late the same night the Left Socialist-Revolutionaries also walked out. There remained in the hall only the Constitutional-Democrats, Right Socialist-Revolutionaries and Mensheviks.

By the decree of the All-Russia Central Executive Committee of January 6 (19) the bourgeois Constituent Assembly was dissolved. p. 54

- <sup>16</sup> A. I. Shingaryov and F. F. Kokoshkin, former ministers in the bourgeois Provisional Government, were arrested after the October Revolution and confined in the Peter and Paul Fortress, whence, owing to the state of their health, they were transferred to the Mariinskaya hospital. On the night of January 6 (19), 1918, they were killed by sailors, among whom were anarchists and criminal elements, who broke into the hospital.

On Lenin's instructions, an investigating commission was immediately appointed. Those guilty of the murder were arrested and tried. p. 54

- <sup>17</sup> This refers to some sailors of the Second Guards Naval Depot, who illegally arrested three officers. Under the influence of counter-revolutionary agitation, these sailors defied the laws of the Soviet Government, went on drinking bouts, and carried out illegal searches and arrests. They were disarmed and arrested.

The other, better, part of the men went to the Southern Front, where together with the Red Army units they fought heroically against the interventionists and whiteguards. p. 55

- <sup>18</sup> This document and the note to the secretary which follows it were written by Lenin in connection with a memorandum received from the Food and Economic Committee of the Territorial Soviet of Western Siberia and the Urals, which reported that the Omsk railway was sabotaging the dispatch of food consignments to the west, as a result of which over a thousand loaded trucks remained stationary. The committee requested the appointment of an emergency commission of investigation. This memorandum was delivered by delegates from Urals factories, who had arrived with a train-load of grain. p. 55
- <sup>19</sup> At the time of the Communist Party's efforts to extricate Soviet Russia from the imperialist war K. Radek's standpoint was that of the "Left Communists". p. 57
- <sup>20</sup> The Tribunists—members of the Social-Democratic Party of Holland whose press organ was the newspaper De Tribune. They constituted the Left wing of the labour movement in Holland and during the imperialist world war (1914-18) their stand was, in the main, internationalist. In 1918 the Tribunists founded the Communist Party of Holland. p. 58
- <sup>21</sup> The same day, in accordance with Lenin's directive, orders were issued for money to be given to Luteraan to travel to Russia and join the ranks of the Red Guard. p. 58
- <sup>22</sup> On January 16 (29), 1918, Soviet troops liberated the town of Cherkassy and Bakhmach railway junction, and mounted a successful offensive against Kiev, where the main forces of the Ukrainian Centra Rada were concentrated. p. 59
- <sup>23</sup> This refers to the reports in the Swedish bourgeois press concerning the revolution that had started in Finland.
On January 27 (new style), 1918, the bourgeois government of Svinhufvud was overthrown and power passed into the hands of the workers. On January 29, a Finnish revolutionary government was set up—the Council of People's Representatives—which included E. Gylling, O. Kuusinen, Y. Sirola, A. Taimi and others. But the proletarian revolution was victorious only in southern Finland. The Svinhufvud government, entrenched in the north, appealed to the government of imperial Germany for assistance. Owing to the intervention of the German armed forces, the workers' revolution in Finland was crushed on May 2, 1918, after a bitter civil war which lasted for three months. A period of white terror set in in Finland and thousands of revolutionary workers and peasants were executed or tortured to death in the prisons. p. 60
- <sup>24</sup> This document is the reply to a telegram from Arthur Henderson, who, on behalf of the British Labour Party, proposed to Lenin that delegates should be sent from the Bolshevik Party to a conference in London of socialists of the Entente countries to be convened on February 20, 1918, with the aim of achieving a common agreement on the problems of the war. p. 60

- <sup>25</sup> On January 28 (February 10), 1918, at the Brest-Litovsk peace conference—contrary to Lenin's directive that a peace treaty should be signed if the Germans presented an ultimatum demanding it—Trotsky declared that the Soviet Government refused to sign a peace treaty on the terms put forward by Germany, but that it considered the war at an end and was demobilising the army. The same day, without informing the Central Committee of the R.C.P.(B.) and the Council of People's Commissars, Trotsky sent to the Headquarters of the Supreme Commander-in-Chief what was tantamount to a provocative telegram instructing him to issue an order on the night of the same day ending the state of war with Germany and her allies and demobilising the Russian army. The telegram did not mention that the peace negotiations in Brest had been broken off, the inference from its text being that the conference had culminated in the conclusion of peace. In the early morning on January 29 (February 11), Supreme Commander-in-Chief N. V. Krylenko, on the basis of Trotsky's telegram, issued an order which announced that peace had been concluded and called for the cessation of military operations on all fronts and demobilisation of the army. It was in consequence of Krylenko's order that Lenin sent this telegram and the one following it. p. 60

- <sup>26</sup> The First Russian Society of Communist Agricultural Workers was organised early in 1918 on the initiative of workers at the Obukhov Factory in Petrograd. Lenin greatly assisted in its organisation. In March 1918, members of the society with their families went to Kazakhstan, where they settled and were given land to cultivate. Civil war prevented the development of the Petrograd workers' initiative. The communards failed to reap even their first harvest. Kulaks and White Cossacks attacked the commune and broke it up. p. 61

- <sup>27</sup> The instruction was written by Lenin beneath the text of a telegram received from the Command of the Baltic Fleet. The telegram stated: "A Swedish steamer, a cruiser and a destroyer flying the Swedish naval flag, arrived off the Öland Island, landed 15 Swedish marines, and by threatening to use their arms forced our communications personnel to retreat."

Lenin simultaneously sent a telegram to the Finnish People's Government (see the document that follows). p. 63

- <sup>28</sup> The revolutionary People's Government of Finland sent a protest to the Swedish Government in connection with the landing of their troops on the Aland Islands. Sweden shortly withdrew her troops from the islands. In mid-March 1918, German troops were landed there and were used by the German Government to fight against the Finnish revolution. p. 64

- <sup>29</sup> This refers to General Alexeyev's letter to the French Mission in Kiev, which was intercepted in Novokhopersk. It was published on February 19, 1918, in Izvestia No. 28. In the letter, General Alexeyev asked the French Mission for assistance in the struggle against the Soviet state, since his troops were sustaining heavy defeats and were forced to withdraw from the Don territory. In describing the situation in the Don and Kuban regions, Alexeyev had to admit that he had been mistaken in counting on the Cossacks. "The ideas of Bolshevism," he wrote, "have found supporters among the broad mass of Cossacks." p. 65
- <sup>30</sup> Lenin's inquiry was written in connection with the stock-taking of goods in warehouses which was being carried out by the Supreme Economic Council. In reply, Rykov informed Lenin that: 1) lists had been drawn up of goods in private, military, railway and other warehouses; 2) responsibility for guarding the stores lay with the organisations to which they belonged; goods were released from the warehouses on delivery orders issued by the appropriate central bodies (Central Committee of Textile Industry, Central Soap Board, etc.); 3) rationing and distribution by ration cards was being carried out by the town Food Committee through co-operative shops and private firms; 4) there was very little of confiscated products. p. 67
- <sup>31</sup> This note is a reply to the following request from V. N. Podbel'sky, Commissar for Posts and Telegraphs of Moscow and Moscow Region: "We have just been informed by telephone on behalf of Trotsky that Austria-Hungary is said to have declared its refusal to advance against Russia. Please contact Trotsky or one of the other People's Commissars immediately by telephone, check this information and let us know. The Soviet of Workers' Deputies is at present in session here and awaits verification of this report. - <sup>32</sup> The Party Central Committee, at its meeting on February 22, 1918, discussed the question of procuring from Britain and France arms and food necessary for the defence of the Soviet Republic against the advancing German troops. This was opposed by the "Left Communists", who regarded any agreement with the imperialists as impermissible in principle.
 Lenin could not attend the meeting and therefore sent his opinion to the Central Committee.
 The Party Central Committee adopted a resolution recognising the need to use every means to arm and equip the Red Army, including that of obtaining armaments and equipment from governments of capitalist countries, while at the same time pursuing a fully independent foreign policy. On the same day a sitting of the Council of People's Commissars also passed a decision in favour of obtaining arms and food supplies from Britain and France (see also present edition, Vol. 27, pp. 36-39). p. 67

In an effort to maintain their influence among the peasants, the Left Socialist-Revolutionaries entered into an agreement with the Bolsheviks. They pledged themselves to carry out the general policy of the Soviet Government and were given posts in the Council of People's Commissars and on the boards of several People's Commissariats.

But differences with the Bolsheviks on basic issues of the theory and practice of socialist construction soon made themselves felt. In January and February 1918, the Central Committee of the Left Socialist-Revolutionary Party began a campaign against the conclusion of the Brest Peace Treaty with Germany. When the treaty had been signed and ratified by the Fourth Congress of Soviets in March 1918, the Left Socialist-Revolutionaries withdrew from the Council of People's Commissars. In July 1918 the Central Committee of the Left Socialist-Revolutionaries organised the provocative assassination of Mirbach, the German Ambassador in Moscow, and launched an armed revolt against Soviet power. Having lost all support among the masses, the Left Socialist-Revolutionary Party finally took the path of armed struggle against Soviet rule. p. 68

<sup>35</sup> The Sovnarkom (Council of People's Commissars) of the Petrograd Labour Commune was set up by a decision of the Petrograd Soviet of Workers' and Soldiers' Deputies on March 11, 1918, owing to the Soviet Government being transferred from Petrograd to Moscow.

At the end of April 1918, the Congress of Soviets of the Northern Region established, for military and economic purposes, a Union of Communes of the Northern Region, which included also Petrograd Gubernia. On February 24, 1919, by a decision of the Third Congress of Soviets of the Northern Region, the Union of Communes of the Northern Region and the Sovnarkom which headed it, were abolished. p. 72

<sup>37</sup> The city Customs House was on Gutuyev Island in Petrograd. During April-June 1918, 1,180 truck-loads of various goods were evacuated from the Gutuyev Customs House. p. 72

<sup>38</sup> This refers to a resolution passed by the Central Executive Committee of Siberian Soviets in connection with the landing of Japanese troops in Vladivostok on the morning of April 5, 1918. It protested against the illegitimate actions of the Japanese Government; a state of war was declared in Siberia and all local Soviets were instructed to immediately step up the organisation of the Red Army.

Centrosibir—the Central Executive Committee of Siberian Soviets; was elected by the First Congress of Siberian Soviets, held in Irkutsk from October 16 (29) to October 24 (November 6), 1917. After the temporary downfall of Soviet power in Siberia (in the summer of 1918) Centrosibir ceased its activity. p. 75

<sup>39</sup> This refers to the Soviet Government's talks with representatives of the U.S.A., Britain and France in connection with the landing of Japanese troops in Vladivostok; the talks took place on the evening of April 5, 1918.

The Soviet Government's communique on the landing of Japanese troops in Vladivostok, written on April 5 and published in Pravda and Izvestia on April 6, 1918, pointed out that resistance to the Japanese invasion and a relentless struggle against their agents and accomplices within the country was a matter of life and death for the Soviet Republic, for the working people of the whole of Russia. On April 7, 1918, Lenin sent a telegram with directives to the Vladivostok Soviet, warning that the interventionists were sure to advance and demanding that the Communists of the Far East without delay should start preparing to fight the foreign intervention (see present edition, Vol. 27, p. 226). p. 75

Dyrenkov came to Moscow to report to the Supreme Economic Council on the work of the Rybinsk Economic Council. This report on the economic situation in Rybinsk was made at a sitting of the Board of the Supreme Economic Council on April 15, 1918; on a proposal by Lenin, it was decided to grant an immediate loan to Rybinsk. Lenin had a talk with Dyrenkov on the economic situation of the Soviet Republic, the state of industry in Rybinsk and the measures taken by the Rybinsk Economic Council. p. 77

Bonds and Other Interest-bearing Securities. The first two drafts were prepared by the Supreme Economic Council. After examining them, Lenin crossed out the first draft, edited the second, and sent it to Bogolepov and Gukovsky at the People's Commissariat for Finance. The draft, after being revised in the People's Commissariat for Finance, was re-edited by Lenin, given a heading and, on April 17, 1918, submitted for consideration to the Council of People's Commissars. The following decision on the draft was adopted: "To be referred to the People's Commissariats for Foreign Affairs and Justice for their consideration with the assistance of experts, and the conclusion to be presented to the next sitting of the Council of People's Commissars on April 18." On April 18, the decree was endorsed by the Council of People's Commissars, and on April 20 it was published in Izvestia No. 78.
p. 78

<sup>43</sup> I. Y. Yakovlev established the first Chuvash school in the city of Simbirsk (now Ulyanovsk), the birthplace of Lenin. He compiled the first Chuvash alphabet and primer, and did a great deal towards educating the Chuvash people.

In reply to his inquiry Lenin received a telegram on May 4, 1918, saying that Yakovlev continued as chairman of the courses and seminary for women.
p. 79

<sup>44</sup> Lenin's letter was due to the following circumstance. On January 4 (17), 1918, the Council of People's Commissars adopted a decree on the reorganisation of the Red Cross on the basis of the abolished Chief Board of the Red Cross that had existed under the tsarist government, making over its property and funds to the state. The work of reorganising the Red Cross was entrusted (§3 of Section 1 of the decree) to a committee of representatives of Soviet, military and public organisations. The committee was instructed to submit to the Council of People's Commissars through the Council of Medical Collegiums a plan for reorganising the Red Cross institutions. However, the committee failed to fulfil the tasks entrusted to it, and this was brought to the notice of Lenin by V. M. Bonch-Bruyevich, a member of the Red Cross committee.
p. 79

<sup>45</sup> This refers to preparations for a monetary reform in order to establish a stable Soviet currency and overcome the inflation caused by the war and the economic policy of the tsarist government and the bourgeois Provisional Government. Lenin raised the question of the need for a monetary reform in December 1917 in his "Draft Decree on the Nationalisation of the Banks and on Measures Necessary for Its Implementation" (see present edition, Vol. 26, p. 393). Preparations for the monetary reform were made under the direct guidance of Lenin. He urged more speed in preparing and issuing new, Soviet currency notes, and went into all details of the proposed designs. (See this volume, documents 125 and 126, and also Lenin Miscellany XXI, p. 180.)

Owing to the foreign military intervention and the Civil War, and the transition to the policy of War Communism, the monetary reform was not carried out in that period. The first Soviet monetary reform on the basis of Lenin's principles was effected in 1922-24. p. 81

- <sup>46</sup> This letter is a reply to Raymond Robins, a member of the American Red Cross Mission. It was written in English. At the head of the letter, Lenin wrote: "Reply 30.IV.1918."

On the eve of his departure from Soviet Russia for the United States, R. Robins wrote to Lenin expressing sincere thanks for the assistance given him in his work for the American Red Cross Mission.

A few days later, on May 11, 1918, Lenin wrote a letter addressed "To All Soviets of Workers' and Soldiers' Deputies and Other Soviet Organisations", requesting them "to give every assistance to Colonel Robins and the other members of the American Red Cross Mission for their unhindered and speedy journey from Moscow to Vladivostok". p. 82

- <sup>47</sup> Lenin wrote this letter to P. P. Malinovsky, Acting People's Commissar for the Properties of the Republic, in connection with the implementation of the decree of the Council of People's Commissars "On the Monuments of the Republic", adopted on April 12, 1918, and published on April 14 in Pravda and Izvestia. The decree set the task of removing monuments to the tsars and their servants that were of no historical or artistic value, and of erecting revolutionary monuments. A special commission, consisting of the People's Commissar for Education, the People's Commissar for the Properties of the Republic and the head of the Fine Arts Department of the People's Commissariat for Education, was instructed to determine which monuments in Moscow and Petrograd were to be removed, and advised to enlist the services of artists in designing new, revolutionary monuments. The Council of People's Commissars proposed that by May 1 the commission should have removed the ugliest monuments and submitted the first models of new monuments, and should also hasten arrangements for replacing old inscriptions, emblems and street names by new ones reflecting the ideas and sentiments of revolutionary Russia.

Lenin attached great importance to the implementation of this decree, the progress of which was discussed at the sittings of the Council of People's Commissars on July 8, 17 and 30, 1918. Lenin repeatedly criticised the heads of the People's Commissariats for Education and for the Properties of the Republic, and the heads of the Moscow Soviet, for the unsatisfactory implementation of the decree (see this volume, Document 109, and present edition, Vol. 35, documents 171 and 176, pp. 360, 368). p. 82

- <sup>48</sup> This telegram is in reply to one from Ekaterinburg dated April 30, 1918, from the Regional Board of Nationalised Enterprises, reporting that rumours were current about the denationalisation of the Bogoslovsk mining district. Lenin attached great importance to the speedy exposure of these false rumours which could mislead the working masses. On the telegram from Ekaterinburg, Lenin wrote the following note: "Received 2/V.1918 at 7 p.m. I demand investigation into the reason for two days' delay. Lenin." p. 83

- <sup>49</sup> This memorandum was adopted at a meeting of Lenin and Bolshevik members of the Board of the People's Commissariat for Agriculture in connection with the demand of Maria Spiridonova and V. A. Karelin, leaders of the Left Socialist-Revolutionaries, that the Left Socialist-Revolutionaries be given complete control of the People's Commissariat for Agriculture. This demand was put forward because of the appointment of more Bolsheviks (S. P. Sereda, V. N. Meshcheryakov, N. M. Petrovsky and others) to the Commissariat for Agriculture following the resignation of A. L. Kolegayev, as a result of which the position of the Left Socialist-Revolutionaries in the Commissariat was considerably weakened.

Lenin wrote also the following draft decision of the meeting: "The preliminary meeting (on the questions raised by Comrades Spiridonova and Karelin) between members of the Board of Agriculture, Comrades Sereda and Meshcheryakov, and Lenin has reached the conclusion that the questions raised should be examined as serious political questions and therefore should certainly be referred to the C.C., R.C.P.

"The meeting considers it essential to refer them to the C.C. urgently and speedily" (Lenin Miscellany XXXVI, p. 42).

The situation in the People's Commissariat for Agriculture was discussed at a sitting of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) on May 3, 1918. The Central Committee noted that the claims of the Left Socialist-Revolutionaries were groundless and approved the decision of the meeting. p. 83

- <sup>50</sup> This refers to the dismissal of the Central Rada by the German occupationists and the establishment in the Ukraine of an open dictatorship of the bourgeoisie and landowners. On April 29, 1918, at a congress of kulaks and landowners in Kiev convened by the interventionists, General P. P. Skoropadsky, a big Ukrainian landowner and former aide-de-camp to the Tsar, was proclaimed Hetman of the Ukraine. p. 84

- <sup>51</sup> On May 6, 1918, German and whiteguard army units broke into Rostov-on-Don and occupied the city. On May 7, it was liberated by Soviet troops, but on May 8 it was re-occupied by German and whiteguard troops. p. 84

- <sup>52</sup> Ino—a fort on the border with Finland which, with Kronstadt, guarded the approaches to Petrograd. Under a treaty between the R.S.F.S.R. and the Finnish Socialist Workers' Republic, Fort Ino was ceded to the R.S.F.S.R. for the defence of the joint interests of the Socialist Republics. After the defeat of the revolution in Finland, the Finnish bourgeois government with the support of the German imperialists demanded that Fort Ino be handed over to Finland. Before it was abandoned, the main works of the fort were blown up by order of the Commandant of the Kronstadt fortress. In May 1918, Finnish troops occupied Fort Ino. p. 84

<sup>53</sup> An emergency meeting of the Party Central Committee on May 6, 1918, discussed the international situation of the Soviet Republic in connection with the aggravation of relations with Germany, who demanded that Fort Ino be handed over to bourgeois Finland, and also in connection with the British occupation of Murmansk and the preparations by the interventionist troops to advance into the interior of the country. The Central Committee adopted the decision on the international situation proposed by Lenin (see present edition, Vol. 27, pp. 355 and 379-80). p. 84

<sup>54</sup> This note is a reply to A. D. Tsyurupa, who had informed Lenin that the food organisation of the Nikolayevskaya Railway had refused to allow A. I. Svidersky, member of the Board of the People's Commissariat for Food, to carry out an inspection agreed upon between the Food Commissariat, the Commissariat for Railways, and the Supreme Economic Council. Tsyurupa asked Lenin's advice as to what steps should be taken in this case. p. 85

<sup>55</sup> Lenin wrote this letter after a talk with the Chairman of the Purchasing Commission of the Putilov (now Kirov) Works, a plater in the boiler-shop, A. V. Ivanov, who gave a detailed description of the grave state of famine in Petrograd and told of the situation at the works and the mood of the workers.

Lenin informed Ivanov of the decree passed at the meeting of the Council of People's Commissars on May 9, 1918, giving the People's Commissar for Food emergency powers in the struggle against the rural bourgeoisie, who were concealing grain and profiteering. Lenin gave Ivanov a copy of the decree so that he could make it known to the Putilov workers.

The meeting between A. V. Ivanov and Lenin is described in the book Vospominaniya o Vladimire Ilyiche Lenine (Reminiscences of Vladimir Ilyich Lenin), Part 2, 1957, pp. 283-84. p. 86

<sup>56</sup> This refers to a meeting of the Russo-German Commission held in Moscow on May 15, 1918, to discuss the conditions for resuming economic relations between Russia and Germany. The report at the meeting was made by M. G. Bronsky, Deputy People's Commissar for Trade and Industry. The main propositions in his report had been vetted by Lenin. p. 86

<sup>57</sup> In a plan for the development of trade and economic relations with the U.S.A. drafted on Lenin's initiative, the Soviet Government expressed its readiness to pay for goods purchased in the U.S.A. with agricultural produce and products of the mining industry, and also to offer concessions to the U.S.A. on the same terms as to other countries.

The plan, under the heading "Russo-American Trade Relations", was first published in June 1918 in No. 1 of Vestnik Narod-

nogo Komissariata trgovli i promyshlennosti (Herald of the People's Commissariat for Trade and Industry). In the U.S.A., the plan was published together with Lenin's letter to Raymond Robins in the book Russian-American Relations. March 1917-March 1920, New York, 1920. p. 87

<sup>58</sup> This note to G. V. Chicherin was written following the receipt of a report that troops of the Transcaucasian bourgeois government, supported by a flotilla of armed merchant vessels, were advancing on Sukhum, creating a threat to the entire Black Sea coast. In the draft of a telegram submitted to Lenin, which was addressed to Sablin, Chief of the Naval Forces of the Black Sea Fleet, the latter was instructed to arm a number of Soviet merchant ships and send them for the defence of Sukhum.

On May 20, 1918, the Soviet Government sent a Note to the German Government protesting against the German military authorities conniving at the actions of the armed merchant ships of "the so-called Transcaucasian government, which is recognised by absolutely nobody in Transcaucasia". p. 88

<sup>59</sup> This refers to a draft decree for reorganising the Food Commissariat and the local food bodies. At a meeting of the C.P.C. on May 20, 1918, A. D. Tsyurupa, on Lenin's instructions, moved that the draft decree be submitted for discussion. The draft was discussed at meetings of the C.P.C. on May 22 and 23, and was adopted with amendments. It was decided to refer the decree to the All-Russia Central Executive Committee, where it was endorsed on May 27. It was published in Izvestia No. 109 on May 31, 1918.

Clause 3 of the decree envisaged the establishment under the local food commissariats of special detachments of workers recommended by Party and trade union organisations, formed mainly in the consuming districts. These detachments were to be at the disposal of the local food bodies and comply with their directives, and were to be employed in propaganda, organising and instructors' work. "The most important task of the workers' detachments," states the decree, "should be to organise the working peasantry against the kulaks" (Dekrety Sovetskoi vlasti [Decrees of the Soviet Government], Vol. 11, 1959, p. 310). p. 89

<sup>60</sup> In the spring of 1918 the German interventionists occupied the Ukraine, invaded the Crimea and approached Sevastopol, where the Black Sea Fleet was concentrated. On April 29-30, to save the fleet from the invaders, the Soviet Government transferred it to Novorossiisk. Ten days after the fleet's arrival there, the German Command sent an ultimatum demanding its return to Sevastopol, threatening otherwise to continue the offensive along the Black Sea coast. On May 11, the Soviet Government sent a "Protest to the German Government against the Occupation of the Crimea", stating the circumstances of the fleet's transfer and the possible conditions for its return to Sevastopol (see present edition, Vol. 27, pp. 358-59).

All attempts to reach an agreement with the German Government on this question were abortive. Having no possibility of saving the fleet and to avoid surrendering it to the German imperialists, Lenin issued an order to the Supreme Military Council for its immediate destruction (see the next document). A secret instruction of the Council of People's Commissars ordered the destruction of all the ships of the Black Sea Fleet and merchant steamships in Novorossiisk. On June 18-19, 1918, the order of the government was carried out: most of the ships were sunk off the Novorossiisk coast. p. 91

Der Sozialdemokrat—a daily newspaper, the organ of the Independent Social-Democratic Party of Württemberg. It was published in Stuttgart from 1915. In 1921, it became the organ of the United Communist Party of Württemberg and was published under the title Kommunist. p. 92

<sup>62</sup> Lenin probably has in mind the letter he sent to S. G. Shahumyan on May 14, 1918 (see present edition, Vol. 35, Document 145).

Lenin's letter of May 24 was delivered to Baku by S. M. Ter-Gabrielyan, one of the leaders of the Baku Commune. p. 93

<sup>64</sup> This refers to a decision of the Council of People's Commissars on May 8, 1918, to take stock of all available automobiles and lorries and transfer all surplus lorries to the People's Commissariat for Food. p. 97

<sup>65</sup> Lenin sent this telegram to the Vyksa workers in reply to one received from them which stated that they were "absolutely starving", and were going out by steamboats with their detachments and machine-guns in order to obtain grain by force. p. 97

<sup>69</sup> Lenin's notes to A. D. Tsyurupa were written in connection with the need to explain to the mass of the working people the decision on independent procurements adopted by the Council of People's Commissars on June 1, 1918. The decision pointed out that independent grain procurements, for which the Council of People's Commissars was being asked by representatives of some organisations and trade unions, could disrupt the whole business of food supply, clear the way for the kulaks and landowners, and ruin the revolution. The decision set the task of organising food detachments, selecting for them the best and most devoted people from among the workers and office personnel "in order to form a general working-class fighting force for establishing order, for assisting with supervision, for collecting all grain surpluses, for complete victory over speculators" (Dekrety Sovetskoi vlasti, Vol. II, pp. 379-81).

On this subject see also present edition, Vol. 27, pp. 416-17.

<sup>70</sup> After the capture of Omsk by Czech and Russian whiteguards on June 7, 1918, a Siberian whiteguard puppet government was set up there with the assistance of the interventionists. It consisted in the main of Socialist-Revolutionaries, with Mensheviks and Constitutional-Democrats participating. Behind a screen of democratic phrases it pursued a counter-revolutionary policy, paving the way for the transition to an open military dictatorship of the bourgeoisie and landowners.

G. Y. Zinoviev's inquiry concerned the purchase of grain in Omsk for Petrograd.

This Corps was formed in Russia before the October Revolution from among Czechs and Slovaks who were taken prisoner as soldiers of the Austro-Hungarian army. By the agreement of March 26, 1918, the Soviet Government gave the Corps the opportunity of leaving Russia via Vladivostok on condition that it surrender its weapons and remove its Russian commanders. But on the orders and with the support of the imperialists of the U.S.A., Britain and France, the counter-revolutionary commanders of the Corps engineered an armed revolt by the Corps against the Soviet government at the end of May. Acting in close contact with the whiteguards and kulaks, the White Czechoslovak Corps occupied a considerable part of the Urals, the Volga area and Siberia.

In the districts occupied by the Czechoslovak mutineers, whiteguard governments were formed with the participation of the Mensheviks and Socialist-Revolutionaries.

Many soldiers in the Corps, seeing how they had been betrayed by their counter-revolutionary command, refused to fight against Soviet Russia and deserted from the Corps. About 12,000 Czechs and Slovaks fought in the ranks of the Red Army.

The Volga area was liberated by the Red Army in the autumn of 1918. The White Czechoslovak Corps was completely routed simultaneously with the wiping out of Kolchak's forces.

However, Muravyov made this statement in order to conceal his own treacherous activity. On receiving a telegram from the Central Committee of the Left Socialist-Revolutionary Party alleging that the Left S.R.s had succeeded in seizing power in Moscow, he went over to the insurgents. According to their plan, Muravyov was to make the troops on the Eastern Front take up arms against Soviet power and, after joining forces with the white Czechs, to march on Moscow. On July 10, on arriving at Simbirsk, Muravyov announced that he did not recognise the Brest peace and declared war on Germany.

The Soviet Government took urgent measures to liquidate Muravyov's adventure. A government statement of July 11 declared him a traitor and enemy of Soviet power. On the evening of July 11, Muravyov was invited to a sitting of the Simbirsk Executive Committee. When Muravyov's traitorous telegrams on the cessation of military operations against the interventionists and whiteguards were read out at the sitting, the Communists demanded his arrest. Muravyov offered resistance and was killed. and his accomplices were arrested. p. 114

On receipt of a report from Saratov on the decisions adopted by the meeting of the Left Socialist-Revolutionaries, Lenin sent it to Pravda with the following introductory words: "Commissar Ivanov, travelling to the Caucasus, reports from Saratov." It was published in Pravda with this introduction. p. 117

<sup>81</sup> This was written in connection with a letter sent to the Naval Board by the Bureau of Supply of the North Caucasian Military District, requesting urgently to dispatch to the Caspian Sea and river Kura 8-10 motor vessels, which were to be put at the disposal of the Baku Council of People's Commissars. The letter specified the types of vessels, which were to be equipped with ordnance and machine-guns, and also with spare parts for the engines. p. 117

<sup>82</sup> In reply to Lenin's inquiry, Podvoisky, a member of the Supreme Military Council, reported that the units which were to be sent from Kursk to the Eastern Front were still being raised and that a brigade of three regiments with three batteries would be entrained on July 23. p. 118

<sup>83</sup> Podvoisky had proposed taking upon himself the leadership in suppressing the Czechoslovak revolt and counter-revolutionary actions in the Volga area and the Urals. p. 119

<sup>84</sup> Later, in reply to an inquiry from Lydia Fotieva about this letter of Lenin's, Larin informed her: "The letter from Vladimir Ilyich which you sent (concerning the drafting of a pamphlet about the Supreme Economic Council) was never received by me. Perhaps it relates to the time when (in 1918) I was sent to Berlin to conduct negotiations with the Germans, and was to be handed to me on my return. At any rate, soon after returning I received a letter from Vladimir Ilyich on a similar subject, only broader in content—to write about the Soviet Republic in general, not merely about the Supreme Economic Council (the letter has not been found.—Ed.), so as to acquaint people abroad and our own population with what had been achieved in one year. To this end, Vladimir Ilyich later wrote an order to all government departments to give me all the information I needed (see Lenin Miscellany XXI, p. 139.—Ed.). But the material sent in by the departments was far from satisfactory and we had to abandon the thought of compiling such a factual report of the government for the first year of our rule, the idea of which had apparently dismissed from Vladimir Ilyich's mind the proposal for a pamphlet about the Supreme Economic Council alone."

Connected with Lenin's instructions mentioned by Larin in his letter to Fotieva is the decision drafted by Lenin and adopted by the Council of People's Commissars on August 29, 1918, calling for written reports to be submitted by the People's Commissariats on their work since October 25 (November 7), 1917, and Lenin's letter to the People's Commissars on this question (see present edition, Vol. 36, p. 493; Vol. 35, Document 168). p. 121

<sup>86</sup> This refers to the following decrees of the Council of People's Commissars drafted on the basis of Lenin's "Theses on the Food Question" written on August 2, 1918 (see present edition, Vol. 28, pp. 45-47): "On Drawing Workers' Organisations into Grain Procurement" (in Lenin's letter it is called a decree on collective trains) and "On Harvesting and Harvesting-Requisitioning Detachments". The decrees were adopted at the sittings of the Council of People's Commissars on August 3 and 4, 1918, and published in Izvestia on August 6.

Clause 7 of the decree "On Drawing Workers' Organisations into Grain Procurement", mentioned lower down in the document, states: "Detachments setting out to procure grain are obliged to assist the local population in bringing in the harvest." p. 125

<sup>87</sup> After the capture of Archangel by the Entente troops on August 2, 1918, a group of functionaries of the Archangel Gubernia Executive Committee went to Vologda to report to M. S. Kedrov on the situation on the Northern Dvina. In Vologda, they learned of L. D. Trotsky's order, which demanded that the functionaries who had left Archangel should be regarded as deserters and tried by the Supreme Revolutionary Tribunal. The group of Communists, outraged by this order, since they were not directly to blame for the fall of Archangel, sent a request to Lenin and Sverdlov to be allowed to come to Moscow and report the truth about the events. In reply, Lenin sent the telegram published here. p. 126

- <sup>88</sup> Replying to the preceding note from Lenin, Tsyurupa wrote: "Hostages can be taken when there is a real force. But is there? It is doubtful." p. 127
- <sup>89</sup> This telegram is the reply to a message by direct line from D. T. Petrushuk, representative of the Moscow Regional Commissariat for Military Affairs, who had been sent to Orsha to expedite the dispatch of Red Army units to the Eastern Front. Petrushuk reported demoralisation in a number of army units and poor work on the part of local Soviet bodies, and he asked to be allowed to use the direct line. p. 130
- <sup>90</sup> The Institute of Marxism-Leninism of the Central Committee of the C.P.S.U. does not have the letter from Vorovsky, or its enclosures, or any other material that would make it possible to establish the precise nature of the abuses referred to. Since Lenin's letter was addressed to Sklyansky, member of the Board of the People's Commissariat for Military Affairs, it may be presumed that the reference is to abuses in one of the military departments. p. 131
- <sup>91</sup> Malyshev, in his capacity of authorised agent of the Union of Communes of the Northern Region, headed the expedition along the Volga of mobile trading barges carrying goods for exchange against grain. Lenin's telegram was in reply to Malyshev's report on the successful purchase of grain. See also this volume, Document 384. p. 132
- <sup>92</sup> Lenin sent this telegram in reply to A. Y. Minkin, Chairman of the Penza Gubernia Executive Committee, who asked whether it was necessary to comply with the order of A. I. Potyaev, People's Commissar for Finance of the Northern Region, to the Chief of the Stationery Office in Penza that the unloading of the Stationery Office's train should be held up, contrary to Lenin's order dated August 16, 1918.
The Left Socialist-Revolutionaries' revolt in Chembar, an uyezd town in Penza Gubernia, mentioned in the telegram, broke out on the night of August 18. On August 20, the revolt was put down by a detachment of Lettish riflemen and Red Army men, who had arrived from Penza. p. 134

- <sup>94</sup> Lenin lived at the house of Latukka in Vyborg from September 17 (30) to October 7 (20), 1917, after the July events, when he went into hiding to avoid persecution by the bourgeois Provisional Government. p. 136
- <sup>95</sup> The Poor Peasants' Committees were instituted by a decree of the All-Russia Central Executive Committee on June 11, 1918. They played a tremendous part in the struggle against the kulaks and in consolidating Soviet power in the countryside. They carried out strict accounting and distribution of grain and agricultural implements. Already by the autumn of 1918 the Poor Peasants' Committees, which played a historic role in the socialist revolution, had successfully solved the tasks entrusted to them. In this connection, and also in connection with the need "to complete Soviet construction by the creation of a uniform organisation of Soviets throughout the territory of the Soviet Republic", the Extraordinary Sixth All-Russia Congress of Soviets, held in November 1918, proposed the re-election of all volost and village Soviets, putting direct responsibility for the conduct of the elections on the Poor Peasants' Committees. In accordance with the election instructions published by the All-Russia Central Executive Committee on December 4, 1918, the Poor Peasants' Committees were to wind up their activities after the election campaign and hand over all their funds and functions to the newly-elected Soviets. p. 137

<sup>96</sup> A. K. Paikes, authorised agent of the Food Commissariat, and Zorin, Political Commissar of the 4th Army, reported from Saratov on the bad situation in regard to supplies for the army units and asked that urgent measures be taken for the dispatch of uniforms, equipment and ammunition. p. 139

<sup>97</sup> In a telegram to Lenin received on the night of August 21, 1918, S. S. Turlo, Deputy Chairman of the Penza Gubernia Party Committee, A. M. Buzdes, member of the Gubernia Committee, and secretary F. V. Veselovskaya, reported on a meeting of the Gubernia Committee called in connection with Lenin's telegram of August 19 (see this volume, Document 158). At the meeting, in reply to a decision of members of the Gubernia Committee to send a food official and 50 Lettish Red Army men to suppress the uprising of the kulaks and to confiscate their grain, A. Y. Minkin, Chairman of the Gubernia Executive Committee, declared that he refused to carry out the decision. p. 140

<sup>98</sup> Lenin's letter was due to the following circumstances. On August 24, 1918, in view of the grave food situation in the city, the Moscow Soviet passed a decision allowing the working people to bring into Moscow freely up to one-and-a-half poods of foodstuffs for their own personal consumption. On August 26, the Council of People's Commissars considered a draft decree on preferential conveyance of grain, the question of the decision of the Moscow Soviet being left open.

While the question was under discussion, the decision of the Moscow Soviet allowing one-and-a-half poods as baggage could not but hinder the organisation of the campaign against the black-marketeering bag-men and the regulation of the work of the intercepting detachments. On August 29, L. I. Ruzer, member of the Board of the Food Commissariat, who was in charge of this work, asked the Board to relieve him of the work of combating bag-trading. Ruzer wrote in his statement that he could think of "no more wordings for a single order in response to inquiries from the local areas". Tsyurupa, who was also opposed to the "one-and-a-half poods system", added a postscript: "None of the Board members nor the Board as a whole can think of wordings that Ruzer, too, failed to find. Conclusion: the order of the Moscow Soviet should be rescinded on approximately the following lines: the C.P.C. is to adopt a decision at once and publish it; the decision is to indicate the date on which the order of the Moscow Soviet ceases to be effective—approximately September 15. A. Tsyurupa." (V. I. Lenin, Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 50, p. 447.)

At the top of Lenin's note, Tsyurupa wrote: "A reply to Ruzer's statement with my postscript", and then the date: "29/VIII."

By a decision of the C.P.C. dated September 5, 1918, the decision of the Moscow Soviet and a similar decision of the Petrograd Soviet ceased to be effective on October 1, 1918. p. 145

- <sup>99</sup> Lenin wrote this letter when he was ill after being seriously wounded on August 30, 1918, by the Socialist-Revolutionary terrorist, Fanny Kaplan.

In spite of the doctors' orders, only a few days after being wounded, Lenin began to occupy himself with affairs of state. On September 16 the doctors allowed him to resume work. From September 23 to mid-October Lenin was recuperating at Gorki near Moscow.

The letter mentions the harvesting of grain in Yelets Uyezd, Orel Gubernia. On this subject see also this volume, Document 182.

The original bears the date "7.IX.1918". But in the files of the Council of People's Commissars there is a copy of this letter on which in an unknown hand is written the date "6/IX" and the time of dispatch "21.10 hours" (Ts. G.A.O.R., USSR). Moreover, on the night of September 6, Tsyurupa informed Zinoviev in Petrograd: "today Vladimir Ilyich ... wrote a letter" (Petrogradskaya Pravda No. 194, September 7, 1918). This gives grounds for assuming that the letter was written on September 6, 1918. p. 146

- <sup>100</sup> Lenin's telegram was transmitted to Kazan at 6.54 a.m. on September 10, 1918, and by 2 p.m. units of the Red Army had liberated Kazan from the whiteguard and White Czech troops.

- <sup>103</sup> This letter to V. D. Bonch-Bruyevich was written in connection with the death on September 30, 1918, of his wife, V. M. Velichkina-Bonch-Bruyevich, a member of the Board of the People's Commissariat for Health. p. 150

<sup>104</sup> This telegram was sent in connection with the proposal of Rifaat Pasha, the Turkish Ambassador in Germany, for the signing of a protocol regulating the military situation in the Caucasus. The draft protocol Rifaat Pasha put forward provided for the withdrawal of the Turkish troops from the Caucasus to the borders laid down by the Brest Treaty, but it lacked a clause directly transferring to the Soviet authorities the territories evacuated by the Turks.

The fears expressed in this telegram were justified. On October 30, 1918, the Turkish Government signed the Mudross armistice with the Entente countries, which contained a special clause about Turkey agreeing to the occupation of Baku by the Entente powers. In November 1918, in accordance with this agreement, the Turks withdrew their troops from Baku and the city was occupied by the British. p. 151

<sup>105</sup> Krasin asked Lenin to sign a telegram to the Tsaritsyn Extraordinary Commission for them to set free N. Later, from August 21, it was the organ of the Party of Narodnik Communists, a break-away from the Left Socialist-Revolutionary Party. The newspaper ceased publication in November 1918, when an extraordinary congress of the Party of Narodnik Communists passed a resolution dissolving the party and merging it with the R.C.P.(B.).

Volga Truda (The Will of Labour)—a newspaper, the organ of the Party of Revolutionary Communism, which broke away from the Left Socialist-Revolutionary Party in September 1918. It appeared from September 14 to December 4, 1918. The possibility of the Entente countries extending intervention against the Soviet Republic was dealt with by Lenin in greater detail in his report at the joint session of the All-Russia Central Executive Committee, the Moscow Soviet, factory committees and trade unions on October 22, 1918, and in the speech on the international situation at the Sixth Congress of Soviets on November 8, 1918 (ibid., pp. 114-27, 151-64). p. 156

Gusev, member of the Revolutionary Military Council of the 2nd Army, he expressed the hope that Izhevsk would be liberated by the first anniversary of the October Revolution, and asked that this message should be transmitted to the Red Army men. On November 7, troops of the division commanded by V. M. Azin stormed and captured the town and the small arms factory.
Lenin's telegram is in reply to the report on the liberation of Izhevsk received from the Eastern Front. It was read out to the Red Army men who took part in the liberation of the town. p. 161
- <sup>122</sup> The books preserved from Lenin's library in Poronin as well as archive materials (the Cracow-Poronin archives) were handed over to the Soviet Union after Lenin's death. The first batch of materials was received in 1924, and some of the books belonging to Lenin in 1933. Twelve of Lenin's books kept in the Bydgoszcz library, were handed over to the Soviet Army in 1945 as a token of gratitude for the liberation of the town from the German occupationists. A large batch of materials from the Cracow-Poronin archives, discovered by archivists of the Polish People's Republic, was received in 1951. A particularly large number of valuable documents were handed over to the Central Committee of the C.P.S.U. by the Polish United Workers' Party in 1954. Altogether, in 1951 and 1954, over a thousand new documents were handed over to the U.S.S.R. from Poland. p. 162

<sup>125</sup> This telegram was in response to a complaint Lenin received from N. P. Gorbunov, head of the Science and Technology Department of the Supreme Economic Council, that the Technical Committee of the Economic Council of the Northern Area was holding up fulfilment of orders from the Central Science and Technology Laboratory of the Military Department. At the top of the document received from Gorbunov, Lenin wrote an instruction to the secretary: "Phone Gorbunov and tell him to send today the exact documents concerning the half-month's delay and copies of papers from Amosov (head of the Technical Committee of the Economic Council of the Northern Area.—Ed.). Without the documents the complaint has no weight. Lenin." On the left-hand side there is an additional note: "Reprimand sent. Lenin." (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 50, pp. 453-54.)

<sup>126</sup> Lenin wrote this directive to Chicherin in connection with a radio-telegram from the German Government, which was set up on November 10, 1918, and consisted mainly of Right-wing Social-Democrats and Centrists. In its radio-telegram of November 21, 1918, the German Government requested the Soviet Government to issue a statement about its recognition and the obligation "to refrain from exerting any influence on the German population for the purpose of forming a different government".

Lenin's instructions were reflected in the Note to the German Ministry of Foreign Affairs dated November 25, 1918, which was signed by G. V. Chicherin (see Dokumenty vneshnei politiki SSSR, Vol. I, 1957, pp. 576-77).

<sup>127</sup> Lenin wrote this instruction on a memo from the Department of Museums and Protection of Monuments of Art and Antiquity of the People's Commissariat for Education, sent to the Managing Department of the Council of People's Commissars on November 26, 1918, asking that a number of premises of the Grand Palace in the Kremlin be allocated for the requirements of the state museums.

On December 12, 1918, the C.P.C. decreed "that measures be taken to use premises of the Grand Palace for a museum, in particular for presenting a historic picture of the life of the tsars". (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 50, p. 454.)

<sup>128</sup> Lenin's doubts about the correctness of the reports that most of the Councils of German soldiers in the Ukraine had adopted a Bolshevik stand were fully justified. The All-Ukraine Congress of Councils of German Soldiers, held in Kiev on December 13, 1918, was influenced by German opportunists and did not adopt any political resolution. The Congress decided to come to an agreement with Petlyura's bands and to surrender Kiev to them without a fight in exchange for the free passage of westward-bound German troop trains.

<sup>131</sup> Lenin wrote this telegram following a complaint received from I. V. Bogdanov, a member of the staff of the Unemployment Insurance Office in Borisoglebsk, concerning the arrest of his son who, on the grounds of his inexperience and poor health, refused to take part in the work of the Evacuation Commission to which he was assigned by the Commissariat for Agriculture.

<sup>132</sup> Lenin's note is a reply to Kamenev, who proposed abstaining for a period of two months from "forcing the pace in handing over the whole business of supply ... to the state". <sup>133</sup> This refers to a pamphlet containing the decree on revolutionary legality adopted by the Extraordinary Sixth All-Russia Congress of Soviets on November 8, 1918. In this decree the Congress called on "all citizens of the Republic, all bodies, all officials of the Soviet authorities, to strictly observe the laws of the R.S.F.S.R., and the decisions, regulations and instructions issued by the central authorities". All departures from the laws, caused by the conditions of the struggle against counter-revolution, were to be kept within strictly defined limits. The decree outlined measures for waging a determined fight against bureaucracy and red tape in Soviet offices.

The pamphlet appeared in 1919 under the title Observe the Laws of the Soviet Republic! (see also Document 422 of this volume).

<sup>136</sup> Towards the end of November 1918 Kolchak's troops, possessing considerable superiority in strength, launched an offensive against the 3rd Army of the Eastern Front with the aim of uniting with the interventionist troops in the north. After heavy defensive battles, the 3rd Army was forced to abandon a considerable territory. The causes for the defeat were: poor supply of clothing, food and ammunition to the army units, lack of the necessary reserves, contamination of some army units by counter-revolutionary elements owing to the violation of the class principle in the formation of units, shortcomings in the army leadership on the part of the commander, M. M. Lashevich, and the Revolutionary Military Council of the army.

On this subject see also this volume, Document 242. p. 171

<sup>137</sup> The instruction to G. I. Petrovsky, People's Commissar for Internal Affairs, was written by Lenin on a telegram he received on December 16, 1918, from peasants of Budilovo village (Yaroslavl Gubernia) complaining against the Chairman of the local Poor Peasants' Committee who had confiscated grain from them although they had no surpluses. They asked protection of Lenin, as "head of the peasant government". p. 173

<sup>138</sup> Lenin's note to Sverdlov was written on a telegram from N. N. Kuzmin, Military Commissar of the 6th Army, who had reported that Left Socialist-Revolutionary agitation was being conducted among the troops of the Northern Front, as a result of which discipline in some units was deteriorating.

As regards Spiridonova, a leader of the Left Socialist-Revolutionary Party, Lenin's note probably refers to her speeches at outdoor and indoor meetings, against Soviet power, against the Bolsheviks. On February 24, 1919, the Moscow Revolutionary Tribunal examined the case of Maria Spiridonova, who was accused of counter-revolutionary agitation and slander against Soviet power. The charges against Spiridonova were proved at the trial, but in view of the "morbidly hysterical state of the accused", the tribunal decided "to isolate Maria Spiridonova from political and social activity for one year by confining her in a sanatorium and affording her an opportunity for healthy physical and mental labour" (Pravda No. 43, February 25, 1919). p. 173

<sup>139</sup> This refers to the transfer to the People's Commissariat for Food of warehouses of industrial and handicraft products, which were at the disposal of the All-Russia Extraordinary Commission (Vecheka). The transfer was to have been made in pursuance of the decree on the organisation of supplies for the population adopted by the Council of People's Commissars on November 21, 1918. On December 3, 1918, the Food Commissariat asked the Vecheka to turn over the warehouses to the Chief Board for Distribution of Products, but up to December 20 this request remained without reply. On December 20, the Food Commissariat applied to the Council of Defence concerning this matter. p. 173

<sup>140</sup> D. A. Bulatov wired Lenin on December 26, 1918: "Letter received. Directive will be carried out." In a telegram on December 28, 1918, Bulatov reported that Teterin, a member of the Pervitino Poor Peasants' Committee, had been relieved of his post as being a former gendarme, but the other members of the committee had been left in their posts since the accusations against them were unproven. On December 31 Bulatov sent Lenin a detailed letter on this matter. p. 175

- <sup>141</sup> Lenin's telegram is a reply to the following inquiry dated December 25, 1918, from S. A. Bank, Chairman of the Vyshny Volochok Uyezd Economic Council: "By order of the Council of Defence stores of army property have been sealed, an inventory is being urgently compiled. Owing to the spread of typhus in the town and uyezd, which is assuming menacing proportions, the Board of the Uyezd Economic Council has given permission for hospital property to be issued to the public health department. We ask for your sanction in assuming this great responsibility." (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 50, p. 459.) p. 175
- <sup>142</sup> Lenin wrote this telegram in connection with a complaint reaching him from P. I. Surkov, a former member of the Social-Democratic group in the Third Duma, against the decision of the Extraordinary Commission of the town of Rodniki (Ivanovo-Voznesensk Gubernia) to confiscate his library. Surkov reported that while objecting to the transfer of the library to Rodniki, he agreed to hand over the books for teaching young people in his own village. Regarding Surkov's library, see also documents 228, 229 and 235 in this volume. p. 175
- <sup>143</sup> In his telegram to Lenin and to the Revolutionary Military Council of the Republic dated December 26, 1918, Trotsky, commenting on the apprehensions of Commander-in-Chief Vatsetis regarding fraternisation, wrote of its significance, particularly on the Northern Front, where there were American, British and French troops. At the same time, in order to put a stop to enemy agitation among Red Army men and to prevent the weakening of the fighting efficiency of the Red Army units, the telegram proposed that fraternisation should be carried out in an organised manner under the surveillance and control of responsible functionaries, primarily political commissars. p. 176

- <sup>146</sup> The question of requisitioning Surkov's library was discussed on December 27, 1918, at an enlarged sitting of the Executive Committee, the Extraordinary Commission and the Committee of the R.C.P.(B.) of the town of Rodniki. Its decision noted that "the books in Citizen Surkov's library, which are of social value, are shut away and unread at a time when there is an immense lack of books for the enlightenment of broad masses of workers and peasants", and that since a library was being formed in Rodniki "the requisitioned books will be of tremendous benefit as public property". In order to give Lenin fuller information on this question, the meeting decided to send A. N. Prokofiev, secretary of the local Cheka, to see him.

Lenin received Prokofiev and after a talk with him wrote his letter to the People's Commissariat for Education. p. 177

<sup>147</sup> In reply to Lenin's letter, V. Y. Bryusov, head of the Library Section of the People's Commissariat for Education, informed him on January 2, 1919, that A. N. Prokofiev had been received and heard out in the Library Section. Bryusov wrote that, according to existing rules, the requisitioning of libraries could be permitted only with the knowledge and consent of the People's Commissariat for Education, in order that, when requisitioning takes place, the interests of the state as a whole should be taken into account—primarily the requirements of the large state libraries: the libraries of the Rumyantsev Museum (now the State Library of the U.S.S.R., named after Lenin), the Historical Museum, the Socialist Academy, the universities, and others. In view of this Prokofiev was asked to submit an inventory of the requisitioned library.

On receipt of Bryusov's memo, Lenin wrote a letter to Prokofiev (see this volume, Document 235). p. 171

<sup>150</sup> Written by Lenin on the back of a report sent him by V. I. Nevsky, People's Commissar for Railways, on the number of freight-loads of food sent to Petrograd from Moscow and on delays in the dispatch of food freights to Petrograd from Nizhni-Novgorod. p. 179

<sup>152</sup> Surkov's library came under the control of the Rodniki Department of Education on January 10, 1919, some of the books being returned to the original owner. Lists of the books requisitioned or returned to Surkov were sent to Lenin and to the Library Section of the People's Commissariat for Education on February 3. p. 180

<sup>153</sup> Written by Lenin following a conversation with F. F. Obratsov, a peasant from Vasyutino village, Lopatinsk Volost, Vesyegonsk Uyezd, Tver Gubernia, who had been sent to Lenin by village Communists to solicit help in building a village People's House to replace one that was destroyed by fire at the end of 1917.

On January 18, 1919, after Obratsov's return home, the local newspaper, Izvestia of the Vesyegonsk Soviet of Workers', Peasants' and Red Army Deputies, published an article about his reception by Lenin under the heading "A Visit to Comrade Lenin". In it Obraztsov related that his talk with Lenin had dealt chiefly with the policy of the Communist Party and the Soviet Government towards the poor and middle peasantry. In concluding the article, Obraztsov wrote: "Comrade peasants of Veseyegonsk Uyezd! Believe me who saw with my own eyes that there, at the top, our common cause is being administered not by officials or bureaucrats, but by our own, ordinary comrades, who rightly call themselves the Workers' and Peasants' Government. Let us hearken to their voice. They are working for us and our children. Let us help them with all we can in their difficult work. Then we shall all the sooner see a golden age for us. Comrades! I hope that it is together with you all that I say loudly: 'Long live the leader of the proletariat and protector of the poor, our friend and brother Vladimir Ilyich Lenin!!'" p. 182

<sup>154</sup> Lenin sent this telegram in reply to the following telegram he received from Gorkino station on January 4, 1919: "Lenin, C.P.C., Moscow. We office staff and workers of Gorkino station, Northern Railway, at a general meeting have found it necessary to ask you to allow us to send our delegates to you in order to express our urgent needs. Please notify us whether you agree to receive them, and when. Ryabinin, chairman of the general meeting, Nesterekhin, secretary" (Lenin Miscellany XXXV, p. 51). p. 182

The talks with the Ufa Right Socialist-Revolutionaries were held during January-February 1919 in Ufa and Moscow.

At the end of February, the All-Russia Central Executive Committee adopted a resolution on the attitude towards the Right Socialist-Revolutionaries. In view of the positive results of the talks and the fact that on February 8, 1919, the party conference of the Right Socialist-Revolutionaries declared itself opposed to an armed struggle against Soviet power and to foreign intervention in Russia's affairs, the All-Russia Central Executive Committee passed a decision to give to the groups of Right Socialist-Revolutionaries which adopted this stand the right "to participate in Soviet work". (Izvestia No. 45, February 27, 1919.) p. 184

<sup>156</sup> On December 25, 1918, Kolchak's troops occupied Perm. Having examined the letter from the Urals Regional Party Committee on the causes of the reverses of the 3rd Army, the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) set up a Committee of Inquiry consisting of J. V. Stalin and F. E. Dzerzhinsky, which visited the 3rd Army early in January 1919.

Lenin's directive was written in connection with a letter from Stalin and Dzerzhinsky in which they reported on the opening of the investigation and pointed out that in order to prevent the rapid advance of the enemy, it was essential to send urgently three reliable regiments to reinforce the 3rd Army.

On this subject, see also this volume, Documents 219, 251 and present edition, Vol. 28, p. 390. p. 185

- <sup>157</sup> In reply to Lenin's telegram, Kornev, Chairman of the Ryazan Gubernia Executive Committee, reported that at a sitting of the Presidium of the Gubernia Executive Committee and the Presidium of the City Executive Committee on January 15, 1919, it had been decided to urgently organise a Department of Public Catering under the City Executive Committee which was to take charge of all Ryazan's dining-rooms and tea-rooms. p. 186
- <sup>158</sup> This telegram was prompted by a telegram that Lenin received on January 12, 1919, at about 7 p.m., from four workers who complained that the Gavrilov Posad Extraordinary Commission had confiscated 16 poods of oats from them, and asked for orders to be given for their return. p. 187
- <sup>159</sup> Lenin wrote this instruction to the secretary on a telegram to the Council of Defence from Pashkov, Chief of the Railway Militia of a district in Tula Gubernia, who reported on the progress of snow clearing on the railway, and gave factual data on the number of workers and carts engaged in this work. p. 187
- <sup>160</sup> Lenin's directives to Tsyurupa were written on the memorandum of the Education Commissariat's Inter-Departmental Commission for the Purchase of Food for the Children of Moscow and Petrograd. The memorandum outlined measures for the better food provision of the children, specifically, the organisation and holding of a Starving Children's Week for obtaining produce in rural localities in exchange for commodities, and for delivery of this produce to the towns. p. 188
- <sup>161</sup> The document referred to has not been found. p. 188
- <sup>162</sup> Lenin's instruction to Trotsky was written on the text of a report from Stalin and Dzerzhinsky giving the reasons for the fall of Perm. The report stated that the three regiments intended as reinforcements for the 3rd Army had been reassigned to Narva. p. 189
- <sup>163</sup> Lenin probably refers to a letter dated January 19, 1919, from M. K. Vladimirov, Military Commissar Extraordinary of the Railways of the Southern Front, reporting the state of affairs on the railways under his control. Appended to the letter was the draft of an addendum to the decision of the Council of Defence dated December 22, 1918, on the question of combating snowdrifts. p. 189
- <sup>164</sup> On January 18, 1919, the Council of People's Commissars adopted a decision on the fuel and food situation at state engineering works. This decision instructed the Commissariat for Food to furnish exact information on "how many trucks, and when and from what localities, had been ordered for state engineering works and textile mills" (Lenin Miscellany XXXIV, p. 94). p. 190

<sup>165</sup> This refers to a proposed conference on the Princes Islands (Sea of Marmora) with the participation of representatives of all the governments existing on the territory of Russia to draw up measures for ending the Civil War. The address to the parties to the conference was drafted by Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States. The imperialists started this talk about a conference in order to halt the advance of the Red Army and, in the event of the Soviet Government refusing to participate in the conference, to put the blame on it for the continuation of hostilities. The Soviet Government unmasked the imperialists who were posing as "peace-makers"; on February 4, 1919, it issued a radio statement to the governments of Great Britain, France, Italy, the United States and Japan agreeing to participate in the conference, which it intended to use as an international platform to expose the interventionists. But no reply was forthcoming from the Entente imperialists. Denikin, Kolchak and other counter-revolutionary governments still hoped to crush the Soviet Republic by force of arms, and therefore refused to take part in the conference, which was never held. p. 191

<sup>166</sup> Lenin's telegram followed receipt by him of a report from Schwartz, representative of the Council of Defence in Samara, about the arrest of A. M. Smirnov, a Right Socialist-Revolutionary and former mayor of the town under the White Czechs, who gave himself up to the Soviet authorities and declared his intention of working with "Soviet power" for the purpose of fighting against Kolchak. Schwartz reported that Smirnov put forward no conditions for his work in the future and was backed by a group of individuals from his camp who had decided to serve Soviet power.

On the telegram from Samara, Lenin wrote the words: "For handy reference. Wired 27/I." p. 191

<sup>167</sup> On receipt of Lenin's note Sklyansky gave instructions to S. I. Aralov, member of the Revolutionary Military Council of the Republic, for an immediate investigation. On February 3, 1919, Aralov reported back that a member of the All-Russia Council of the Air Fleet had been sent by the Field Division for Aviation and Aeronautics to the Tsaritsyn Front to carry out an inspection. p. 192

<sup>168</sup> Lenin's note to Krasin, People's Commissar for Trade and Industry, was written in connection with a report by W. Jaszczembski, a former leader of the Polish Socialist Party, who was then in Russia, on the results of his journey to Warsaw undertaken to explore the possibility of establishing trade and cultural relations between the Soviet Republic and Poland. Owing to the resistance of the Right-wing leaders of the Polish Socialist Party, his mission was unsuccessful. Despite this Lenin was in favour of continuing negotiations. p. 192

- <sup>170</sup> Lenin gave this instruction to Sklyansky and Podbelsky, People's Commissar for Posts and Telegraphs, after receiving a telegram from the Chief of Communications of Trotsky's train. The telegram stated that this train had left Petrograd for Yamburg and was sent simultaneously to a large number of addresses. p. 193
- <sup>171</sup> On February 6, 1919, Shlyapnikov reported to Lenin information he had received from Baku to the effect that the workers of Baku enterprises and the sailors were hostile towards the British occupationists, that the ships, on which there were still Russian sailors, were ready to go over to the side of the Soviets, and that the Baku workers would start an uprising to coincide with the Red Army attack. p. 193
- <sup>172</sup> Lenin's instruction to Petrovsky was written on the text of a report on the situation in Kursk Gubernia presented by an official of the Military Inspection. The latter reported dissatisfaction among the working people of Kursk Gubernia caused by abuses on the part of local Soviet and Party functionaries, the poor organisation of agitation and propaganda in the countryside and the weakness of the Party organisations in the gubernia. p. 194
- <sup>173</sup> Lenin was informed that the rumour about the eviction of Vera Zasulich and other revolutionaries was without foundation. p. 195
- <sup>174</sup> Lenin's telegram followed a letter from M. M. Fedoseyev from the village of Azeyevo, Yelatma Uyezd, Tambov Gubernia. Fedoseyev stated that in October 1918 his printing-press in the town of Yelatma was nationalised and now stood "in a shed, rusting away and idle", at a time when the uyezd town of Yelatma was without a printing-press and orders were being sent to towns in other uyezds. Fedoseyev wrote that he was "not a bourgeois", that for 27 years he had worked as a clerk, secretary, teacher, and book-keeper; that after buying on credit an old, broken-down printing-press, he had put it in order and had himself worked in the print-shop as proofreader and compositor.
On Fedoseyev's letter Lenin wrote the words: "Wired 18.II", "file away for handy reference". p. 195
- <sup>175</sup> In reply to Lenin's telegram, P. Gorbunov, Chairman of the Yelatma Uyezd Executive Committee, reported the same day that the E.C. intended to merge Fedoseyev's printing-press with another nationalised local printing-press (of Meshcheryakov), where both Fedoseyev and Meshcheryakov, as specialists, would be allowed to work. p. 195
- <sup>176</sup> A telegram from Headquarters of the Eastern Front on February 19, 1919, reported on talks with representatives of the Bashkir bourgeois-nationalist government for the cessation of this government's anti-Soviet activity and for the Bashkir troops fighting alongside Red Army units against Kolchak. The opinion was expressed in the telegram that if the Bashkir troops would immediately go over to an offensive against Kolchak they should not be disarmed, but if they were to refuse to do so, then it was essential to disarm them.

Joint operations by Bashkir units and the Red Army against whiteguard troops began at the end of February 1919, and a Bashkir Revolutionary Committee was set up. On March 20, 1919, the Government of the R.S.F.S.R. signed an agreement with the Bashkir Government setting up a Bashkir Autonomous Soviet Republic.

<sup>177</sup> Written by Lenin on the title page of a copy of his pamphlet The Struggle for Grain (Moscow, 1918), which through the medium of A. P. Ramensky (a colleague of I. N. Ulyanov—Lenin's father) he presented to a delegation of teachers from Tver Gubernia. The delegation had come to Moscow to ask for help in the form of food for Tver teachers.

Lenin's pamphlet contained the text of his report on combating the famine delivered at a joint session of the All-Russia Central Executive Committee, the Moscow Soviet, and the trade unions on June 4, 1918, and his reply to the debate on the report (see present edition, Vol. 27, pp. 419-43).

p. 197

<sup>178</sup> Lenin's telegram is the reply to one dated February 26, 1919, from S. Y. Tsekhanovsky, Chairman of the Rudnya Executive Committee, Mikulino Volost, Orsha Uyezd, Mogilev Gubernia. Tsekhanovsky wrote that the Mikulino Communists had organised a central volost workers' co-operative for the purpose of "uniting workers and peasants on the basis of a communist system of trade, abolishing private trading and pillage, and reconstructing existing kulak-dominated consumer co-operatives"; the Rules of this workers' co-operative had been examined in the Supreme Economic Council. Reporting that leaders of the uyezd and gubernia organisations in Orsha and Mogilev were opposed to the activities of the Mikulino Communists, Tsekhanovsky asked permission to report to Lenin personally "on the state of affairs as the leader of communism and defender of the proletariat".

p. 199

<sup>179</sup> Lenin's note to Maria Kostelovskaya was probably written at the C.P.C. meeting of February 27, 1919, which discussed the draft decree on workers' food detachments. The note was a reply to Kostelovskaya's proposal to postpone the discussion of this question.

p. 199

<sup>180</sup> Written by Lenin on a note from A. I. Svidersky, member of the Board of the People's Commissariat for Food, apparently at a meeting of the Council of People's Commissars. Svidersky wrote that the Food Commissariat had been discussing whether to consider the frontier with the Ukraine open for free transport of all food products or only of those that were unrationed.

The organisation of food supply in the liberated districts of the Ukraine at the beginning of 1919 was a very important matter. Lenin devoted great attention to this question; in particular, he proposed to hasten Schlichter's departure to the Ukraine, where he was to head the People's Commissariat for Food. On February 25, 1919, Lenin wrote on a telegram from Pyatakov, who reported on food stocks in the Ukraine: "Inform Schlichter, adding that I am extremely dissatisfied at the delay of his journey" (A. Schlichter, Uchitel i drug trudyashchikhnya [Teacher and Friend of the Working People], Moscow, 1957, p. 55). On February 19 and March 11, 1919, the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) adopted special decisions on food policy in the Ukraine (see Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 37, pp. 522, 630-31). p. 199

<sup>181</sup> Lydia Fotieva, secretary of the C.P.C., asked Lenin to take on for work in the C.P.C. Secretariat a woman recommended by the Staff Bureau of the C.P.C.'s Managing Department. V. D. Bonch-Bruyevich, head of the C.P.C.'s Managing Department, objected to the appointment on the grounds that it contravened the decree forbidding relatives to work together in the same Soviet institutions (the candidate had a sister working in the C.P.C.). Fotieva wrote to Lenin that the woman recommended "is a very valuable worker and it would be in our interests to take her on.... Could not the decree be bypassed?" p. 200

<sup>182</sup> Lenin wrote this on a letter from the Central Executive Committee of the Polish Socialist Party to the C.C., R.C.P.(B.). Point 3 of this letter expressed the desire that the question of frontiers with Poland should be decided on the basis of self-determination of the population living in the disputed territories, primarily in Lithuania and Byelorussia. Lenin's proposal was adopted by the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) and was reflected in Chicherin's letter to A. Y. Więckowski, delegate extraordinary of the Polish Government (see Dokumenty vneshnei politiki SSSR, Vol. II, 1958, pp. 105-06). p. 200

<sup>183</sup> Valentina Pershikova, a member of the staff of the Tsaritsyn Housing Department, was arrested for daubing a portrait of Lenin which she had torn out of a pamphlet. Requests for Pershikova's release were sent in telegrams to Lenin from V. S. Usachov, chief of one of the Tsaritsyn militia stations, and from Minin, a Red Army man. On Minin's telegram Lenin wrote the following instruction to his secretary: "Remind me when the reply comes from the Chairman of the Extraordinary Commission (and afterwards hand all the material over to the topical satirists)." (Lenin Miscellany XXIV, p. 172.) p. 201

<sup>185</sup> Kolegayev replied by telegram that three trains with foodstuffs had been dispatched to Moscow. The telegram also gave information on the progress of the food collection and pointed out that to expedite procurements it was essential to send additional workers and responsible food supply executives from the centre. p. 201

<sup>186</sup> On January 29, 1919, the Second Congress of Soviets of Sarapul Uyezd, Vyatka Gubernia, adopted a decision to collect grain in all villages of the uyezd as a gift to Moscow and Petrograd. The Congress decided that the gift of 40,000 poods of grain for Moscow "be dispatched and presented personally to our dear and beloved leader, Comrade Lenin". Lenin's note was written following his reception of the delegation of Sarapul peasants who had accompanied the train-load of grain. It was written, apparently, not on March 12 as indicated in the document, but on March 11, 1919. This is borne out by the following circumstances. Already on March 12 Pravda No. 55 reported that Kamenev, speaking at a plenary meeting of the Moscow Soviet on March 11, said: "I received a letter from Comrade Lenin who had been visited by representatives of Sarapul Uyezd, Vyatka Gubernia, who had brought 40,000 poods of grain as a gift to Moscow. These delegates are present at this meeting." The mistake about the date is also evident from the fact that on March 12 Lenin was in Petrograd, where he addressed a meeting of the Petrograd Soviet in the Taurida Palace (see present edition, Vol. 29, pp. 19-37). Lenin himself, speaking on March 13, 1919, at a meeting in the People's House in Petrograd, said: "Only a few days ago a delegation of peasants representing five volosts in Sarapul Uyezd came to see me" (ibid., p. 47). p. 202

<sup>188</sup> Lenin gave this instruction to Petrovsky after receiving a complaint from peasants of Korbangsk Volost, Kadnikovo Uyezd, Vologda Gubernia, about the incorrect attitude of the Volost Executive Committee towards the middle peasants. Lenin wrote the instruction on the following draft of a telegram in Krupskaya's handwriting: "To the Korbangsk Volost Soviet, Kadnikovo Uyezd Vologda Gubernia. Draw up immediately in all villages lists of electors to the Soviet, excluding only known kulaks and drawing the middle peasants into the elections. After compiling the lists, fix new elections to the Soviet. A check will be carried out. Those guilty of incorrectly compiling the lists will have to answer for it" (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 50, p. 476).

Shortly after this, on learning of the rude behaviour of A. G. Pravdin, a member of the Board of the People's Commissariat for Internal Affairs, towards U. P. Mostakova, who had delivered the complaint of the Vologda peasants, Lenin wrote to Petrovsky: "... Pravdin must be hauled over the coals. Don't let him have his own way, and put him under supervision, he has a tendency towards stupid 'order issuing'. This must be put an end to" (ibid.). p. 202

<sup>189</sup> This was a reply to a telegram from V. N. Kayurov, head of the Political Department of the 5th Army, who reported the capture of Ufa by whiteguard troops and the grave plight of the 5th Army. At the same time, Kayurov expressed confidence that if "class-conscious, trained reinforcements" were sent, "the enemy will be routed".

- <sup>197</sup> Lenin's radio-telegrams to Bela Kun were sent in connection with the news of the proclamation of a Soviet Republic in Munich on April 7, 1919. At that time it was not yet known in Moscow that the Soviet Republic in Munich had been proclaimed by leaders of the German Social-Democrats and of the Centrist Independent Social-Democratic Party of Germany, who by this manoeuvre wanted to deceive the workers and to discredit the idea of Soviet power. Conditions in Bavaria not yet being ripe for the proclamation of a Soviet Republic, the Bavarian Communists refused to take part in this provocative act of adventurism.

On April 13, 1919, when the Bavarian counter-revolutionaries made an attempt to seize power, a furious struggle took place on the streets of Munich, ending in the victory of the workers. A Soviet government was set up in Bavaria—the Executive Committee headed by the leader of the Bavarian Communists, Eugene Levin; the government also included Independents. The Government of the Bavarian Soviet Republic set about disarming the bourgeoisie, organising a Red Army, nationalising the banks, establishing workers' control at enterprises, and organising food supply.

On April 27, 1919, Lenin wrote his "Message of Greetings to the Bavarian Soviet Republic", in which he gave the revolutionary government of Bavaria advice in the form of a concrete programme of action for the proletarian party that had come to power (see present edition, Vol. 29, pp. 325-26).

The home and foreign situation of the Bavarian Soviet Republic was a difficult one. At the very first difficulties encountered by the Soviet Republic the representatives of the "Independent Social-Democrats" began to pursue a treacherous policy. Towards the end of April, the Independents succeeded in removing the Communists from leading positions. Taking advantage of this situation the counter-revolutionaries went over to the offensive. On May 1, whiteguard units entered Munich and after three days' hard fighting captured the city. p. 208

The telegram was drafted in the People's Commissariat for Agriculture.

On April 10, 1919, the following circular letter, signed by Lenin and Sereda, was published in Izvestia:

"To all Gubernia Land Departments.

"Copies to Executive Committees.

"Information has reached the People's Commissariat for Agriculture that for the purpose of organising state farms, communes and other collective associations, the land departments and state farm boards, contrary to the intent of Article 9 of the Regulations on Socialist Organisation of Agriculture, are taking away from the peasants the lands of former landowners' estates which had been made over to them. The impermissibility of such practices is hereby confirmed. Lands being worked by peasants at the time of the publication of the Regulations on Socialist Organisation of Agriculture, and which were put at their disposal on the basis of decisions or instructions of uyezd or gubernia land departments, may not on any account be forcibly alienated for the purpose of organising state farms, communes or other collective associations. The alienation of lands from the peasants for the sake of the above-mentioned organisations is permissible only by voluntary consent by way of land tenure regulation. Measures of coercion to make the peasants practise joint cultivation and join communes and other types of collective farming are impermissible. The transition to collective forms is to be carried out only in strict conformity with the Regulations, without any compulsion on the part of the authorities. Non-fulfilment of the present instruction will be punished in accordance with the laws of the revolutionary period. Inform the population of the present instruction as widely as possible.

<sup>199</sup> This telegram is a reply to those sent by N. N. Kuzmin, Military Commissar of the 6th Army, on April 8, 1919, reporting a proposal by General Ironside for an exchange of prisoners of war. Kuzmin asked to be authorised to conduct negotiations. p. 209

<sup>202</sup> This document was apparently drafted in the People’s Commissariat for Health since it was typed on the Commissariat’s notepaper and signed also by People’s Commissar for Health N. A. Semashko. p. 211

<sup>203</sup> On April 11, 1919, Izvestia published a decree of the C.P.C. calling up for military service in the Red Army workers and peasants of the central gubernias who did not exploit the labour of others,

- and who were born between 1886 and 1890. In his telegram Zinoviev reported that a meeting of Petrograd Communists had decided to mobilise up to 20 per cent of the members of the Party over and above the general mobilisation. p. 212
- <sup>204</sup> This refers to the inclusion of Socialist-Revolutionaries in the Ukrainian Government. p. 213
- <sup>205</sup> This refers to an offensive by the troops of the Crimean Front, under the command of P. Y. Dybenko, into the interior of the Crimean Peninsula. The offensive was a mistake, since the attacking units could have been cut off in the Perekop Isthmus from the main forces and, moreover, at that time it was essential to concentrate maximum forces for an attack in the chief strategic direction—that of the Donets Basin and Rostov. p. 213
- <sup>206</sup> The instruction to Dzerzhinsky was written by Lenin on the copy of a letter forwarded to him by the People's Commissariat for Agriculture. The letter was from N. D. Gorelov and P. I. Novikov, representatives of the peasants of Pochep Uyezd, Chernigov Gubernia, who had come to Moscow with a complaint about the abuses practised by the local authorities and had been received by Lenin. They wrote that on their return home they had been subjected to persecution and even arrested. p. 213
- <sup>207</sup> This refers to a telegram from the Tambov Consumers' Society to the Council of People's Commissars concerning implementation of the decree of the C.P.C., dated March 16, 1919 on consumers' communes. The decree provided for the amalgamation of all consumers' co-operatives in town and country into consumers' communes with the aim of creating a single distributive apparatus. The telegram from Tambov reported that 252 members of the Tambov Consumers' Society found at their meeting that trade was being conducted properly and "do not want to hand over the Consumers' Society to consumers' communes". p. 214
- <sup>208</sup> This is a reply to a telegram received on April 21, 1919, from Commander-in-Chief I. I. Vatsetis and member of the Revolutionary Military Council of the Republic S. I. Aralov, inquiring whether an advance into Galicia and Bukovina was permissible politically and what objective it pursued.
 Lenin wrote on the telegram from Vatsetis and Aralov: "To Comrade Sklyansky's secretary: please code and send off the attached (this probably refers to Lenin's telegram.—Ed.), then pass it on to Comrade Sklyansky for filing." (Iz istorii grazhdanskoi voiny v SSSR, Vol. 2, 1961, p. 382.) p. 215
- <sup>209</sup> Lenin's directives to Sklyansky were written on a report from Commander-in-Chief Vatsetis dated April 23, 1919, concerning the military situation of the R.S.F.S.R. Vatsetis argued the necessity to unite the armed forces of the Soviet Republics and place them under a single command; he also proposed that the system of Universal Military Training should be temporarily done away with and its 24,000 instructors mobilised to strengthen the command of the reserve units on the Eastern Front. p. 216

<sup>210</sup> The report of Vatsetis has a postscript by Aralov, who objected to the total liquidation of the U.M.T. and proposed simply reducing it by 50 to 75 per cent. p. 216

<sup>211</sup> Lenin's instruction to Zinoviev was written on a letter from V. N. Yakovleva, a member of the Board of the People's Commissariat for Food, replying to an inquiry of Lenin's concerning a request by the Petrograd Co-operative of Ukrainian Citizens for their rationed food products to be turned over to them. The letter stated that, at the request of the Ukrainian Soviet Government, the People's Commissariat for Food, by way of exception, had permitted this co-operative to import from the Ukraine a small amount of rationed food products, but that A. Y. Badayev, Food Commissar of the Petrograd Labour Commune, had prevented it. Yakovleva wrote that this was not the first case of failure on the part of Badayev to comply with the instructions of the People's Commissariat for Food.

<sup>212</sup> On May 25, 1919, after examining the question of material assistance for V. I. <sup>215</sup> Written at a time when Communists were being mobilised for the struggle against Kolchak, this note is a reply to Kostelovskaya, a Party member. She asked how she was to understand her appointment to the Eastern Front as the head of the Political Department of the 2nd Army. p. 222

<sup>216</sup> This instruction to Rudzutak, Chairman of the Chief Board of Water Transport, was written by Lenin on a telegram from Kazan to the Board. The telegram reported failure to take out several vessels with grain, crude oil and paraffin from Chistopol (Eastern Front), which had been occupied by whiteguard troops, owing to the boats coming under fire from whiteguard cavalry. p. 222

ferred to the Eastern Front, should be left in the Astrakhan area. Mekhonoshin reported that the transfer of the whole 33rd Division and the impossibility of a rapid formation of the 34th Division, owing to the delay in sending promised reinforcements, would compel them to stop the offensive against Kizlyar and give up the idea of capturing Guriev and Rakusha, where there was oil, and would put the fleet, which was threatened with loss of its base, in a hopeless position. "The absence of precise orders from Field Headquarters," wrote Mekhonoshin, "puts the army in an absolutely impossible position and gives grounds for accusing us of inactivity." Lenin made a number of underlinings and markings on Mekhonoshin's telegram (Lenin Miscellany XXXIV, pp. 127-28). p. 222

<sup>218</sup> Lenin wrote this note on a statement by A. Y. Badayev to the Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Petrograd Soviet of Workers' and Red Army Deputies. Badayev tried to justify the various instances of non-fulfilment by him of the orders of the People's Commissariat for Food (see Note 211), claiming that the accusations against him were "intrigues of a definite group in the Centre" and asking to be relieved within five days of his post as Food Commissar of the Petrograd Labour Commune. p. 223

<sup>219</sup> On May 4, 1919, a letter addressed to Lenin was received by radio from Fridtjof Nansen, Norwegian scientist and arctic explorer. The letter was dated April 17, 1919. In it Nansen gave the text of his appeal to the heads of government of the four Entente Powers (U.S.A., France, Great Britain and Italy) proposing the setting up of a committee to organise aid for Russia with food and medical supplies, and their reply. In their reply the heads of the Entente Powers (Woodrow Wilson, David Lloyd George, Georges Clemenceau and Vittorio Orlando) made this aid conditional on the cessation of military operations on the territory of Russia, but without indicating whether this condition would be binding on the powers who were pursuing a policy of armed intervention against the Soviet Republic. Nansen had obviously failed to see through the manoeuvres of the Entente leaders and expressed his agreement with the conditions they had put forward. On the same day, May 4, Lenin informed Chicherin that this question had been referred to the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the R.C.P.(B.) and asked him to draft a reply to Nansen, emphasising the need to expose the imperialists.

Lenin's letter published here contains his remarks on the draft reply to Nansen. p. 224

<sup>220</sup> William Bullitt, the American diplomat, came to Soviet Russia in March 1919 to ascertain the conditions on which the Soviet Government would agree to conclude peace with the Entente countries as well as with the whiteguard governments on Russian territory. Proposals emanating from the U.S. President, Woodrow Wilson, and the British Prime Minister, Lloyd George, were transmitted through Bullitt. The Soviet Government, striving for the speediest conclusion of peace, agreed to negotiations on the proposed terms, introducing into them, however, some essential amendments (for the text of the peace proposal drafted by the U.S. government representative, Bullitt, and the Government of the R.S.F.S.R., see Dokumenty vneshnei politiki SSSR, Vol. II, 1958, pp. 91-95). Shortly after Bullitt's departure from Soviet Russia, Kolchak succeeded in achieving some successes on the Eastern Front, and the imperialist governments, anticipating the collapse of the Soviet state, refused peace negotiations. Wilson forbade publication of the draft agreement brought by Bullitt, and Lloyd George, in a speech in Parliament, declared that he had nothing to do with the negotiations with the Soviet Government. p. 225

<sup>221</sup> Lenin's remarks on the draft replies to Nansen were fully taken into account in the radio-telegram of May 7, 1919 (see Dokumenty vneshnei politiki SSSR, Vol. II, 1958, pp. 154-60). The plan put forward by Nansen came to nothing. p. 226

<sup>222</sup> Under pressure from the White Cossacks, the Soviet troops, which had been on the defensive east of Orenburg, withdrew and occupied positions seven kilometres from the town. p. 227

<sup>224</sup> This refers to the counter-revolutionary revolt of Ataman Grigoriev, which broke out at the beginning of May 1919 in the rear of the Soviet troops in the Ekaterinoslav and Kherson gubernias. The revolt directly threatened the flank and rear of the Soviet troops in the Donets Basin and the rear communications of units of the 2nd Ukrainian Army in the Crimea, and also hindered railway transport throughout the Ukraine. In the period from May 11 to 24, by simultaneous blows from the east, north and south, the troops of the Ukrainian armies routed the insurgents. p. 230

<sup>225</sup> On April 24, 1919, the Council of People's Commissars adopted the decree "On Organising Migration to the Producing Gubernias and the Don Region". The migration of peasants and workers of the northern gubernias of the R.S.F.S.R. to the southern areas of the country was carried out in order to ease their plight in the matter of food supply and restore agriculture in localities which had suffered from whiteguard revolts.

On this subject see also the telegram of May 21, 1919, signed by Lenin and S. P. Sereda, sent to the gubernia land departments in Smolensk, Tver, Moscow and Ryazan (Lenin Miscellany XXXIV, pp. 144-45). p. 230

<sup>226</sup> In a telegram to the Central Committee of the R.C.P.(B.), S. I. Gusev, M. M. Lashevich and K. K. Yurenev, members of the Revolutionary Military Council of the Eastern Front, objected to

S. S. Kamenev being replaced by A. A. Samoilo as commander of the Eastern Front. The telegram stated that F. V. Kostyaev, Chief of Staff of the Revolutionary Military Council of the Republic, was making unwarranted replacements of army commanders, and that S. I. Aralov, a member of the R.M.C. of the Republic endorsed these orders of Kostyaev's by his signature. On May 25, 1919, S. S. Kamenev was reappointed commander of the Eastern Front. p. 231

<sup>227</sup> The occasion for Lenin's telegram was the receipt on May 20, 1919, at 7.10 p.m., of a telegram addressed to him, which reported that on their arrival in Novgorod, after having been received by Lenin, the Chairman of the Artel Association, A. A. Bulatov, and the Manager of the Instructors' Department, Lyubimov, had been arrested.

Lenin wrote the following note on the telegram he had received: "File for handy reference. Reply sent 20/V."

The inquiry mentioned by Lenin was made on May 13, 1919 (see Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 50, Document 567). p. 232

<sup>228</sup> Riga was captured on May 22, 1919, by the German troops under General Goltz and by the Lettish whiteguards. p. 233

<sup>229</sup> On May 26, 1919, Lenin sent another telegram to the Voronezh Gubernia Military Commissar (a copy was sent to the Gubernia Party Committee), stating: "Report immediately how many Communists have been sent to the Southern Front. Lenin, Chairman of the Council of People's Commissars." (V. I. Lenin, Voyennaya perezписка, Moscow, 1957, p. 133.) p. 235

<sup>230</sup> The sentence in the telegram from the words "Bear in mind" to the words "and the Ukraine" was written by Lenin. The first part of the telegram is a typewritten text, apparently written by Chicherin since there is a note by him to the document saying: "To Comrade Lenin. Draft of a telegram; please reply whether you agree to it." He also wrote the last sentence: "Exceptions—Chinese workers, Persians, by orders from the centre." p. 235

<sup>232</sup> On the same day, May 28, 1919, another telegram, signed by Lenin, Krestinsky and Kamenev, was sent by direct line to Rakovsky, Chairman of the Ukrainian Council of People's Commissars. It contained the full text of the decision adopted by the C.C. of the R.C.P.(B.) and outlined concrete measures for its fulfilment (see Lenin Miscellany XXXIV, p. 153). p. 236

units of the Southern Front and allowed Denikin's forces to unite with Cossack insurgents in villages of the Upper Don. p. 238

<sup>234</sup> In a letter to the Organising Bureau of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) entitled "Pandering to Prejudices", Y. M. Yaroslavsky asked the members of the Bureau whether persons who took part in religious ceremonies could be allowed to remain in the Party. p. 239

<sup>235</sup> This refers to the plan of the Ukraine's army men to set up a Revolutionary Military Council of the Donets Basin Front subordinated to the Southern Front and consisting of the 2nd Ukrainian, the 8th and the 13th armies. The plan was communicated to Lenin from Kharkov on May 31 by a telegram from the authorised agent of the Council of Defence. p. 241

<sup>236</sup> On May 27, 1919, the C.P.C. heard a report by A. I. Svidersky, a member of the Board of the People's Commissariat for Food on the state of grain procurements and on plans for the food procurement campaign before the next harvest. The Council decided to publish Svidersky's report in the form of an article and to transmit abroad by radio a short communication about it with statistical data.

Lenin's instruction to the secretary was written on the text of the prepared radio-information, which stressed that, in spite of extremely adverse conditions (lack of commodities, devaluation of the currency, seizure by whiteguards of the main grain-growing regions), procurements of grain in 1919 were proceeding more successfully than in the previous year: the Soviet food supply organisations collected 102 million poods of grain during the nine months (from August 1918 to April 1919) compared with only 28 million poods during the ten months (from November 1917 to August 1918)

Svidersky's article "Immediate Food Prospects" was published in Izvestia for June 3 and 4, 1919. p. 241

<sup>237</sup> This telegram concerns the situation on the Western Front and the conflict between A. I. Okulov, a member of the Revolutionary Military Council of the Western Front, on the one hand, and J. V. Stalin, G. Y. Zinoviev and the leadership of the 7th Army, on the other. In the Central Party Archives of the Institute of Marxism-Leninism of the C.C., C.P.S.U., there are notes on this question which were exchanged between Lenin and Sklyansky at a meeting. Lenin wrote to Sklyansky: "Stalin demands the recall of Okulov, whom he accuses of intrigues and disorganisation." In answer to a note of Sklyansky's giving a favourable testimonial of Okulov, Lenin gave the following directive to Sklyansky: "Then draft the text of a telegram (a precise statement of what the 7th Army is accused by Okulov) and I will send a code message to Stalin and Zinoviev to keep the conflict within bounds and channel it in the right direction." The draft of the telegram published here was drawn up in accordance with this directive and afterwards supplemented and signed by Lenin.

- <sup>239</sup> The ultimatum mentioned in this note was presented to the British Government by a delegation of the British Trades Union Congress. - <sup>240</sup> On June 6, 1919, the Political Bureau of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) passed a decision to transfer S. P. Natsarenus to the Ukraine. In this connection the following telegram was sent to Stalin: "Politbureau of C.C. has decided, in view of the extreme necessity of immediately effecting unity of command in the Ukraine, to appoint Natsarenus a member of the Revolutionary Military Council of the 14th Army, formerly the 2nd Ukrainian Army. Lenin, Krestinsky, Kamenev." (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 50, p. 490.) p. 247

- <sup>244</sup> On receiving Lenin's telegram, Stalin wrote on it a reply for dispatch to Moscow: "What was lost has not yet been recovered. Heavy crossfire is going on. Everything that could be sent has been sent for operations by land. Obviously it is impossible and inadvisable to leave for Moscow during these days. Postpone the plenum. We have no objection to publication of part of the document...." (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 50, p. 490.)

- <sup>245</sup> The counter-revolutionary mutiny at Fort Krasnaya Gorka, which broke out during the night of June 12, 1919, was put down during the night of June 13. Fort Seraya Loshad, which had joined the rebels, also fell during the day of June 16. Only a few hours before the mutiny was suppressed, the Soviet command received information that a British naval force of 23 ships had set out from Libau to aid the Krasnaya Gorka mutineers. In view of the fact, however, that the Soviet fleet dominated the sea approaches to Petrograd, the British command did not venture to begin large scale operations and was compelled to limit the activities of its squadron to isolated actions. p. 254

<sup>246</sup> This refers to the decision of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.), dated June 15, 1919, on General Headquarters. In a statement to the C.C. Trotsky opposed this decision, which he described as containing "whims, mischief", etc. p. 255

<sup>247</sup> Lenin wrote this letter in connection with the strike of workers at a number of enterprises of Tver Gubernia. The strike, which broke out in the middle of June 1919 and lasted several days, was caused by dissatisfaction among the workers over the reduction of the bread ration and food supplies. Counter-revolutionary elements tried to take advantage of the economic difficulties of the Soviet Republic in order to inflame anti-Soviet sentiments. The question of the food strikes was discussed at joint meetings of the Politbureau and Orgbureau of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) on June 18 and 24, 1919. Special measures were taken to improve the position of the workers of the textile district. p. 255

<sup>248</sup> This refers to a revolt in the rear of Kolchak's army. The Kustanai partisans who broke through to the Soviet forces were formed into a Communist Regiment which fought the enemies of the revolution to the very end of the Civil War. p. 256

<sup>249</sup> In a telegram on June 20, 1919, V. I. Nevsky and L. S. Sosnovsky reported from Tver that the strike was at an end and all enterprises were resuming work. They wrote that, over and above the delegates constitutionally elected by the uyezd congresses for the forthcoming Gubernia Congress of Soviets, the Gubernia Executive Committee had invited an extra delegate from each volost for the purpose of strengthening ties with the countryside. The Gubernia Congress of Soviets decided to ask the C.E.C. to grant the volost delegates the right to vote. Nevsky and Sosnovsky objected to this, stressing that 80 per cent of the volost delegates were non-Party, predominantly kulak elements, and they asked Lenin to reply urgently.

The telegraph form on which Lenin's telegram was written bears a note by him: "Files." p. 257

In reply to Lenin's inquiry, Svidersky reported that, in order to expedite grain procurements on the Belaya River and in Ufa Gubernia in general, M. I. Frumkin, a member of the Board of the People's Commissariat for Food, had gone there from Samara, and that measures would be taken to send food army men to the Belaya. p. 258

- <sup>251</sup> This refers to the offensive of General Wrangel's Caucasian army, which was part of Denikin's forces, in the direction of Saratov and Penza. p. 259
- <sup>252</sup> In his reply to Lenin on the same day, Frunze wired: "I have devoted and am devoting the most serious attention to the enemy operations on the Urals Front, particularly in the area of Nikolayevsk, in view of the obvious danger of the Kolchak and Denikin fronts linking up on the Volga. Unfortunately, in this sector I have had at my disposal only weak units, completely untrained and often poorly armed forces. All the rest were sent against Kolchak at the time of his offensive against Samara and until now have been engaged in the Ufa direction...." (Iz istorii grazhdanskoi voyny v SSSR, Vol. 2, 1961, p. 234.) Frunze assured Lenin that Uralsk and the entire northern part of the region would be cleared of whiteguards within 10 to 14 days. On July 11, 1919, the Red Army liberated Uralsk. p. 259
- <sup>253</sup> On June 16, 1919, the C.P.C. received a telegram from military engineer Y. A. Berkalov stating that the finance department of the Porokhovo District Soviet of Petrograd had imposed an extraordinary tax of 40,000 rubles on the 50,000 rubles granted to Berkalov by a decision of the C.P.C. of November 26, 1918, as a reward for his artillery invention (consisting in the discovery of methods for long-range artillery fire and for increasing the muzzle velocity of the shells)
The decision of the C.P.C. "On Inventions", dated June 30, 1919, which laid down that rewards for inventions were exempt from taxation, was published on July 4 in Izvestia No. 144. p. 260
- <sup>254</sup> Lenin advised Gorky to "take a trip" on the propaganda steamer Red Star, which was making a cruise on the Volga and Kama. Krupskaya took part in this trip along with a group of top-level functionaries of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.), the C.E.C., and various People's Commissariats. On July 10, Lenin wired Krupskaya: "I saw Gorky today and tried to persuade him to travel on your steamer, about which I had sent a telegram to Nizhni, but he flatly refused." (See present edition, Vol. 37, p. 545.) p. 260
- <sup>255</sup> On July 3, 1919, the Bureau of the Women's Organisation in Sormovo requested N. K. Krupskaya, who had come to Sormovo, to help obtain a building from the Sormovo Works Management for a children's home. Housing belonging to the works could be made over to other institutions only by an order of the Council of Defence; hence the application of the Sormovo Women's Organisation was forwarded to Lenin. Lenin's directive was considered at a meeting of the Presidium of the Sormovo Soviet on July 18. The matter was referred for a final decision to the Presidium of the Nizhni-Novgorod Gubernia Executive Committee, which decided to meet the request of the Sormovo Women's Organisation. p. 261

256 At the beginning of July the Command of the Southern Front asked Lenin to permit a call-up of 18-year-old working men in districts close to the front. Before putting the matter before the Council of Defence, Lenin asked the All-Russia Chief Headquarters for information about reinforcements sent to the Southern Front. In reply to Lenin's telegram of July 8, the Revolutionary Military Council of the Southern Front repeated its request. On July 11, 1919, the Council of Defence decided "to permit the R.M.C. of the Southern Front to carry out mobilisation of 18-year-olds in the above-mentioned areas" (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 378). In addition, the Revolutionary Military Council of the Republic was instructed to adopt measures for the immediate dispatch of the trained units to the fronts, primarily the Southern Front. p. 262

257 F. Shturmin, a Red Army soldier, sent a letter to Lenin asking for orders to be sent to the Nizhni-Novgorod Uyezd Military Commissariat to give him his pay for the period of his illness. Together with the note to Sklyansky, Lenin sent the documents he had received from Shturmin. p. 262

258 The text of Lenin's directive was quoted by N. P. Gorbunov, head of the Science and Technology Department of the Supreme Economic Council of the R.S.F.S.R., in the general plan drawn up by him on July 14, 1919, outlining measures for the extraction of oil, coal, sapropel, shales and fuel gases.

In the spring of 1919 a large expedition from the Chief Shale Committee was sent to the Volga to organise the exploitation of fuel shales and bituminous deposits in Undory, Kapshira (near Syzran) and Syukeyevo.

In the second half of July and in August 1919, a number of executives on the staff of the Chief Shale Committee, headed by I. M. Gubkin, went to the Volga to check on the work of the expedition and give it assistance. Included in the group were F. F. Syromolotov, Chairman of the Chief Mining Board of the Supreme Economic Council, and V. P. Nogin, who enlisted the co-operation of local Party and administrative organisations. The results of the expedition's work were reported to Lenin (see I. M. Gubkin's contribution in the book Vospominaniya o Vladimire Ilyiche Lenine [Recollections about Vladimir Ilyich Lenin], Part 2, Moscow, 1957, pp. 300-19). p. 264

259 J. Hanecki, a member of the Board of the People's Commissariat for Finance, was to draft a reply to Rakovsky's telegram received by Lenin on July 16, 1919, requesting the dispatch of money that had been promised in connection with the acute financial crisis in the Ukraine. Hanecki drew up the following reply: "Today 300 is being sent, of which 50 are assigned for Kaluga. In future, consignments will be made regularly." On Hanecki's reply Lenin

- wrote his second note and marked at the top of the document "Reply to Rakovsky". p. 265
- <sup>260</sup> In a telegram to the Soviet Government of Latvia on July 17, 1919, Lenin wrote: "Please get in touch with Stalin, member of the Revolutionary Military Council of the Western Front, on the question of the change of name." (Lenin Miscellany XXIV, p. 194.) The renaming of the Lettish Division did not take place; it retained its old name—the Lettish Rifle Division. p. 266
- <sup>261</sup> The Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces of the Republic at that time was S. S. Kamenev. p. 266
- <sup>262</sup> Lenin is referring to the capture of Zlatoust by the 5th Army (July 13, 1919), and of Ekaterinburg (now Sverdlovsk) by the 2nd Army on July 14, 1919. p. 267
- <sup>263</sup> The question of establishing fixed prices for grain and manufactured goods was discussed at a meeting of the C.P.C. on July 22, 1919, and at further meetings of the Council on July 24 and 31. The decision adopted on July 31 laid down that the selling price for workers and office employees would remain as before, and the People's Commissariat for Food and the Board of the Supreme Economic Council were directed not later than September 1, 1919, to sign and publish fixed prices for foodstuffs and manufactured goods. p. 268
- <sup>264</sup> In reply (their telegram of July 28, 1919) Frunze and Lashevich informed Lenin that the situation south of Buzuluk and in the Uralsk area gave no cause for alarm; that not later than July 31 the whole right bank of the Ural River would be liberated from the enemy, and that the railway to Uralsk was cleared and rapidly being repaired. The telegram also mentioned that a serious situation had arisen north of Astrakhan. p. 269
- <sup>265</sup> This refers to the plan of struggle against Denikin drawn up by the Commander-in-Chief, S. S. Kamenev. According to this plan, the main attack was to be delivered by the left wing of the Southern Front via the Don Region with a secondary attack in the Khar'kov direction. The plan was expounded in a directive of the Supreme Command dated July 23, 1919 (see Iz istorii grazhdanskoj voiny v SSSR, Vol. 2, 1961, pp. 499-500). On July 27, 1919, L. D. Trotsky sent a telegram to E. M. Sklyansky, Deputy Chairman of the Revolutionary Military Council of the Republic, in which he reported that "Commander of the Southern Front Yegoriev considers Kamenev's operational plan for the south to be wrong, and in carrying it out does not expect success" (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 381). This opinion, Trotsky wrote, was shared by Sokolnikov, member of the Revolutionary Military Council of the front, and Peremytov, Chief of Operations Division. p. 270
- <sup>266</sup> Written in reply to a communication from Bela Kun about the serious situation of the Hungarian Soviet Republic, against which an armed intervention had been started, and to his request for urgent aid from Soviet Russia. p. 271

- 267 Lenin, who was resting at Gorki on August 3 and 4, 1919, apparently wrote this note in connection with the fact that at the end of July and beginning of August 1919 strong rumours were current in the West-European press, and were also spread by the Russian Mensheviks and Socialist-Revolutionaries, about an imminent replacement of the Soviet Government in Russia by a coalition government (with the participation of Mensheviks and Socialist-Revolutionaries). Pravda on August 6 and Izvestia on August 8 published articles ridiculing these rumours, which reflected the imperialists' hopes for the overthrow of Soviet rule in Russia with the aid of social traitors, as had occurred in Hungary. p. 272
- 268 This refers to Trotsky's telegram to Lenin reporting that at a meeting in Kiev on August 6, 1919, attended by L. D. Trotsky, Kh. G. Rakovsky, A. I. Yegorov, S. I. Aralov, N. G. Semyonov and V. P. Zatonsky, it was decided to withdraw the Soviet troops to a new line and to surrender to the enemy the Black Sea coast with Odessa and Nikolayev. p. 273
- 269 Written on a letter from C. S. Bobrovskaya, a professional revolutionary and member of the Party since 1898, asking Lenin to help fix her up with a job. p. 275
- 270 Lenin is referring to Smilga's letter to the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) reporting on the grave situation at the Southern Front. "The chief and basic cause of our reverses," he wrote, "lies in the inability of the Revolutionary Military Council of the Southern Front to command and control the troops.... The Revolutionary Military Council, as now constituted, is ineffectual. Failure to understand one another is so great that the idea of achieving any harmony in the work is ruled out." (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 382.) p. 276
- 271 This note was apparently written during a meeting of the Council of People's Commissars on August 26, 1919, at which the work of the Food Research Institute was discussed. The C.P.C. decided "that a report by the People's Commissariat for Health and the People's Commissariat for Food on the practical tasks of the Food Research Institute be made within three months. Within the same period, a report by the Food Research Institute to be made on the techniques of producing sugar from sawdust". Fotieva wrote on Lenin's note: "Fulfilled 28.VIII."
- Apparently at the same sitting, Krasin wrote a note to Lenin saying that 18 lbs. of sugar could be obtained from one pood of sawdust. Lenin wrote back in reply: "Unbelievable—18 lbs. from one pood!! 45 per cent??? Sugar content? %?" (Lenin Miscellany XXIV, p. 29.) Lenin frequently reverted to this subject (see present edition, Vol. 35, Document 230). p. 278
- 272 Mamontov's cavalry corps was directed by Denikin to deliver a blow in the rear of the Soviet troops on the Southern Front. On August 10, 1919, Mamontov's cavalry broke through the front in the vicinity of Novokhopersk and raided a number of towns and villages. This created a threat to the Soviet forces, made offensive operations difficult, and upset the system of command and supply in various places. Lenin considered it an urgent task to organise the rout of Mamontov's corps (see Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 39, pp. 171-72). Mamontov's corps was routed in October-November 1919. p. 279

"Lashevich's godsons"—Mamontov's cavalry corps.

"Sokolnikov's godson"—F. K. Mironov, who had raised a Don corps in the Saransk area and on August 23, 1919, organised a revolt against the Soviets. The revolt was quelled by S. M. Budyonny's cavalry corps. p. 279

<sup>274</sup> On September 1, 1919, a general meeting of trade unions was held in Tashkent. After hearing Lenin's telegram, the meeting passed a resolution which stated: "...Red Tashkent, in the name of Red Turkestan, vows to fulfil all the assignments given us by the centre, and the red banner, proudly unfurled over Turkestan, will not falter in the hands of Red Tashkent." (Iz istorii grazhdanskoi voiny v SSSR, Vol. 2, 1961, p. 737.) p. 280

<sup>275</sup> In his reply to Lenin on September 2, 1919, Stalin wired that on the day of Marchlewski's arrival to conduct negotiations with the Lithuanians, the latter suddenly launched an attack. Obviously, the telegram pointed out, the Lithuanians had used talk about negotiations as a cover in order to lull the vigilance of the Soviet Government. Stalin stated that he had not received any decisions of the Central Committee about conducting negotiations. "Today," he wrote further, "our counter-offensive has begun. We have issued an order to Front Headquarters to heighten vigilance and not allow any envoys to pass the front line without its knowledge and consent." p. 281

<sup>277</sup> Written on a covering letter dated September 12, 1919, from A. K. Paikes, Deputy People's Commissar for State Control, accompanying the report of K. F. - <sup>278</sup> Written in connection with a communication from the Smolny Staff Committee reporting numerous cases of abuses, embezzlement and peculation of money, food products and clothing collected for the Red Army. - <sup>279</sup> On September 11, 1919, the Politbureau of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) discussed the arrests of bourgeois intellectuals and directed F. E. Dzerzhinsky, N. I. Bukharin and L. B. Kamenev to have their cases reconsidered. p. 283
- <sup>280</sup> At a joint meeting of the Politbureau and Orgbureau of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) on September 18, 1919, it was decided to cancel the decision about sending Serebryakov to Selivachov. p. 286
- <sup>281</sup> In a letter to Lenin dated September 26, 1919, Chicherin asked that the question of a new peace proposal to the Entente should be discussed in the C.C., R.C.P.(B.). Chicherin wrote that an official proposal from the government could be addressed to the Entente, or Gorky could be asked to write a letter pointing out the Soviet Government's invariable readiness to sign peace. Lenin wrote on Chicherin's letter: "...Not in the name of the government.... Confine ourselves to Gorky's letter..." (See present edition, Vol. 42, p. 144.) p. 286
- <sup>282</sup> This refers to A. S. Solovyov's memo on "Ukhta Oil" sent to Lenin on September 23, 1919.

- <sup>284</sup> At a meeting of the Council of Defence on October 17, 1919, Lenin made a report on the subject of reviewing warrants and assignments for military property. The Council of Defence decided to refer this question to a commission consisting of S. D. Markov, A. I. Svidersky, A. I. Rykov and E. M. Sklyansky, with instructions, "if agreement is reached", to present the decision for Lenin's signature by Monday, October 20. The Council of Defence discussed also the question of the search for property suitable for military purposes. On October 31, 1919, the Council of Defence endorsed a decision for the review of warrants and assignments for military property and a decision on the search for property suitable for military purposes. p. 292
- <sup>285</sup> On October 15, 1919, the Politbureau of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) decided to direct the commission to discuss Regulations on a Committee of Aid for the Wounded and submit them to the C.P.C. on behalf of the Central Committee. On October 28 the draft Regulations "On the Committee of Aid for Wounded and Sick Red Army Men" were examined at a sitting of the C.P.C. On October 29, the Regulations under this title were endorsed by the All-Russia C.E.C. and published in Izvestia No. 245, November 1, 1919. p. 293

<sup>286</sup> Lenin is referring to the decision of the Council of Defence dated October 16, 1919. It contained a directive to defend Petrograd to the last drop of blood, without yielding an inch of ground and fighting in the streets. In his proposed plan of struggle against Yudenich's forces, Trotsky also spoke of the need to prepare for street fighting in the city. But, in issuing its main directive for holding Petrograd at all costs until the arrival of reinforcements, the Council of Defence allowed for street fighting only if the enemy succeeded in penetrating into the city, whereas Trotsky's argument was different. He asserted that "for purely military considerations" it would be advantageous to allow the enemy to break into Petrograd which should therefore be converted into "a big trap for the whiteguard troops". p. 294

<sup>287</sup> Written by Lenin on Smirnov's telegram which reported that "the morale in Siberia is a firm, Soviet one. By organising local forces, we shall cope with Kolchak; all that is needed are uniforms and cartridges. Yesterday we went over to the offensive along the whole front, and expect to reach the Ishim in three weeks".

Further, mention was made of the desire of the Communists of the 5th Army that the army be transferred to the Southern Front. Smirnov proposed that after the Ishim three divisions of this army should be transferred to the south. "If you provide uniforms for 30,000," he wrote, "we shall immediately mobilise this number of soldiers in Chelyabinsk and the place to which we are going. Send only uniforms; we have and will have all the manpower" (underlinings by Lenin) (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 388).

The document bears a note by Lenin asking that the telegram be returned to him. p. 295

<sup>288</sup> The situation on the Southern Front becoming extremely acute, the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) and the Soviet Government demanded that the military command should first of all eliminate the white-guard forces which might co-operate closely with Denikin's army. The Urals White Cossack army of General Tolstov, being adjacent to the right flank of Denikin's front, was in a position to make contact with Denikin's forces. It operated in the North Caspian area and diverted to itself troops of the Turkestan Front as well as part of the forces of the 11th Army of the South-Eastern Front. p. 295

<sup>289</sup> In the spring of 1919 Denikin seized Daghestan, Chechen, Ossetia and other national areas of the Northern Caucasus. The mountain peoples responded with a holy war against the whiteguards. Bourgeois-nationalist elements tried to take the leadership of this insurrectionary movement into their hands. However, they did not succeed in winning over the main mass of the mountain people. Under the leadership of the Caucasian Regional Committee of the R.C.P.(B.), explanatory work was carried out among the insurgents on a large scale and Communist organisations were formed among the partisan forces. The insurrectionary movement rapidly assumed a Bolshevik character. p. 296

<sup>290</sup> In accordance with the directive issued on October 17, 1919, by Commander-in-Chief S. S. Kamenev, a striking force under S. D. Kharlamov was organised in the Kolpino-Tosno area. This group was to deliver an attack against the enemy in the Krasnoye Selo-Gatchina direction. At the same time the command of the Western Front planned a general counter-offensive by the 7th and 15th armies. The 7th Army was to continue the attack in the direction of Gatchina-Volosovo-Yamburg, and the 15th Army in the Pskov-Luga area. p. 297

<sup>291</sup> The Central Party Archives of the Institute of Marxism-Leninism of the C.C., C.P.S.U. contain an extract from a reconnaissance report of November 17, 1919, which states that in the vicinity of Disna fraternisation took place with Polish soldiers and the lower ranks of the Polish officers. The document bears a note by Lenin: "This is very important! Send copies to Comrade Trotsky for all members of the Politbureau." p. 298

<sup>292</sup> In a letter to Lenin dated October 22, 1919, Chicherin objected to Trotsky's proposal for starting a war against Estonia. He wrote that Yudenich would have to be pursued on Estonian territory only if he retreated there. Chicherin pointed out the need to do everything to avoid invading Estonia. p. 300

<sup>293</sup> Written on a report from Commander-in-Chief S. S. Kamenev asking that drafts of governmental directives on operational matters should first be submitted for consideration to the Supreme Command. The document bears the following notes: "I agree. Only notice should be given not in the name of the Central Committee, but in the name of the Chairman of the Revolutionary Military Council of the Republic. N. Krestinsky, L. Kamenev." "I agree with the request of the Commander-in-Chief. M. Kalinin." p. 300

<sup>294</sup> In the autumn of 1919, I. Volny was summoned to Moscow and received by Lenin. During a two-hour conversation, as Bonch-Bruyevich recounted later in his recollections, Lenin showed an interest in the writer's creative plans and questioned him about everything he had seen. p. 301

<sup>295</sup> By a decision of the Central Committee of the Party, more than half the graduating class of Communist students of the Sverdlov University were sent to the front. On October 24, 1919, Lenin delivered a speech to the students of the University who were leaving for the front (see present edition, Vol. 30, pp. 76-84). p. 302

<sup>296</sup> This letter was written in connection with the departure for the front of Ivanovo-Voznesensk Communists who had been called up. A meeting of the city Party organisation took place in Ivanovo-Voznesensk on October 3. It called on every member of the Party to devote himself to the cause of routing Denikin's army and instructed the Party organisations to begin mobilising Communists for the front. The first party of mobilised men were seen off to the front on October 22. On October 24, the mobilised Ivanovo-Voznesensk Communists arrived in Moscow. Lenin made a speech to them in the House of Trade Unions (see Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 39, p. 238). Fifty of the Ivanovo-Voznesensk Communists were sent to the Headquarters and the Political Department of the South-Eastern Front and the remainder to the 9th Army. p. 302

<sup>297</sup> In a telegram on October 24, 1919, the Chairman of the Pugachev Uyezd Food Conference reported that the surplus appropriation quota had been fulfilled 50 per cent, and in some volosts 10.0 per cent. The telegram stated that the planned quota would be fulfilled before December 1, 1919. p. 303

<sup>298</sup> Written on a memo addressed to Lenin by the Business Manager of the Council of People's Commissars, V. D. Bonch-Bruyevich, who pointed out the urgent need for building public baths with disinfection chambers at Moscow's railway stations in order to combat an imminent epidemic of typhus.

The document bears a note by Semashko: "Z. P. Solovyov. A commission should be set up ... to urgently consider the matter. Dr. Levenson is instructed to take the initiative in convening a conference." p. 304

<sup>299</sup> Simultaneously Lenin wrote a similar letter to Kotomkin, Food Commissar of Ufa Gubernia, and on December 11, 1919, wired Reske, agent of the Central Executive Committee in Ufa (with copies to Fotieva and Kotomkin): "Fotieva is not to leave before January 1st. Report fulfilment." (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 391.) p. 305

<sup>300</sup> On November 6, 1919, the Politbureau of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) accepted the idea of the Red Army crossing the Estonian frontier to complete the rout of Yudenich's whiteguard forces. On November 14, however, this decision was rescinded at a meeting of the Politbureau which noted that under pressure from the working population the Estonian Government was agreeing to resume peace negotiations and, apparently, would not support Yudenich.

On December 5, 1919, a peace conference of the R.S.F.S.R. and Estonia opened in the town of Yuriiev (Tartu), at which an agreement on the cessation of hostilities between the R.S.F.S.R. and Estonia was signed (December 31, 1919). On February 2, 1920, a peace treaty between Soviet Russia and Estonia was concluded. p. 309

<sup>301</sup> On the back of this letter, I. I. Radchenko, Chairman of the Chief Peat Committee, wrote: "A report on the 1919 peat campaign was sent to Lenin at 1 p.m. on November 11, 1919. On the same day, at 11 p.m., this comment on it was received." p. 310

<sup>302</sup> This telegram was written by decision of the Council of Defence, which dealt with the question of food supplies for the mining and metallurgical workers of the Urals at its sitting on November 20, 1919. Later, on December 15, Lenin sent another telegram to the same destination: "...regarding the supply of food for the Urals workers, only once has a reply been received—on December 15. Reports (how many poods are delivered) must be sent twice a month" (Lenin Miscellany XXXIV, p. 245). On January 14, 1920, a telegram signed by Lenin and Rykov was sent to the R.M.C. of the Eastern Front, the Ufa Gubernia Food Commissar, the Commissar of the Samara-Zlatoust railway, and the Special Food Commissar of the 5th Army, pointing out the necessity of supplying food to all workers of the South Urals factories, mines and pits (see Lenin Miscellany XXXIV, p. 253). p. 311

<sup>303</sup> Lenin is referring to Weissbrot's telegram of November 20, 1919, reporting on the extremely grave situation created in Orenburg by the spread of a typhus epidemic. The absence of firewood and lack of medical personnel made it difficult to combat the epidemic. For the fight against typhus, Weissbrot pointed out, it was necessary to increase the number of hospital beds in Orenburg to five thousand and to transfer an additional two hospitals. p. 312

<sup>304</sup> Written in connection with a report from B. S. Weissbrot dated November 5, 1919, concerning the supply of doctors for the Red Army. Weissbrot pointed out that there was a surplus of doctors in the medical institutions of Moscow and urged the need to call up doctors and send them to the front. Lenin marked off the passage in the report which said that some institutions, for instance, the clinics of the Second Moscow State University, had more doctors exempted than they had altogether before the imperialist war, and wrote "N.B." in the margin and a footnote saying: "Check this fact carefully and at once." On another page, where Weissbrot pointed to the existence in Moscow of unnecessary medical establishments, Lenin noted: "how many of them are there?" (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 394.) p. 312

<sup>305</sup> Lenin proposed that a representative from Kiev Gubernia be included in the C.E.C. His proposal was adopted. K. Tolkachov was elected as the representative from Kiev Gubernia to the C.E.C. p. 314

<sup>306</sup> This note was written on a letter from S. M. Kirov and I. P. Babkin dated December 9, 1919, concerning the situation in the Caucasus. The letter stated that there was no exact information whether Kamo had arrived in Baku.

In the autumn of 1919, Kamo, at the head of a combat group, was sent secretly from Moscow with arms, munitions and literature to carry out underground work in the Caucasus. Overcoming all difficulties, the group arrived safely in Baku and joined in the struggle against the Denikinists. p. 314

<sup>307</sup> In a conversation by direct line with members of the Turkestan Commission, Frunze said: "The refusal to send top-level political workers is due to the big demands of the Southern Front and the Ukraine.... By our efforts we have succeeded in getting ... a few people for both the political and the technical jobs." (*M. V. Frunze na frontakh grazhdanskoi voiny. <sup>309</sup> This note was apparently written in connection with the discussion at a meeting of the Council of Defence on December 17, 1919, of a report by L. B. Krasin: "On Drawing Up Forms of Accounting Enabling the Work of the Railways To Be Kept Under Review." The final decision on this question was put off until the next meeting; the Council of Defence instructed Y. V. Lomonosov, member of the Board of the Commissariat for Railways, to submit a report on the forms of accounting giving statistical data ("such forms", the decision stipulated, "must be briefer than those presented by Comrade Krasin"). On December 24, the Council of Defence endorsed the programme of measures set forth by Lomonosov, and instructed the People's Commissariat for Railways "to present it tomorrow to Comrade Lenin for signature in the form of a series of decrees" (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 396).

The document bears a note in an unknown hand: "Executed 19.XII." p. 317

<sup>310</sup> In the autumn of 1919 a group of "federalists", headed by G. Lapchinsky, P. Popov and Y. Lander, was formed in the Communist Party of the Ukraine. The group took a bourgeois nationalist stand and started factional splitting activities. On December 13, 1919, the federalists called a meeting of 32 of their supporters at which they declared against the policy of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) towards the Ukraine. Popov and Lander signed a statement on behalf of 32 Ukrainian Party functionaries criticising the composition of the Bureau of the C.C., C.P.(B.) of the Ukraine and its methods of work, and protesting against Party and administrative functionaries for the Ukraine being mobilised from Russian gubernias.

On December 18, 1919, the Orgbureau of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) examined the declaration of the Ukrainian Party functionaries and decided "to reprimand them because, instead of doing positive work in accordance with the directive of the All-Ukraine Revolutionary Committee and the Bureau of the C.C., C.P.(B.) of the Ukraine, they are wasting time and energy in gossip and irresponsible political chicanery, which is a violation of Party discipline....” p. 317

<sup>311</sup> This refers to the appointment of P. N. Lepeshinsky to Turkestan, where he worked as Deputy People's Commissar for Education. p. 318

<sup>312</sup> On December 21, 1919, a letter signed by Lenin was sent also to the Party Committee and Executive Committee of Tula Gubernia. It stressed the need for sending not less than 400 truck-loads of potatoes to the Moscow working people within the next ten days. "On your achievements, energy and determination," the letter stated, "depend the salvation of the working class, the consolidation of the gains of the revolution, and its further successes and final triumph." (Lenin Miscellany XXIV, p. 146.) p. 319

<sup>313</sup> This note was apparently written in connection with a sitting of the Narrow Council of People's Commissars on December 18, 1919, which discussed a request from the Moscow Gubernia Executive Committee for the cancellation of a circular of the People's Commissariat for Internal Affairs on the use of church buildings for school purposes. The Narrow C.P.C. resolved to reject the request of the Moscow Gubernia Executive Committee, and to direct the People's Commissariats for Education, Justice and Internal Affairs to draft a relevant instruction and submit it to the Narrow C.P.C. by December 29, 1919. p. 320

<sup>314</sup> Written on a telegram sent from Ruzayevka by J. Kh. Peters, Chairman of the Special Committee for Introducing Martial Law on the Railways. It was received late in the evening on December 25, 1919, and contained a proposal for recalling skilled workers of railway repair-shops and depots from the army, since locomotive repairs had decreased almost everywhere, and in some places dropped to a catastrophic minimum.

At a meeting of the Council of Defence on December 31, after discussion of a draft decision put forward by L. B. Krasin "on withdrawing from the army skilled railway repair-shop men and workers", it was decided to regard the question as settled, in view of Krasin's statement that in practice it had already been solved. p. 321

<sup>316</sup> This refers to the meeting of the Politbureau of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) on December 27, 1919, which discussed the following: an inquiry by Chicherin whether he could send the Georgian Government a proposal for joint military operations against Denikin without recognising that government; a report by Chicherin that the Estonians agreed to give the military guarantees asked for on condition of their being granted the right to construct fortifications on the left bank of the Narova; a statement by Chicherin concerning the Petrograd branch of ROSTA, which had published a communication of a military nature that could be interpreted by the Entente and Finland as an intention on the part of Soviet Russia to launch an attack against Finland, and other questions. p. 323

<sup>318</sup> On the previous day, December 29, 1919, Lenin received Maria Movshovich in his office in the Kremlin. She had come to Moscow from the front because her husband had fallen ill with typhus and her daughter was left without anyone to look after her. <sup>320</sup> Written on a telegram telephoned to Lenin by V. N. Yakovleva, a member of the Board of the People's Commissariat for Food, and received by C.P.C. secretary M. I. Glyasser on January 1, 1920, at 4.25 p.m. It concerned information which had arrived on December 30 and 31 about the progress of the loading and dispatch of food trains to Moscow. Yakovleva reported also the absence of information from Kazan and Simbirsk, since the direct line was out of action on both December 30 and 31, and that in Samara the number of empties provided for food was considerably less than what was required.

At a meeting of the Council of Defence on January 2, 1920, Lenin delivered a report on "Military Accountancy of the People's Commissariat for Posts and Telegraphs and the People's Commissariat for Railways". p. 324

ditional affiliation to the Third International". (See present edition, Vol. 31, p. 74.) p. 326

- <sup>323</sup> The note to Svidersky was written on a letter to Lenin from the workers of the Balashinsk factory, who wrote: "We workers receive food, exclusively bread, at intervals of 5 to 14 days, and no other products. If potatoes are issued from the centre they stand for about a month on the railway line.... Comrade Lenin, we ask you to help us improve our position so that we can do better work for the good and prosperity of our revolutionary Russia." p. 327
- <sup>324</sup> On January 5, 1920, Tsyurupa sent a letter to the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) in which he pointed out that the decision adopted by the Council of People's Commissars on January 3, 1920, permitting agencies of the Supreme Economic Council to purchase forage at free prices in cases where the State Control found it impossible for agencies of the People's Commissariat for Food to supply forage to S.E.C. enterprises, violated the principles of the Food Commissariat's food policy and did away with the forage procurement monopoly. He requested that the matter be discussed in the C.C., R.C.P.(B.). p. 328
- <sup>325</sup> Written in reply to a telegram to Lenin from the Revolutionary Military Council of the 3rd Army on January 10, 1920, which proposed that the army be switched over to the work of restoring the national economy. On January 13, 1920, in its decision on Lenin's report concerning the organisation of the 1st Labour Army, the Council of People's Commissars welcomed the proposal of the Revolutionary Military Council of the 3rd Army. A commission consisting of Lenin, Krasin, Rykov, Tomsky, Trotsky and Tsyurupa was set up to draft proposals for the most expedient ways of utilising the 3rd Army. By its decree of January 15, 1920, the Council of Defence converted the 3rd Army into the 1st Labour Army and set up a Revolutionary Council of the 1st Labour Army from among members of the Revolutionary Military Council, representatives of the People's Commissariats for Food, Agriculture, Railways, and Labour, and representatives of the Supreme Economic Council. On January 17 and 18, the question of using military units on the economic front was discussed in the Politbureau of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.). The Politbureau approved the decision of the Council of Defence to convert the 3rd Army into the 1st Labour Army and passed a decision calling for plans to be drawn up for the creation of Kuban-Grozny, Ukrainian, Kazan. and Petrograd Labour Armies. On January 21, 1920, the Council of People's Commissars of the R.S.F.S.R. by agreement with the All-Ukraine Revolutionary Committee passed a decision to form a Ukrainian Labour Army in the area of the South-Western Front. On February 10, the Council of Defence decreed that the 7th Army was to be renamed the Petrograd Revolutionary Army of Labour. At the end of January and beginning of February, the Reserve Army of the Republic and units of the 2nd Army were drawn into the work of economic construction, the troops of the 8th Army in March, and certain other military formations somewhat later. With the outbreak of the war against bourgeois-landowner Poland and Wrangel, the labour armies had to be switched back to battle readiness. p. 328

<sup>326</sup> On January 15, 1920, Tsyurupa communicated Lenin's instruction to M. K. Vladimirov, Chairman of the Special Food Commission of the Southern Front, and asked him to report on the state of food work in the Don Region. p. 330

<sup>327</sup> Written on a report from P. N. Solonko concerning deposits of coal, pyrites and white sand for chinaware in the vicinity of Bryansk. "The area on which coal has been discovered," Solonko stated, "is approximately 40 versts square. With the present means and productivity of labour, the yield of coal could amount to about 3,500,000 poods annually, and if production is well organised ... the yield could be more than 10 million poods." Lenin wrote on the envelope containing Solonko's report: "From P. N. Solonko on coal in the Maltsev area."

On January 15, 1920, Lenin received from the Chief Coal Committee a memo giving information about the coal deposits near Bryansk. "I am sending you the present information," wrote A. Lomov. "One of our best coal geologists has promised to go to the site" (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 403). p. 330

<sup>328</sup> At its meeting on January 17, 1920, the Council of People's Commissars endorsed a decision for the collection of whiteguard literature. The decision was published (in part) in Pravda and in Izvestia No. 15, January 24, 1920. p. 331

<sup>329</sup> The paragraph in Izvestia, entitled "A Wealth of Oil Products", stated that the oil fields near Berchogur, in the neighbourhood of Zhilaya Kosa, had available stocks amounting to 20 million poods of oil, 300,000 poods of paraffin and 200,000 poods of petrol. In addition, oil was gushing from four wells. p. 331

<sup>330</sup> Trotsky's telegram to Frunze, Commander of the Turkestan Front, gave directives for the deployment of the 4th Army, which had been converted into a labour army for the construction of the Alexandrov-Gai-Emba railway line and the reconstruction of the: Krasny Kut-Alexandrov-Gai line to a broad gauge.

On January 19, Frunze signed an order for the construction of the Emba railway line by the 4th Army. p. 332

<sup>331</sup> In a telephone message on January 18, 1920, People's Commissar for Health N. A. Semashko reported that the troop train with B. S. Weissbrot's Sanitary Commission, which was sent to the Southern Front and the Ukraine to combat typhus, was proceeding very slowly. "I request," wrote Semashko, "1) an immediate order for the train to be speeded up, 2) special supervision over it, 3) investigation of the causes of delay and a trial of those to blame by a revolutionary tribunal." (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 404.) p. 333

<sup>332</sup> In a note to Lenin, Kamenev protested against the decision of the Narrow Council of People's Commissars to close down the Nikitsky Theatre. Kamenev believed this question came within the competence of the local, and not the central, authorities, in this case the Moscow Department of Education. On January 20, 1920, the Council of People's Commissars discussed the closure of the Nikitsky Theatre. It endorsed the decision of the Narrow Council and instructed it "to call in representatives of the Moscow Soviet in matters concerning Moscow". (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 405.) p. 333

<sup>333</sup> Lenin's telegram was written in connection with the attempt by Bashkir bourgeois nationalists to carry out a coup d'état in Bashkiria in January 1920. The bourgeois nationalist A.-Z. A. Validov and a group of his followers who, under pressure from the working people, came over to the side of Soviets in February 1919, had not changed their views or abandoned their aim to secure bourgeois autonomy for Bashkiria.

In the summer of 1919 the Validov group set up a "Provisional Central Bureau of the Communists of Bashkiria" headed by Yumagulov, who was at the same time Chairman of the Revolutionary Committee organised by the Validov group. Validov's "Bureau" tried to assume leadership of the Party organisations of Bashkiria although it had not been endorsed by the Central Committee of the R.C.P.(B.). In January 1920, on the proposal of Validov's supporter, K. M. Rakai, the Bashkir Revolutionary Committee set up a Foreign Relations Department. When the Party Regional Committee on January 13, 1920, condemned this step and resolved to recall Rakai from the posts he held, the Chairman of the Revolutionary Committee, Yumagulov, tried to carry out a coup d'état. On the night of January 13, 1920, by his order the members of the Party Regional Committee and other Communists were arrested, and a manifesto was issued accusing them of conspiring against the Bashkir Republic.

The telegram of the C.E.C. of January 20, 1920, mentioned by Lenin, stated: "In view of the friction between the Bashkir Revolutionary Committee and the Ufa Gubernia Revolutionary Committee, and your accusation against Comrade Eltsin of deviating from the policy of the central government, the C.E.C. by agreement with the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) sent to Sterlitamak Comrades Artyom (Sergeyev), Preobrazhensky and Samoilov, who have no local Ufa interests and are incapable of pursuing a localist, chauvinist policy. The C.E.C. considers it improbable and quite out of the question that they could carry on agitation against the Bashkir Republic. The C.E.C. therefore orders you immediately, upon Comrade Artyom's directives, to free all the arrested members of the Regional Committee and other Communists, to cancel your report of a conspiracy, and make known to the population and army units that the arrests were due to a misunderstanding." (Obrazovaniye Bashkirskoi ASSR. Sbornik dokumentov i materialov, Ufa, 1959, p. 444.)

Shortly afterwards, Validov, Yumagulov and Rakai were recalled from Bashkiria and expelled from the Party. p. 333

<sup>334</sup> This refers to the stand taken by the Siberian Revolutionary Committee and the Revolutionary Military Council of the 5th Army in the talks which took place on January 19, 1920, with a delegation from the "Political Centre", which was formed from representatives of the Socialist-Revolutionaries, Mensheviks, Zemstvo members and co-operators at an all-Siberia conference of Zemstvos and towns held in Irkutsk on November 12, 1919. When, on January 5, 1920, Irkutsk passed into the hands of the insurgent workers, soldiers and peasants, the "Political Centre" announced that it had assumed power in the city. The real organs of power in Irkutsk, however, were the headquarters of the armed workers' and peasants' detachments and the Military Revolutionary Committee, which acted under the leadership of the Irkutsk Committee of the R.C.P.(B.). The question of doing away with the "Political Centre" was not raised at once, since it was trusted to some extent by a section of the population and had the support of considerable forces of the interventionists in Irkutsk Gubernia and the Trans-Baikal area. The "Political Centre" aimed at the creation of a "democratic" bourgeois state in Eastern Siberia. At the talks with the Siberian Revolutionary Committee, its delegation proposed that the further advance eastward of the 5th Army should be halted and that a buffer state should be set up in Eastern Siberia, but the Siberian Revolutionary Committee insisted on its own conditions, namely, that the Red Army advance to Baikal and a buffer state be organised in the Trans-Baikal area.

Meanwhile the balance of forces in Irkutsk underwent a radical change, one which was not to the advantage of the "Political Centre". On January 21, 1920, all power in Irkutsk passed into the hands of the Revolutionary Committee. p. 334

<sup>335</sup> This refers to the troops of the Czechoslovak Corps, which in 1918-19 were used by the Entente imperialists and the Russian whiteguards as a strike force against the Soviets, and now were retreating under the blows of the Red Army. On January 19, 1920, the Czechoslovak Corps command announced that it was ceasing military operations and was ready to enter into negotiations for a truce with the Soviet army command. Soviet envoys went to Taishet railway station to present the terms for a truce but the White Czechoslovak command refused to negotiate. The truce was not signed until February 7. <sup>336</sup> Written on the back of Krestinsky's note to Lenin concerning the theses of a resolution on finance written by Y. Larin for the Third All-Russia Congress of Economic Councils (January 23-29, 1920). "I regard them as impracticable and politically harmful," wrote Krestinsky.

On January 23, in view of Larin's repeated statements conflicting with the policy of the Party, the Politbureau of the C.C.,

- R.C.P.(B.) adopted a decision to remove him from the Board of the Supreme Economic Council. p. 335
- <sup>337</sup> The questions raised in Yermakov's telegram were discussed in the Council of Defence on January 16 and 23, 1920. The decision quoted by Lenin was adopted by the Council on January 23. p. 336
- <sup>338</sup> Written on a memo from G. V. Chicherin, People's Commissar for Foreign Affairs, reporting cases of violation of the decision of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) that all information on matters of foreign policy should first be submitted to censorship. Specific mention was made of an interview given by V. P. Zatonsky (see Vecherniye Izvestia No. 450, January 26, 1920). Lenin sent the document to the Russian Telegraph Agency (ROSTA) marked: "To be returned." On the same day, P. M. Kerzhentsev, the head of ROSTA, replied to Lenin that measures had been taken for all correspondence concerning foreign affairs to be sent to the People's Commissariat for Foreign Affairs for perusal. On the letter Lenin wrote: "To be kept in the dossier on ROSTA." On February 21, 1920, in connection with a letter from the People's Commissariat for Foreign Affairs about the irresponsible statement of a Moscow journalist speaking on the radio on questions of Soviet foreign policy, Lenin again wrote to Kerzhentsev: "Why was this not sent for censorship? Who is responsible?" (Lenin Miscellany XXXIV, p. 267.) p. 337
- <sup>339</sup> This refers to G. M. Krzhizhanovsky's pamphlet The Main Tasks of the Electrification of Russia. Lenin sent the manuscript of the pamphlet directly to the printers to have it published in time for the first session of the C.E.C., 7th convocation. p. 337

- <sup>341</sup> S. T. Kovytkin was at that time head of the South-Eastern Railway. M. M. Arzhanov, Chief of the Central Board of Military Communications of the Revolutionary Military Council of the Republic, was sent to Saratov to speed up the movement of troops to the Southern Front. p. 339
- <sup>342</sup> In 1920, Y. O. Bumazhny was Secretary of the Urals Bureau of the Central Committee of the Party; K. G. Maximov was Chairman of the Supreme Economic Council's Industrial Bureau in the Urals and authorised agent of the Council of Labour and Defence for the restoration of Urals industry. The friction between the Revolutionary Military Council of the Labour Army and departmental representatives was mainly over the question of the terms of reference of the Revolutionary Military Council. Lenin's telegram was apparently a reply to an inquiry about ways of settling the questions in dispute between the Revolutionary Military Council and the departments. p. 339

<sup>343</sup> The article proposed that in order to improve food supplies for the workers, use should be made of suburban land plots for developing collective market-gardening and livestock breeding, and for organising auxiliary farms. p. 341

<sup>344</sup> In the beginning of February 1920 preparations were made for a new offensive of the Red Army on the Caucasian Front. At the same time there was a lack of co-ordination between the armies of the front. The Mounted Army had been weakened in previous engagements; exhaustion of the troops and shortage of supplies were acutely felt. Owing to a relaxation of political and educational work, instances of infringement of military discipline began to occur in the units.

The Composite Cavalry Corps, which co-operated with the 1st Mounted Army, was seriously affected. Counter-revolutionary elements were active at Corps Headquarters. On the night of February 2, Corps Commissar, V. N. Mikeladze, was murdered by counter-revolutionaries. All these circumstances in conjunction with the extremely complex military situation caused Lenin great anxiety, since they jeopardised the Red Army's offensive in the Northern Caucasus, the aim of which was the final defeat of the enemy. p. 341

<sup>345</sup> This refers to the formation of the Far Eastern Republic as a buffer state. The F.E.R. was established in April 1920 on the territory of the Trans-Baikal, Amur, Primorye, and Kamchatka regions and Northern Sakhalin. The formation of the F.E.R.—a state which, though bourgeois-democratic in form, carried out a Soviet policy—was in the interests of Soviet Russia, which sought to obtain a long respite on the Eastern Front and to avoid war with Japan.

After the territories of the Far East (with the exception of Northern Sakhalin) had been cleared of interventionists and white-guards, the People's Assembly of the Far Eastern Republic on November 14, 1922, passed a decision to unite with the R.S.F.S.R. On November 15, 1922, the All-Russia C.E.C. announced the incorporation of the Far Eastern Republic into the R.S.F.S.R. p. 342

<sup>346</sup> Stalin wired Lenin on February 18, 1920, that he disagreed with the order of the Commander-in-Chief to detach units of the Ukrainian Labour Army for reinforcing the front and asked to be summoned to Moscow to clear the matter up. On February 19, a telegram in reply signed by Lenin was sent to Stalin worded according to the text quoted in the present note. p. 342

<sup>347</sup> Written in reply to Stalin's telegram to Lenin saying: "I am not clear why the Caucasian Front is primarily my concern.... Reinforcement of the Caucasian Front is wholly the concern of the Revolutionary Military Council of the Republic, the members of which, according to my information, are in good health, and not the concern of Stalin, who is overworked as it is." (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 409.) p. 343

<sup>348</sup> Lenin's telegram received in Saratov bears the note: "The first report of what has been done was sent to Lenin on 6/III." p. 346

<sup>349</sup> On the back of Lenin's letter is a memo by A. I. Svidersky giving information about the food supplied to the workers of the Lyubertsy factory. Over this Lenin wrote: "We shall verify this tomorrow by telephone and keep it in the files." p. 346

<sup>350</sup> Regarding this letter, Yaroslavsky wrote subsequently: "It was addressed to three comrades who were then members of the Perm Gubernia Committee. At that time the situation in Usolye was rather grave. Shortly before this, a new front—the Kai-Cherdyn Front—had been formed there. Remnants of Kolchak's forces and northern interventionists had organised bands in Cherdyn, where they had used the connections of the recently abolished Kolchak regime and exploited the dissatisfaction caused by the stupid bungling of some of the local Party officials who had antagonised the Zyryan people as well. As far as I remember, the Perm Gubernia Committee, on receiving Lenin's letter, sent a man to Usolye to ascertain the state of affairs on the spot, after which a commission was set up which reviewed the composition of the leading bodies and changed it at a specially convened Party conference." <sup>351</sup> This refers to the "Mandate to Comrade Vinogradov, delegate from the Second Vesyegonsk Uyezd Congress of workers engaged in education and socialist culture", which dealt with the grave material plight of the school staffs. On February 27, 1920, Vinogradov was received by Lenin. During their talk, which lasted 45 minutes, Lenin wrote the present letter. A favourable decision was reached in regard to improving the material position of the Vesyegonsk teachers. p. 348

<sup>352</sup> In the Central Party Archives of the Institute of Marxism-Leninism of the C.C., C.P.S.U. there is a note of Lenin's to Alferov: "You promised information about the oil pipeline but did not give it!", and a reply from Alferov on the construction of the Emba oil pipeline marked "27.II.Alferov".

The construction of the Emba pipeline was discussed at a meeting of the Council of Defence on March 5, 1920. The Council decided to instruct the Board of the Supreme Economic Council to examine the plan for the construction of the Emba pipeline and submit it to the Council of People's Commissars in final form, and to ascertain whether an inquiry had been made abroad for ordering the pipes required. p. 349

<sup>353</sup> The Free Economic Society was founded in 1765, with the object, as laid down in its statutes, "of disseminating within the country information useful for agriculture and industry". It possessed a large library of some 200,000 volumes. After the October Revolution the library became part of the Saltykov-Shchedrin State Public Library in Leningrad. p. 349

- <sup>355</sup> George Lansbury, editor of the British newspaper The Daily Herald, visited Soviet Russia in February 1920. On February 21 he was received by Lenin who had a detailed conversation with him, in particular on the attitude of the Bolsheviks to religion. On returning to England, Lansbury sent Lenin a letter in which he wrote: "Many thanks to you and all your colleagues for the help you have given me in my try to understand your revolution." (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 412.) p. 351

- <sup>358</sup> This refers to valuable antiques, luxury articles and works of art that had been nationalised. In February 1919, Maxim Gorky set up a committee of experts in Petrograd to select and value these articles. Up to October 1, 1920, this committee, consisting of 80 persons, had selected, as Gorky wrote, "120,000 various articles" (V. I. Lenin i A. M. Gorky. Pisma, vospominaniya, dokumenty [V. I. Lenin and A. M. Gorky. Letters, Recollections, Documents], 1961, p. 164). This work, however, progressed extremely slowly. On Gorky's letter, Lenin wrote: "only 8 stores out of 33 have been gone through" (ibid.). p. 352

- <sup>359</sup> Written in reply to Trotsky's telegram from Ekaterinburg dated March 5, 1920, in which he reported a considerable increase in food procurements in districts of the Urals and Siberia, complained that the central departments did not even reply to inquiries from the Siberian and Urals organisations, and asserted that only the establishment of regional centres with wide powers could put the work on a proper footing. On the text of the telegram Lenin wrote his remarks about the decision on Ishim Uyezd and the request that Brunovsky be kept for food work, and also about meat procurement in Siberia: "1) Remains in Tyumen Gubernia.

"2) No objection to Brunovsky (for the Food Commissariat)

"3) The Food Commissariat has issued an order to organise salting centres." (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 413.)

<sup>360</sup> On March 8, 1920, the Politbureau of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) discussed the question of the People's Commissar for Railways in view of the fact that Krasin was going abroad. It was decided: "That Comrade Lenin be asked to communicate with Comrade Trotsky" (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 413). On March 20, the Politbureau adopted a decision to put through the Presidium of the C.E.C. and the Council of People's Commissars Trotsky's appointment as Acting People's Commissar for Railways.

<sup>361</sup> Written in reply to a telegram from I. N. Smirnov, Chairman of the Siberian Revolutionary Committee, who reported that the Mensheviks and Socialist-Revolutionaries made it a condition for their participation in the buffer state government (see Note 345) that no territories should be conceded in the Far East. Smirnov wrote: "Communicate your decision directly to Janson in Karakhan's code and to me at the Siberian Revolutionary Committee." On this telegram Lenin wrote the draft of a reply to Smirnov, on which there is a note: "Agreed. N. Krestinsky, L. Kamenev." At the same time, Lenin sent a telegram to Janson in Irkutsk: "The Mensheviks and Socialist-Revolutionaries must join the buffer state government without any conditions. If they do not submit to us without any conditions they will be arrested." (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 413.)

p. 354

<sup>362</sup> On March 10, 1920, Lenin received V. S. Smirnov (Malkov) and M. Z. Manuilsky, representatives of Ivanovo-Voznesensk Gubernia, and A. S. Kiselyov, a member of the C.E.C. (in the past a leading member of the Ivanovo-Voznesensk Party organisation). In accordance with a decision of the Gubernia Party Committee of March 6, they asked Lenin to increase the supply of food to Ivanovo-Voznesensk Gubernia, to remove the intercepting detachments in Yuriyev-Polsky Uyezd, Vladimir Gubernia, to include it in Ivanovo-Voznesensk Gubernia and to provide Ivanovo-Voznesensk Gubernia at first open water with ships and barges for transporting foodstuffs, seed, etc. On the same day the Council of Defence discussed a report by A. B. Khalatov, a member of the Board of the People's Commissariat for Food, concerning the supply of food for Ivanovo-Voznesensk workers, and the question of joining Yuriyev-Polsky Uyezd to Ivanovo-Voznesensk Gubernia. The Council of Defence resolved: "That the Chief Board of Water Transport be instructed to take urgent measures to supply the Ivanovo-Voznesensk Gubernia Food Committee with tonnage to the amount of 400,000 poods for urgent delivery of seed potatoes from the Simbirsk, Kazan and Yaroslavl gubernias." (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 414.)

p. 355

<sup>363</sup> Written on a letter from J. Berzin to Lenin of March 11, 1920, reporting that the censorship of the People's Commissariat for Foreign Affairs had let through a letter of the Menshevik Abramovich addressed abroad to R. Hilferding, one of the opportunist leaders of German Social-Democracy. Berzin suggested that the People's Commissariat for Foreign Affairs should be purged of hostile elements. p. 356

<sup>364</sup> The Ukrainian petty-bourgeois nationalist Borotba Party arose in May 1918 after the split in the Ukrainian Socialist-Revolutionary Party. It got its name from the central organ of the party—the newspaper Borotba (Struggle). The Borotbists twice applied to the Executive Committee of the Communist International to be allowed to affiliate to the Communist International. On February 26, 1920, the Communist International by a special decision called on the Borotbists to dissolve their party and merge with the C.P.(B.) of the Ukraine.

Owing to the growing influence of the Bolsheviks among the mass of the peasants and the successes of Soviet power in the Ukraine, the Borotbists at their conference in the middle of March 1920 were compelled to pass a decision to dissolve their party. A decision to admit the Borotbists to membership of the Ukrainian C.P.(B.) was adopted at the Fourth All-Ukraine Conference of the C.P.(B.)U., which took place from March 17 to 23, 1920. p. 357

<sup>365</sup> At its meeting on March 16, 1920, the Council of People's Commissars discussed the draft of a decree presented by L. B. Krasin enabling orders to be placed abroad for locomotives and spare parts for railway transport repairs. Three hundred million rubles in gold were earmarked for this purpose. Lenin's note was apparently written at this meeting. p. 358

<sup>366</sup> Lenin wrote this note on Krasin's letter concerning the purchase of locomotives from American trusts. Krasin wrote that there were only three trusts in the U.S.A. from which locomotives could be obtained. It was intended to start an immediate correspondence with them by radio from Scandinavia or London. Krasin, however, expressed the fear that as a result of this publicity a "host" of middlemen would spring up between him and these trusts as the main suppliers, and that this would not only send the price up but also delay delivery. p. 358

<sup>367</sup> Lenin urged the need for intensified and uninterrupted work on locomotive repairs in view of the catastrophic state of railway transport, and this problem was repeatedly discussed by the Council of People's Commissars and the Council of Defence. Thus, on February 5, 1920, the C.P.C. heard a report by Krasin on special privileges for workers engaged in locomotive repairs and the production of spare parts for transport. On February 27, the Council of Defence discussed non-fulfilment by the People's Commissariat for Food of the decree granting bonuses to workers who repaired trains in their spare time. On March 16, following a report by G. N. Melnichansky (Chairman of the Moscow Gubernia Council of Trade Unions), the C.P.C. adopted a decision to organise locomotive repair in the best workshops, where work would be carried on in three shifts round the clock. At the same meeting the Council discussed a number of other measures for improving the state of the railway transport. p. 358

<sup>368</sup> In a letter dated March 5, 1920, Maxim Gorky asked Lenin to keep the 1,800 rations for Petrograd scientists intact, to release from prison as soon as possible the well-known chemist A. V. Sapozhnikov, and to enable the physician I. I. Manukhin to carry out research on a vaccine against typhus (see *V. I. Lenin i A. M. Gorky. <sup>369</sup> This note to Radek was written in connection with a report that Karl Liebkecht's wife was in an extremely agitated state, one reason for which was that relatives of hers, engineers living in Rostov, had been transferred to Berlin, about which she had written to Lunacharsky. p. 360

<sup>370</sup> This refers to the elections to the C.C., C.P.(B.) of the Ukraine at the Fourth Conference of the C.P.(B.)U. held in Kharkov from March 17 to 23, 1920.

The work of the conference was marked by a bitter struggle of the Leninists against an oppositional group of Democratic Centralists headed by T. Sapronov, V. Boguslavsky, Y. Drobnis, M. Farbman (Rafail) and others. During the elections to the Central Committee of the C.P.(B.)U. the Democratic Centralists succeeded by factional devices (voting by lists, etc.) in getting a majority of their supporters into the Central Committee and in sending their delegates to the Ninth Congress of the R.C.P.(B.).

105 conference delegates who upheld the Leninist line refused to take part in the elections to the C.C. of the C.P.(B.)U. and denounced them as non-valid. Since the Central Committee elected by the conference did not reflect the will of the majority of the Ukrainian Communists, the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) decided it should be dissolved and replaced by a provisional C.C. of the C.P.(B.)U. consisting of V. P. Zatonsky, F. Y. Kon, S. V. Kosior, D. Z. Manuilsky, G. I. Petrovsky, F. A. Sergeev (Artyom), V. Y. Chubar, and others. In order to explain the measures taken to suppress the factional activity of the Democratic Centralists in the Ukraine, the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) on April 16, 1920, published an open letter addressed to all Party organisations in the Ukraine. This letter was approved by all the Party organisations of the Republic. To strengthen the Ukrainian Party organisations, the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) put a large group of experienced Party workers at the disposal of the C.C., C.P.(B.)U. In May 1920 alone, 674 Communists were sent to the Ukraine. By a decision of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) of April 5, 1920, a re-registration of members of the Communist Party of the Ukraine was carried out. p. 360

- <sup>372</sup> Written by Lenin following the systematic violations by the Turkestan Commission of the decision of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) prescribing that relations with Bukhara, Khiva, Persia and Afghanistan were to be controlled by the People's Commissariat for Foreign Affairs. By its decision of September 29, 1919, the Orgbureau of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) had charged the Turkestan Commission with the conduct of foreign relations in accordance with the instructions and under the control of the People's Commissariat for Foreign Affairs. The Turkestan Commission, however, did not carry out the instructions of the People's Commissariat for Foreign Affairs. The latter demanded that G. I. Broido should be removed from leadership of the Department of Foreign Relations and that a department be set up consisting of A. N. Golub, A. A. Mashitsky, D. Y. Gopner and a representative of the Turkestan Central Executive Committee endorsed by the People's Commissariat for Foreign Affairs, but the Turkestan Commission refused to comply and appointed Heller head of the Department of Foreign Relations.
- By a decision of the Politbureau of the Central Committee of the R.C.P.(B.) on March 17, 1920, foreign policy functions were taken out of the hands of the Turkestan Commission, and the Department of Foreign Relations was made directly subordinate to the People's Commissariat for Foreign Affairs. But the Turkestan Commission objected to this. Golub, Mashitsky and Gopner were removed from office and forbidden to communicate with the People's Commissariat for Foreign Affairs. The inquiries of the Commissariat went unanswered.

Kosior, Chairman of the All-Ukraine Council of Trade Unions, who reported on the difficulties of work in the Donets Basin and big industrial centres of the south (Kharkov, Ekaterinoslav, Taganrog, etc.) due to lack of personnel. <sup>377</sup> This refers to the All-Russia Extraordinary Commission's investigation into the case of a bogus co-operative organisation in Petrograd. In 1918, the former owners of a publishing house and print-shop, in order to prevent them from being nationalised, organised a bogus co-operative which obtained orders from various institutions by fraudulent means. The matter was investigated by the Extraordinary Commission in accordance with Lenin's directive. The bogus co-operative was abolished. The print-shop was turned over to the Petrograd Economic Council and the publishing house to the Petrograd Branch of State Publishers. p. 368

<sup>379</sup> Written in reply to a telegram of April 17, 1920, in which the Council of the 1st Labour Army asked that boundary changes should be stopped and that it be allowed to draft maps of the Urals and Cis-Urals gubernias and uyezds. On Lenin's motion this question was discussed by the Council of People's Commissars on April 20, 1920. In accordance with its decision, the present telegram was sent to the Council of the 1st Labour Army.

The same meeting discussed a "Protest of the 1st Labour Army Concerning the New Division of the Tyumen and Chelyabinsk Gubernias". The C.P.C. adopted the decision quoted in the second telegram. p. 370

<sup>380</sup> This note was written on a letter from Professor S. P. Kostychev to Maxim Gorky about the work of the Plant Physiology Laboratory of Petrograd University, which was of great scientific and practical interest. The letter gave a list of the most essential articles and materials, the lack of which was greatly impeding the work of the laboratory. On April 22, 1920, Gorky gave this letter to Lenin and asked him to arrange for Professor Kostychev to be supplied with the necessary materials.

At the bottom of Lenin's note the People's Commissar for Health added the words: "I fully agree with Comrade Lenin's proposal and for my part ask that Comrade Gorky be given every assistance. N. Semashko." p. 370

<sup>381</sup> In his reply to Lenin, Rykov wrote that on the following day he would order the newspaper Ekonomicheskaya Zhizn to stop printing news about the loading and transportation of fuel, leaving only news of procurements. p. 371

<sup>382</sup> In the manuscript of the telegram, the word "details" has been crossed out and the words "the form of Vinnichenko's co-operation in government activities" have been written in an unknown hand.

In the spring of 1920, V. K. Vinnichenko, who was then living as an emigrant in Vienna, declared that he was breaking his connections with the Ukrainian Mensheviks and accepting the platform of the Ukrainian Communist Party. Vinnichenko requested the Government of the R.S.F.S.R. to allow him to come to the Ukraine and to give him an opportunity of actively participating in the struggle against the White Poles and Wrangel, as well as in building the Soviet Ukraine.

In view of the fact that Vinnichenko and other nationalist leaders had the backing of a considerable number of Ukrainian émigrés, and in order to win away from them elements belonging to the working people who had been misled, it was decided to draw Vinnichenko into Soviet work. The question was discussed several times in the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) and the C.C., C.P.(B.)U.

On September 6, 1920, by a decision of the Politbureau of the C.C., C.P.(B.)U. Vinnichenko was admitted to membership of the Ukrainian Communist Party and appointed Deputy Chairman of the Council of People's Commissars and People's Commissar for Foreign Affairs of the Ukrainian S.S.R. On the same day the Politbureau of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) passed the following decision regarding Vinnichenko: "The Politbureau takes note of Comrade Vinnichenko's variable moods and therefore, while not objecting to his immediate admission into the Party, the Political Bureau proposes that he should not be given any post, and should first be tested in practical work." (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 424.)

In October 1920 Vinnichenko again emigrated abroad. p. 372

<sup>383</sup> This note to Trotsky was written on Chicherin's letter to Lenin dated May 4, 1920, informing him about Lord Curzon's radio message. The message suggested a general amnesty and a conciliatory attitude to the defeated whiteguards and spoke of a cessation of military operations in the Crimea and the Caucasus. In Chicherin's opinion, the proposal for direct talks with Wrangel with the participation of a British officer would be found distasteful by every real whiteguard and was a step towards practical recognition of Soviet Russia by Great Britain. Chicherin proposed "agreeing to an amnesty for Wrangel and to halting further penetration into the Caucasus, where we have already captured everything of importance, and we can reply by giving our consent without a moment's delay". p. 373

<sup>384</sup> Written on Y. A. Preobrazhensky's letter to Lenin suggesting that "a stop be put to the disgusting 'patriotism'", and mentioning a speech of Radek's "about a 'national war'" and a chauvinist article by Bergman in Agitrosta. Preobrazhensky asked to be allowed to give appropriate directives to the editors of newspapers, especially provincial ones. To Preobrazhensky's request, Lenin answered: "I am wholly in favour", and he proposed the directive reproduced here. p. 373 was undertaking a number of aggressive measures against Soviet Azerbaijan and that in the peace terms it was absolutely necessary to put forward a demand for the "proclamation of Soviet power in Georgia" (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 426).

<sup>387</sup> Lenin is referring to the decision of the C.P.C. of May 27, 1920, on food resources, directing the Moscow and Petrograd Soviets "to give special attention to the need to increase the amount of market-garden products obtained from the environs of the capitals this year and to submit to the C.P.C. within a fortnight their proposals for possible measures". <sup>389</sup> On June 11, 1920, G. V. Chicherin, People's Commissar for Foreign Affairs, sent a Soviet Government Note to the British Government addressed to the Foreign Secretary Lord Curzon, containing facts about the aid given by the British Government to the whiteguard General Wrangel. The Note stated that Wrangel himself, in an army order issued on May 6, "openly and explicitly mentions the diplomatic intervention of Great Britain on his behalf as a means of keeping his hold on the Crimea and mounting a new attack against Soviet Russia". This Note was published on June 13, 1920, in Izvestia No. 127. On this subject, see also Lenin's letter to Chicherin of June 11, 1920 (see this volume, Document 609).

<sup>391</sup> Lenin is referring to the "Statute on the Commission of the Council of People's Commissars (the Narrow Council of People's Commissars)" endorsed by the Council of People's Commissars on June 1, 1920. Lenin's addendum relates to the first four points of the "Statute", which state that "the purpose of the Narrow Council of People's Commissars is to work up questions which have to be dealt with by the Council of People's Commissars and require preliminary treatment. The destination of business reaching the Council of People's Commissars is decided by the Narrow Council, except for budgetary business, which must be handled by the Narrow Council, and matters coming before the Narrow Council by decision of the Council of People's Commissars". (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 428.)

The document bears the following names of C.P.C. members in the secretary's handwriting, who, on being questioned, expressed their agreement with Lenin's addendum: Vladimirsky Avanesov, Kursky, Kamenev, Semashko, Milyutin, Pokrovsky, Nikolayev, Sereda, Krestinsky, Sklyansky. p. 380

<sup>392</sup> Written on a telegram to Lenin dated June 1, 1920, from Z. N. Dosser, Chairman of the Chief Oil Committee, and A. P. Serebrovsky, Chairman of the Azerbaijan Oil Committee. The telegram reported the grave food situation among the workers of the Baku oil industry owing to the fact that A. Y. Belenky, Special Food Commissar failed to fulfil obligations in regard to the dispatch of food from the Northern Caucasus to Baku, while at the same time refusing to allow the oil workers to make their own food procurements in the Northern Caucasus. p. 380

On receiving Trotsky's note saying that Stalin had violated the established rules by addressing himself directly to Lenin (since such information should have been sent to the Commander-in-Chief by A. I. Yegorov, commander of the forces on the South-Western Front), Lenin sent the second note to Trotsky. p. 383

The Soviet Government's Note in reply to the British Government, which was worded according to Lenin's directive and sent by radio on June 11, stated: "True, at the present time it is Wrangel with his whiteguards, and not a British general, who is attacking Russia anew, but the weapons and ammunition which he uses were supplied to him by the British Government and other Allied Governments- his strategic movements have taken place under the protection of British and other Allied vessels, he has received the coal he needed from Great Britain, and the Allied fleet partly helped him in his landing operations and partly directly participated in them. The Russian Government, therefore, cannot share the point of view of the British Government that the latter bears no responsibility for this new attack on Soviet Russia." <sup>399</sup> On June 11, 1920, after hearing the report of a commission on measures for ensuring the maximum deliveries of fuel, especially for Moscow, the Council of Labour and Defence resolved: "To make the Moscow Fuel Board and the People's Commissariat for Railways responsible for transporting within three weeks all the firewood lying at railway stations within a 30-verst radius of Moscow, to the amount of about 8,000 cubic sazhen." <sup>400</sup> This note was written in connection with the preparations for the Second Congress of the Communist International. Heller, who was appointed a representative of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) in the Italian delegation, was directed by the Politbureau of the C.C. "to collect passages in the Italian press against Turati and other reformists, and in general to select all the necessary material" for exposing reformism in the ranks of the Italian Socialist Party (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 431).

Avanti!—a daily newspaper, the central organ of the Italian Socialist Party, founded in Rome in December 1896. During the First World War, the newspaper adopted an inconsistent internationalist position, without breaking its ties with the reformists. In 1926 the paper was closed down by Mussolini's fascist government, but continued to be published abroad; in 1943 its publication was resumed in Italy.

Comunismo—a fortnightly journal of the Italian Socialist Party; it was published in Milan from 1919 to 1922, edited by D. M. Serrati.

Despite repeated decisions of the Party's Central Committee, Chicherin wrote, nothing had been done, either in regard to rations, or to the transfer of a new building to the People's Commissariat for Foreign Affairs, or to the provision of motorcars for foreign delegations and other needs of the Commissariat. p. 391
- <sup>407</sup> Lenin thought highly of the great Russian physiologist, Academician I. P. Pavlov, the founder of the materialist theory of higher nervous activity in animals and man. Lenin took a solicitous interest in his well-being and gave him every possible assistance and support
- In view of Pavlov's outstanding scientific services, which were of tremendous importance for the working people of the world, the Soviet Government, on the initiative of Lenin, in the hard years of economic dislocation and the immense difficulties resulting from the Civil War and foreign armed intervention, passed a special decree creating facilities that would enable Academician Pavlov and his assistants to effectively carry on their scientific work (see present edition, Vol. 32, p. 69).

In his well-known letter to Soviet youth written shortly before his death, Pavlov touched on the immense opportunities which the Soviet socialist system offered for the development of culture and science. "Our country," he wrote, "is affording great scope to scientists and—it must be owned—science in our country is being fostered with a generous hand. A most lavish hand!

"What is there to say about the status of our young scientist? Here surely everything is quite clear. Much is given to him, but much is expected from him. For the youth, as for us, it is a point of honour to justify the great trust that our country puts in science." (Pravda No. 58, February 28, 1936.) p. 392

<sup>410</sup> The extract mentioned by Lenin stated: "...the Food Department of the Moscow Soviet of Workers' and Red Army Deputies has announced a competition for thermos vessels of large and small dimensions. Three prizes will be awarded: for apparatus of half a vedro*—10,000 rubles, 5,000 rubles and 3,000 rubles for blueprints of apparatus of five vedros—5,000 rubles and 3,000 rubles. Apparatus and blueprints must be presented by October 20, 1918" (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 434).

In a memorandum presented to Lenin on July 16, 1920, the Board of the Moscow Consumers' Society reported that the competition for thermos vessels ended on October 1, 1918. Simultaneously with the work of the Competition Commission, the Food Department began to use thermos vessels made entirely of wood (plywood and shavings). These vessels were very light—about 32 lbs. for vessels of three vedros—and enabled food to be kept hot for 18-20 hours. p. 393

<sup>411</sup> Lenin is referring to a decision of the Politbureau of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) dated June 29, 1920, for convening a congress of peoples of the East in Baku. The decision stated: "Comrade Orjonikidze and Comrade Stasova, together with comrades co-opted by them, are instructed to form a bureau for convening a congress of peoples of the East in Baku. Comrade Zinoviev is to inform Orjonikidze about this today by direct line." (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 435.)

In stating that G. K. Orjonikidze retains "all rights and powers", Lenin is referring to the decisions of the Politbureau of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) of June 29 and 30, 1920, appointing Orjonikidze a member of the Caucasian Council of the Labour Army from the Revolutionary Military Council of the Caucasian Front. p. 395

<sup>412</sup> Lenin is referring to a decision of the Politbureau of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) dated June 18, 1920, regarding the Northern Caucasus, which stated: "The Orgbureau is instructed to come to an agreement with the Caucasian Bureau of the C.C. for selecting from the members of the latter a small, permanently acting collegium... with the area of activities throughout the Caucasus. If Comrade Orjonikidze does not become a member of the small collegium, all questions relating to Georgia, Azerbaijan, Armenia, Turkey etc., must be decided in his presence" (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 435). p. 396

<sup>414</sup> This refers to the Second Congress of the Communist International, which was held from July 19 to August 7, 1920.

All the preparatory work for convening the Congress was directed by Lenin. He wrote the theses on the national and colonial questions, on the agrarian question, on the fundamental tasks of the Second Congress of the Communist International, on the terms of admission into the Communist International, and the plan of theses on the international and economic situation (see present edition, Vol. 31, pp. 144-64, 184-201, 206-11, 212; Vol. 35, pp. 450-51).

At the Congress, Lenin delivered a report on the international situation and the fundamental tasks of the Communist International, made a speech on the role of the Communist Party, delivered the report of the Commission on the National and Colonial Questions, and spoke on the terms of admission into the Communist International, on parliamentarism, and on affiliation to the British Labour Party (see present edition, Vol. 31, pp. 215-63). Lenin's theses were endorsed as decisions of the Congress. p. 397 ready been translated into German and French in Petrograd and was being edited.

Lenin wrote the new preface to the book on July 6, 1920, and it was first published in October 1921, under the title "Imperialism and Capitalism", in the journal The Communist International No. 18 (see present edition, Vol. 22, pp. 189-94). In Lenin's lifetime, separate editions of his book Imperialism, the Highest Stage of Capitalism were published in German in 1921, and in French and English (incompletely) in 1923.

Lenin's third note was a reply to a passage in Zinoviev's note saying, "There is some difficulty with the quotations (from German and English publications)" (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 437). p. 398

<sup>418</sup> Written in connection with a letter from the Cinema Department of the People's Commissariat for Education, which reported that the fulfilment of Lenin's directive—for making a motion picture of "The Trial of the Kolchak Ministers"—was being held up owing to the absence of film.

Lenin sent similar letters to Centrosoyuz, the Moscow Extraordinary Commission, the People's Commissariat for Military Affairs and the Vecheka. On July 9 a reply was received from the Vecheka addressed to the secretary of the Council of People's Commissars, Lydia Fotieva, reading: "Dear Comrade Fotieva, please tell Vladimir Ilyich that there is no cinema film in the Vecheka, other than shot films of a counter-revolutionary nature which cannot be used. Apparently, someone who did not know the facts has misled Ilyich" (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, pp. 437-38). p. 400

<sup>420</sup> This refers to Kamenev's letter of July 9, 1920, concerning the nature of the Anglo-Russian talks, in which he wrote that political negotiations should be conducted "on the broadest agitational lines" recounting "widely and publicly the whole history of the intervention, including Kolchak, Denikin, Poland, Wrangel, Lithuania, Estonia, etc., etc., and touching on and raising all the questions of Eastern policy from Turkey to China". In his postscript to this letter Chicherin supported Kamenev, who in turn again put forward the proposal—"without breaking off the negotiations, and in a mild tone, to present to Lloyd George the history of British plundering on a world scale". When Lenin read the letter, he wrote on it: "I disagree in principle. 10/VII. Lenin." (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 438.)

Lenin's letter was a reply to these proposals. p. 401

<sup>421</sup> N. N. Krestinsky, Secretary of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.), informed Lenin on July 11, 1920, that Chicherin was insisting that Kamenev and not Krasin should head the Soviet delegation that was being sent to Great Britain. Lenin wrote on Krestinsky's letter: "I agree to Kamenev as chairman, Krasin—deputy chairman." (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 438). p. 401

<sup>422</sup> This refers to a letter from Stalin dated July 11, 1920, informing Lenin of the promise of the Commander-in-Chief, S. S. Kamenev, to strengthen the Crimean direction with a number of military units and formations and combat materiel.

On July 15 E. M. Sklyansky sent Lenin a memorandum on the amount of assistance to the South-Western Front. p. 402

<sup>423</sup> This refers to a Note from Lord Curzon, British Foreign Secretary, sent to the Soviet Government on July 11, 1920, from Spa (Belgium), where a conference of the Entente countries was being held together with representatives of Germany. To the decisions adopted at the Spa conference, Lord Curzon added a proposal that the Soviet Government should conclude an armistice with General Wrangel. p. 403

<sup>424</sup> This refers to the reply to Lord Curzon's Note of July 11, 1920, which was discussed at a plenary meeting of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) on July 16, 1920. The reply was published in Izvestia No. 157, July 18, 1920. p. 403

<sup>425</sup> This note was written on the draft of a decree for centralising libraries in the Republic, adopted by the Narrow Council of People's Commissars on June 22, 1920. To eliminate duplication of work and ensure effective use and proper distribution of all existing book-collections, the draft stipulated that "the libraries of all public organisations and institutions are to be merged in the general library network of the Educational Departments". All libraries newly opened by public organisations were to be included "in the general network of public libraries".

The draft decree also bears a note from Krupskaya to the People's Commissariat for Education: "If you will send me my article on the centralisation of libraries and return this draft, I will try to make a new draft and write an instruction. But perhaps it has already been done? In that case, send it as well." p. 404

fighting is continuing with growing intensity; today we shall probably lose Alexandrovsk. I received your note concerning the separation of the fronts. The Politbureau ought not to concern itself with trifles. I can go on working at the front for two weeks at the most, I need a rest, find someone to replace me. I do not believe the promises of the Commander-in-Chief for a single minute, by his promises he only lets us down. As regards the sentiments of the Central Committee in favour of peace with Poland, one cannot help remarking that our diplomacy sometimes very successfully torpedoes the results of our military successes" (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 441). p. 408

<sup>427</sup> This refers to Poland's Eastern frontier, which was arbitrarily fixed by the Supreme Council of the Entente at the end of the 1914-18 imperialist war, on December 8, 1919. This frontier was to run along the line: Grodno—Yalovka—Nemirov—Brest-Litovsk—Dorogusk—Ustilug—Krylov, and was to cut across Galicia between Przemysl and Rava-Russkaya up to the Carpathian Mountains. This line was mentioned also in Lord Curzon's Note of July 11, 1920, and became known as the "Curzon Line".

The Soviet Government, in proposing peace to Poland, was ready to accept as the Polish-Soviet frontier a line east of the "Curzon Line".

The present note is Lenin's directive to the chairman of the Soviet delegation sent to London for negotiations with the British Government. p. 409

<sup>428</sup> In a telegram of August 13, 1920, in reply to Lenin, the Deputy Chairman of the Council of the Caucasian Labour Army, A. G. The Northern Caucasus, with the exception of the Kuban, for the time being gives no cause for anxiety as regards the outbreak of insurrections...." (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 444.) p. 412

<sup>429</sup> Lenin wrote this note on August 11, 1920, during his reception of Lao Hsiu-chao, a member of the Chinese Socialist Party and Chairman of the Central Executive Committee of the Union of Chinese Workers in Russia. <sup>430</sup> This note was written on a letter dated August 11, 1920, addressed to the Chairman of the Council of People's Commissars, V. I. Lenin, from I. Brikhnichev, head of the All-Russia Extraordinary Commission for Abolishing Illiteracy. It asked for cadres to strengthen the commission, premises for the work, means of transport, and food rations. Point "b" of the letter read: "People are needed, some 10-15 skilled and unskilled staff workers. Can be summoned from the localities or mobilised in Moscow." p. 413

<sup>431</sup> This refers to a collection of the decrees in force in 1919. In a letter in reply, Kursky reported that this collection was published under the editorship of Kozlovsky and was a reprint of Sobraniye

uzakonenii za 1919 god (Collected Legislation of 1919), and that another collection of the most important decrees of the R.S.F.S.R. during the three years, 1917-20, was being prepared for the press. On the envelope of Kursky's letter, Lenin wrote: "For the archives (VIII. 1920). Re publication of laws " (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 444). p. 414

<sup>432</sup> Written in connection with a letter from A. N. Voznesensky, formerly head of the Eastern Department of the People's Commissariat for Foreign Affairs, who considered that he had been wrongfully dismissed. The matter was discussed on August 19, 1920, at the Politbureau of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.), which directed Chicherin to use Voznesensky in one of the subcommissions of the People's Commissariat for Foreign Affairs as a specialist on the eastern question having a knowledge of Eastern languages and English. p. 414

<sup>433</sup> This refers to the conference for ending the war and establishing peaceful friendly relations between the R.S.F.S.R. and the Ukraine, on the one hand, and Poland, on the other. Despite all the attempts of the imperialists to prevent it, the peace conference began its work on August 17, 1920, in Minsk, where it continued until September 3. On September 21, the conference resumed its work in Riga. The peace negotiations ended with the signing in Riga on October 12, 1920, of "A Treaty on an Armistice and Preliminary Conditions of Peace" between Soviet Russia and the Soviet Ukraine, on the one hand, and Poland, on the other (see Dokumenty vneshnei politiki SSSR, Vol. III, Moscow, 1959, pp. 245-58). p. 415

<sup>435</sup> This refers to a decision of the Politbureau of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) dated August 19, 1920, following the reports by Stalin and Trotsky on the military situation on the Polish and Wrangel fronts. In the decision it was recorded: "a) To recognise the Wrangel front as the main front.... b) To convene the Orgbureau tomorrow to decide the question of a further mobilisation of Communists. c) To adopt extra measures to speed up general mobilisation of Byelorrussians. d) To transfer the 6th Division of the 1st Mounted Army to the Wrangel front.... e) To send 55 per cent of the mobilised Communists to the Wrangel front, and the remainder to the Western Front." (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 446.) p. 418

<sup>436</sup> The summer of 1920 saw the beginning of the liberation of the Western Ukraine by the Red Army. The rule of the bourgeoisie and landowners was abolished in 16 uyezds of Eastern Galicia and Soviet power was established there. A provisional regional Soviet authority in Eastern Galicia—the Galician Revolutionary Committee headed by V. P. Zatonsky—was set up in Ternopol. In the uyezds, local revolutionary committees were formed, which strove to enforce the decrees of the people's government. Lenin warmly welcomed the establishment of Soviet power in Eastern Galicia and helped the Galician Communists in their Party and Soviet activities. p. 419

<sup>437</sup> Proletcult—a cultural and educational organisation which arose in September 1917 as an independent workers' organisation. Its leadership was in the hands of A. A. Bogdanov and his supporters. After the October Revolution, Proletcult continued to uphold its "independence", thus setting itself in opposition to the Soviet state. In consequence, Proletcult was infiltrated by bourgeois intellectuals who began to exert a decisive influence on it. Its members actually denied the importance of the cultural heritage, wanted to shut themselves off from the tasks of cultural and educational work among the masses, and tried to create a special "proletarian culture" by "laboratory methods", in isolation from life. In a draft resolution "On Proletarian Culture" (see present edition, Vol. 31, pp. 316-17) and in a number of other works, Lenin trenchantly criticised the erroneous principles of Proletcult. In the early 1920s its organisations began to decline and in 1932 it ceased to exist. p. 419

<sup>438</sup> This refers to the landing in the Kuban area in the middle of August 1920 of a whiteguard force, organised by Wrangel with the consent and support of the Entente. The aim of the raid was to cut off from the Soviet Republic one of the most fertile grain areas of the country. As a result of stubborn, fierce battles, the Red Army routed the whiteguard units and in the beginning of September the remnants of the landing force were thrown back into the Crimea. p. 420

<sup>439</sup> Written below the text of the copy of a telegram sent to Lenin from Vilno on August 19, 1920, by V. S. Mickiewicz-Kapsukas, a member of the Central Committee of the Lithuanian-Byelorussian Communist Party. He reported that revolutionary feeling in Lithuania was rising and "by the day of our departure from Vilno, it may end in a mass armed uprising against the Lithuanian whiteguards", and asked: "Do you find it possible for us to prepare for a decisive battle?"

On the same copy Lenin wrote to Trotsky: "Comrade Trotsky, if you agree, send it off or return it to me for coding. Lenin." On the document there is also a note by Lenin: "Stalin agrees", and Trotsky's mark indicating his agreement. p. 421

<sup>440</sup> In a telegram to People's Commissar for Foreign Affairs Chicherin on July 30, 1920, M. M. Litvinov, plenipotentiary abroad of the R.S.F.S.R. Council of People's Commissars, reported the arrival in Copenhagen of the American industrialist Vanderlip, who wanted to obtain a concession to exploit oil, coal, and the fisheries of Primorye Region and Kamchatka.

In the Central Party Archives of the Institute of Marxism-Leninism of the C.C., C.P.S.U., there is a note written by Lenin on Chicherin's letter dated August 21, 1920, in which Lenin agrees to Vanderlip visiting Moscow.

Vanderlip arrived in Moscow on September 17, 1920, to negotiate an agreement for the concessions. On the same day Chicherin wrote to Lenin suggesting that negotiations with Vanderlip be started at once and setting out his views on the subject. Lenin wrote on this letter: "Comrade Chicherin, I am wholly in favour of negotiations. Hasten them. Think over what more should be done for directives to Krasnoshchokov." (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 448.)

An inter-departmental commission of representatives of the Supreme Economic Council, the People's Commissariat for Foreign Affairs and the People's Commissariat for Foreign Trade, was set up to conduct the negotiations. In agreeing to offer a concession to Vanderlip's syndicate, the Soviet Government aimed not only at establishing mutually profitable co-operation with American business circles, but also at normalising relations between Soviet Russia and the U.S.A. In a letter to the Vanderlip syndicate on November 1, 1920, Chicherin pointed out: "Independently of the signing of a concession agreement, the Government of the Russian Socialist Federative Soviet Republic assumes that the agreement will come into force only on the resumption of normal de facto relations between the Government of Russia and the Government of the U.S.A., and on condition that such relations will be established before July 1, 1921." However, this condition was not fulfilled, hence the concession agreement with Vanderlip was not finalised and did not come into effect. p. 423

<sup>441</sup> This refers to the circular letter of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) drafted by Y. A. Preobrazhensky on the basis of his report dealing with signs of demoralisation in the Party. Commenting on this draft, Krestinsky wrote: "I consider that the reservation contained at the end of point V, which speaks of eliminating inequality in living conditions, 'in so far as they are not due to the requirements of the work', should be elaborated as a separate point or, perhaps, even as a separate section of the circular.

"The point is that the living conditions of gubernia Party and Soviet officials are very hard, especially now that we are carrying out transfers on a mass scale and tearing most comrades away from the places where they had all kinds of family connections and links with the countryside.

"The comrades are suffering hunger, and since, in addition, they are overworked, they very soon become exhausted and put out of action for a long time or permanently. It is essential to get the mass of Party members to recognise the need of establishing somewhat better, less famished conditions of life for the small number of active revolutionary cadres.

"If the above idea is sufficiently emphasised and elaborated in the circular, the last two lines of the draft, which very cautiously and not very intelligibly condemn demagoguery on the grounds of inequality, will become superfluous.

"In the discussion in the commission, Comrade Preobrazhensky did not deny the need to include in the circular the idea of a certain inevitable temporary inequality, but he somehow failed to make his point." (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 449.)

The Orgbureau's text of the letter from the C.C., R.C.P.(B.), "To All Party Organisations, to All Party Members", signed by Krestinsky, was sent to Lenin for approval. On this letter Lenin wrote that he agreed with the text and proposed the insertion in the letter of "a quotation from the Party programme to the effect that for the present there cannot be equality". This refers to clause 8 of the economic section of the programme. <sup>442</sup> On August 27, 1920, Orjonikidze received Lenin's letter, to which were appended extracts from a letter by A. S. Serafimovich, who in the summer of 1920 was in the Caucasus. Being misinformed about the political work of Party and administrative functionaries in the Caucasus, Serafimovich in his letter adduced a number of alleged facts casting a slur on the revolutionary activity of Orjonikidze, a member of the Revolutionary Military Council of the Caucasian Front. In returning these extracts to Lenin, Orjonikidze refuted all the accusations against him as being false and groundless.

On receiving this reply, Lenin wrote: "I think Sergo (=Orjonikidze) is incapable of lying." (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 450.) p. 423

The author of the article attacked the Food Commissariat for requisitioning the grain brought to Moscow by one of the departments of the People's Commissariat for Railways. Krestinsky proposed that the author of the article and the editors of Gudok should be censured for such impermissible publications. On September 1, 1920, the Politbureau of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) reprimanded Kolegayev and the editors of Gudok and warned the editors "on no account to allow publication of articles of a departmental-polemical nature aimed against the Supreme Economic Council, the People's Commissariat for Food or other Commissariats" (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 450). p. 424

The gist of Yakovlev's proposals was this: "A secret organisation of officers has been formed in Wrangel's army aimed at blowing up Wrangel from within and handing over his whole army to the Soviet government. In the organisation there are some thirty General Staff officers. The organisation intends to overthrow Wrangel and proclaim his army the Red Crimean Army under the command of Brusilov. The Russian Government is asked to give real guarantees of a full amnesty for the whole army without exception, and issue a corresponding proclamation by the Commander-in-Chief. As proof of the seriousness of the proposal, Yakovlev is prepared to give away the leaders of Wrangel's organisation operating in Soviet Russia with the aim... of preparing an armed uprising. Temporarily, until the arrival of Brusilov, the command of the Red Crimean Army will be entrusted to General Staff officer Sokolovsky, leader of the conspi-

<sup>459</sup> The reference is to the Thirteenth Congress of the Czechoslovak Social-Democratic Workers' Party, held in Prague from September 25 to 28, 1920. The Congress was preceded by a struggle between the revolutionary wing in the party—the Marxist Left wing—and the Right-wing reformist leadership. The Congress was attended by 321 persons, all supporters of the Left wing. At that time the party had more than 4,800 functioning organisations and almost 500,000 members. The Left wing at the Congress took over the leadership of the party and formed an independent party entitled the Czechoslovak Social-Democratic Workers' Party (Left). It included most of the members of the former Social-Democratic Party. The Congress condemned the splitting policy of the Right wing, expressed agreement with the conditions for affiliation to the Communist International, and instructed the new Executive Committee to conduct negotiations for joining the Communist International. The reformist leaders took the course of splitting the party and in November 1920 held their own Congress. p. 435

Krzhizhanovsky returned the Bulletin to Lenin the same day with a note that the last numbers of the Bulletin were to be issued in the very near future "in each of which a plan will be given for small-scale (immediate) and large-scale electrification of the main areas". Simultaneously with drawing up the electrification programme, work had also been started on its implementation. In particular, Krzhizhanovsky reported that in the Central Industrial Region fairly good progress was being made in the repair and socialisation of power stations (especially near Moscow). It was necessary now, he wrote, "to link the operation of these stations with the electrification of local agriculture on a wide scale. In this regard, too, I can inform you of something of immediate practical interest".

Markings by Lenin occur also on p. 45 of the Bulletin, where he side-lined, underscored and marked "N.B." the sentence "the consumption of fuel by the railways will be 2½-3 times as much with steam traction as it would be with electric traction". - <sup>469</sup> By a decision of the Politbureau of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) on October 11, 1920, N. I. Bukharin was directed to speak at a meeting

The document published here was Lenin's reply to a note from Bukharin, who announced his refusal to speak at the Congress on the grounds that disagreements between him and Lenin were possible on certain questions of proletarian culture, for example, on point 4 of Lenin's draft resolution "On Proletarian Culture" (see present edition, Vol. 31, pp. 316-17). The Communist group at the First Congress of Proletcult was proposed to adopt an organisational resolution subordinating the central and local Proletcult organisations to the People's Commissariat for Education. This resolution was drawn up on the lines of Lenin's express directives and was unanimously adopted by the Proletcult Congress. p. 445

<sup>470</sup> In an article "On the Struggle Within the Italian Socialist Party", written on November 4, 1920, Lenin quotes from a speech by Treves at a congress of the Italian reformists, which opened on October 11, 1920, in Reggio Emilia (see present edition, Vol. 31, pp. 382-83). p. 445

<sup>471</sup> In an effort to pit Turkey against Soviet Russia and to wreck negotiations for establishing friendly relations, the Entente leaders instigated Dashnak Armenia to attack Turkey. Dreaming of creating a "Great Armenia" which would include almost half of Asia Minor, the Dashnak government began military operations against Turkey on September 24, 1920. In this war the Dashnak army suffered defeat after defeat, while the advancing Turkish troops laid waste to the land, chased out the civilian population and organised massacres of Armenians. The war brought Armenia to the brink of complete ruin and total extermination of the population. At the beginning of October 1920, the C.C., C.P.(B.) of Armenia issued a call to the workers and peasants to overthrow the hated Dashnak yoke and establish Soviet power.

In connection with Orjonikidze's report of the probable resignation of the Dashnak government of Armenia and of the possibility of power passing to the Communists, Chicherin proposed: 1) to agree with the opinion of the C.C., C.P.(B.) of Armenia and the Caucasian Bureau of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) on the necessity of decisive action for establishing Soviet power in Armenia, 2) to afford Armenia political help in halting the further advance of the Turks, and 3) to support the new, Soviet government.

On October 14, 1920, the Politbureau of the C.C., R.C.P.(B.) adopted Chicherin's proposals.

Soviet power in Armenia was established on November 29, 1920, as the result of an armed uprising of the working people. For Lenin's message of greetings to the Chairman of the Revolutionary Military Committee of Armenia, see present edition, Vol. 31, p. 437. p. 446

sent to Italy. On October 14, 1920, the Politbureau reaffirmed its previous decision and pointed out to Manuilsky that it was due to his ill-health. p. 446

473 Written on a report from Commander-in-Chief S. S. Kamenev to the Chairman of the Revolutionary Military Council of the Republic. He proposed that the armistice with Poland should be utilised for the speediest rout of Wrangel's whiteguard forces. At the end of point 2 of Kamenev's practical proposals—on using part of the forces and resources of the Western Front for military operations in the south of the country “without touching those of the South-Western Front”—Lenin made an insertion mark “ $\sqrt{x}$ ” with a footnote: “Add  $\sqrt{x}$  until the armistice becomes an actual fact.”

Under Lenin's proposal for approving the report of the Commander-in-Chief is a note by Krestinsky: “Agreed. N. K.” and the signatures of Stalin and Bukharin. p. 447

474 Written by Lenin on the minutes of an inter-departmental conference held on October 14, 1920. This conference considered it necessary to transform the Supreme Economic Council into a People's Commissariat for Industry and to set up an extra-departmental body under the Council of Labour and Defence for co-ordinating economic plans for production, transport, supplies, fuel, foreign trade, labour and currency distribution.

Enclosed with Lenin's note was the text of the decision of the Ninth Congress of the R.C.P.(B.) “On Organisational Links Between the Economic Commissariats”. This decision states: “The Congress instructs the Central Committee in the immediate future to work out a system of organisational links between the Supreme Economic Council and other Commissariats (the People's Commissariats for Food, Railways, Agriculture) that are directly linked with the economy in their daily work, with the aim of ensuring complete unity in carrying out the economic plan endorsed by the Party Congress.” On the document are the following notes and signatures of those members of the Central Committee who read Lenin's note: “Read. N. Krestinsky”, “Read and agree with Lenin. L. Serebryakov”, “Agree with Comrade Lenin's proposal. F. Dzerzhinsky”, “Read, agree with Vladimir Ilyich. A. Andreyev”. In the hand of the secretary is written: “Comrade Tomsy has read it. Has telephoned that he fully agrees with Comrade Lenin.” (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 459.) p. 448

475 The note to Sklyansky was written on a telegram from A. G. Schlichter, Chairman of the Tambov Gubernia Executive Committee and Chairman of the Gubernia Military Council, who requested that reinforcements be sent to the units of the Red Army operating against bandit groups in Tambov Gubernia.

On October 19, Lenin wrote a note to V. S. Kornev, Commander of the Forces of Internal Security, on the need for the speediest liquidation of the counter-revolutionary outbreak in Tambov Gubernia, and he asked to be informed what measures were being taken (see present volume, Document 727). On October 23 a report was received from Kornev on the measures taken to put down the revolt in Tambov Gubernia. p. 448

<sup>476</sup> This refers to the comments on a memorandum received by the Council of People's Commissars from V. D. Batyushkov, head of the State Agricultural Museum, member of the Council and Chairman of the Board of the All-Russia Chamber of Agriculture and G. Frolov, member of the Chamber, "On the Use of Mechanical Power (Tractors) in Performing Agricultural Work (Ploughing and Harvesting)".

See also Lenin's additions to the draft decree on an integrated tractor service (Lenin Miscellany XXXV, p. 164). p. 450

<sup>477</sup> On October 26, 1920, the Council of People's Commissars discussed a draft decision on the sale abroad of antiques and endorsed the following decision: "1) To direct the People's Commissariat for Foreign Trade to arrange for the collection of antiques selected by the Petrograd Commission of Experts and to fix a bonus for their most rapid and profitable sale abroad. 2) The question of the quantity and standard of rations for the Commission of Experts to be referred to the Workers' Food Supply Commission for decision. If agreement with Comrade Lezhava is not reached, the matter to be submitted to the Council of People's Commissars. 3) To instruct the People's Commissariat for Foreign Trade to examine urgently the question of setting up a similar commission in Moscow and, if this is found advisable, to organise it." (Collected Works, Fifth Ed., Vol. 51, p. 462.)

The Commission of Experts recommended sending the well-known antique expert, M. M. Savostin, and the artist I. N. Rakitsky, a member of the Commission, to European markets for antiques—in Paris, London, Florence and Rome—for establishing connections with the leading antique dealers in the West, ascertaining precise prices of antiques, and arranging auctions. p. 452

<sup>478</sup> Lenin wrote this note to the Narrow Council of People's Commissars on a letter from Maxim Gorky. In view of the fact that the Petrograd Commune was proposing to requisition the products which had been supplied by permission of the People's Commissariat for Food to the Petrograd Commission for Improving Scientists' Living Conditions, Maxim Gorky, Chairman of the Commission, asked the Council of People's Commissars to pass a decision stating: "Products supplied by gubernia food committees, with the permission of the People's Commissariat for Food, to the Petrograd Commission for Improving Scientists' Living Conditions are not to be requisitioned by the Petrograd Commune nor to be counted by the latter as part of the ration quota endorsed by the Council of People's Commissars for Petrograd scientists."

- 479 Written on a letter from Gorky saying that the State Publishing House had ordered. 1) Two books from Remezov in Switzerland: Fabre, The Life of Insects, Klein, Wonders of the World. Twenty thousand copies of each. 2) Biographies of musicians and artists, and cut-out alphabets from Brodsky in Stockholm. Total value of the contract: 1,200 000 gold rubles. p. 453
- 480 Written in connection with a secret agreement between the bourgeois Latvian Government and agents of Wrangel for a joint attack against Soviet Russia. On September 26, 1920, when Count von Palen, a well-known agent of Wrangel's, was crossing the German frontier, letters were taken from him addressed to Savinkov, Wrangel's agent in Warsaw. These letters reported that a secret meeting had taken place in Riga between a representative of Savinkov and representatives of the Latvian Government and Supreme Command of the Latvian army, at which agreement was reached on joint action with Wrangel aimed at overthrowing the Soviet Government and re-establishing a single indivisible Russia, in return for which Wrangel promised independence for Poland and Latvia. The confiscated letters also reported that soldiers for Wrangel's army were being recruited in Latvia, that a recruiting office receiving financial support from Savinkov was operating almost openly in Riga and transporting soldiers on Latvian steamships. p. 454
- 481 The People's Commissariat for Foreign Trade replied to Lenin that on October 28 and 29 a meeting had been held at the Chief Gold Board with representatives of the Urals and Siberia, at which practical measures were discussed for developing the gold and platinum industry. p. 454
- 482 On October 27, 1920, Lenin received a delegation from a Party Conference of Alexandrov Uyezd (Vladimir Gubernia), consisting of Comrades Ratnikov, Rybakov, Romanov and Glazunov, who informed him of abuses at the Troitsk Equipment Works and of the difficulty Party members had bringing the matter to the attention of the centre and obtaining its speedy investigation. The letter to the Vladimir Gubernia Party Committee was the result of Lenin's conversation with this delegation. p. 455
- 483 On October 30, 1920, following a report by Lenin and Milyutin, the Council of People's Commissars adopted a decision "On the Hydraulic Method of Peat Extraction". Hydraulic peat work, wherever carried out, was acknowledged to be especially urgent and of extremely great state importance. The Board of the Supreme Economic Council was instructed to organise under the Chief Peat Committee a Department for Hydraulic Peat Extraction (Gidrotorf), with R. E. Klasson as responsible director. Concrete measures were endorsed for developing work on hydraulic peat extraction. p. 458
- 484 The document is the reply to a telegram from Frunze sent to Lenin on October 26, 1920, from Apostolovo station, in which Frunze reported: "I have just given the final order for a general offensive.

The decisive days will be October 30 and 31 and November 1. I have no doubt about the rout of the enemy's main forces. They will not succeed in withdrawing beyond the isthmuses by the time we strike. I consider that the chance of an immediate capture of the isthmuses is not more than one in a hundred." (M. V. Frunze na frontakh grazhdanskoi voiny. Sbornik dokumentov, Moscow, 1941, p. 415.) p. 459

In the Central Party Archives of the Institute of Marxism-Leninism of the C.C., C.P.S.U. there is a note of Lenin's—an instruction to the secretary—reading: "Make a note of the content of this paper and the date (30/X), and give the original to Popov." On this note there is a remark by the secretary: "Simply make a copy. Give the copy to Lenin for the book."

The note on the typewritten copy reads: "Original given to Popov 30/X." p. 459
